Three Lakes plan revived by builder

by JOE SWICKARD

The long-dormant Three Lakes Country Club housing development, originally proposed by former Wheeling Township political boss James Stavros, has been resurrected.

Revised plans for the 238-acre project built around a proposed semi-private 18-hole golf course were presented to the Arlington Heights plan department this week for study.

The plans, still in a preliminary state, call for about 450 housing units, most of them single-family homes. An eight-acre commercial section is included in plans for the site along the future Lake-Cook Road extension between Arlington Heights and Schaefer roads.

THE SITE WAS the subject of village hearings for several years in the late 1960s when Stavros, who pled guilty in 1974 to extortion, tax evasion and perjury charges, and his brother August proposed about 900 housing units. Approval was granted for construction in 1969, but work was never begun.

The new development, designed by planning consultant Rolf C. Campbell of Lake Bluff, will feature houses in the $80,000 to $100,000 price range. The houses reportedly will have a more rural setting than most village subdivisions and most of them, as well as the apartment units, will face the golf course.

Berg clears Howlett in steel case

by United Press International

A Cook County judge Wednesday cleared Michael Howlett, the Democratic candidate for governor, of conflict-of-interest charges concerning his controversial part-time job with Sun Steel Corp.

"My client is vindicated," said Howlett's attorney, Don H. Reuben, after Circuit Court Judge Raymond K. Berg announced his decision.

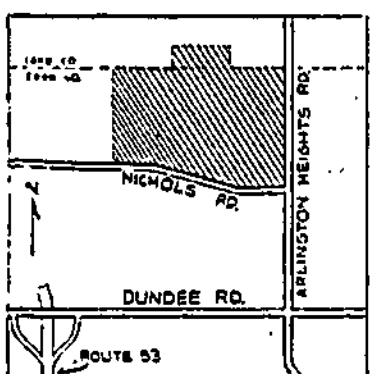

Berg rejected as "erroneous and unlawful" the conflict charges contained in a report ordered by Atty. Gen. William Scott.

IN THE REPORT, former Illinois Supreme Court Justice Marvin F. Burt said Howlett had put himself in a "posture of conflict" by holding a consultant's job with Sun Steel while serving as chairman of the state's vehicle recycling board, which deals with scrap iron.

"If a posture of conflict were held to be the standard, all public officials would have been, are or will be, in conflict," Berg ruled.

During the primary campaign, Howlett acknowledged he had held a $19,000-a-year job as consultant to Sun Steel, a Chicago Heights firm, for 15 years. The period of the alleged conflict stretched from Sept. 14, 1973, LONG-DORMANT plans for a 238-acre housing development built around an 18-hole golf course have been revived.

The golf course will be 6,650 yards long and will have a par-71 rating. A clubhouse for the course is part of the plans for the development. The semi-private golf course would be the first in the village.

The Arlington Heights Park District is holding referendum Oct. 2 to issue $1.5 million in bonds to finance the construction of a public golf course on the site of the former Nike Base, Central and Wilke roads.

WHEN THE ORIGINAL Three Lakes project was considered by the village, the Stavros brothers owned the land and were to be the developers.

Joe Kesler, village planner, said it was his understanding that the property is still owned by the Stavros family and that the brothers will have a part interest in the new development with other investors.

Stavros and Campbell could not be reached for comment on the new project.

Girl, 17, injured by hit-and-run car

A hit-and-run driver seriously injured a Schaumburg girl on a bicycle Wednesday night, and then fled to the Northwest Tollway eastbound at speeds of up to 100 m.p.h., with Citizens' Band radio operators and police in pursuit.

Stacy Detwiler, 17, of 1027 Duxbury Ln., Schaumburg, suffered multiple facial injuries with possible fractures when the bicycle she was riding on Springguth Road north of Weatherfield Way was struck by a blue and white pickup truck at 9 p.m. Wednesday. She was listed in fair condition.

The truck fled north up Weatherfield Way to Bode Road, Bode to Barrington Road, and Barrington to the Northwest Tollway, where Citizens' Band radio operators reported his position to police.

Police lost the truck between Arlington Heights Road and the Tri-State Tollway.

Ms. Detwiler, meanwhile, was transported by Schaumburg firefighters to Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, while police used a name engraved in her high school class ring to track down her parents.

Stavros goes on parole today

by TONI GINETTI

James Stavros resumes life as a free man today for the first time in more than two years.

The former Wheeling political king, whose reign by extortion led to a federal indictment, a guilty plea and four-year prison sentence, was released from a Chicago halfway house to begin parole.

Stavros, 46, had been assigned to the Community Treatment Center, 825 S. Wabash St., Chicago, since July 1 while awaiting parole. During that time Stavros participated in a work release program, returning to the facility in the evenings.

ROBERT THOMPSON, director of the Community Treatment Center, Wednesday said Stavros would be released and placed under the supervision of the U.S. Parole Commission.

Stavros' probation officer, Ron Kunke, said Wednesday he would meet with the former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman "shortly" to determine how often Stavros will report to him.

"He's listed some employment," Kunke added, but he said the information was "confidential" and declined to discuss it.

Court documents filed earlier this year in U.S. District Court by Stavros' attorney Thomas Foran cited employment as owner and manager of the J & J Farm near Woodstock as a proposed condition of parole.

STAVROS WILL report to probation authorities until the termination of his four-year sentence imposed in June 1974 by U.S. District Judge Hubert L. Will.

Stavros was the principle target of a 1973 U.S. Justice Dept. investigation into shakedown of developers in Wheeling. He was indicted Jan. 31, 1974 along with three other village officials on charges of extortion, perjury and income tax evasion.

He served two years of the four-year sentence at the Federal Correctional Institution at Sandstone, Minn. Repeated efforts by Stavros to win parole were fruitless until June 17 when the U.S. Parole Commission agreed to his conditional release.

U.S. Justice Dept. officials who prosecuted the case against him described Stavros as a hardened strong-arm boss who often threatened bodily harm to developers who did not meet extortion demands.

Court records filed in December by Foran indicate Stavros owes some $17,500 in unpaid taxes for 1969 and 1970.

Internal Revenue Service spokesmen were unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Dist. 59 fights lower home values

The Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education will support a group of school officials working to block the county assessor's plan to lower assessed valuation of homes.

Arthur Perry, assistant superintendent of planning, said at a board meeting Monday the plan by County Assessor Thomas Tully would be a "considerable blow" to Dist. 59 if passed by the county board of commissioners.

Tully has proposed that the assessment for homes be lowered from 22 per cent of the market value to 16 per cent to curb increasing assessed valuations in the county. A committee of county school officials working through the Illinois Assn. of School Boards is opposing the proposal at hearings Thursday by the county board.

PERRY SAID THE plan would hurt districts dependent upon taxes from single-family homes because it would prevent an increase in assessed valuation. The stabilization of the assessed valuation would prevent those districts from receiving additional revenue from property taxes.

However, Perry said the effect of Tully's plan should be offset partially by an increase in the multiplier, a complex formula that equalizes assessed valuation rates throughout the state.

The proposal could cost Dist. 59 between $440,000 and $450,000 per year in tax revenue, Perry said.

Perry said the tax loss could be expected even though about 60 per cent of the district's tax base comes from business and industry.

HE SAID HE IS concerned because the plan would "shift a greater tax burden" to business and industry, which "could be seen as an invitation to industry to locate elsewhere."

The board also approved maintaining the orchestra program in the ele-

Columbo-DeLuca
nuptial plans OK'd

A Cook County Circuit Court Judge has approved the marriage plans of Patricia Columbo and Frank DeLuca, accused slayers of an Elk Grove Village family. However, matrimony for the couple likely will have to wait until January, said a spokesman for the Cook County Marriage Bureau. Judge Richard Fitzgerald Wednesday approved DeLuca's request that he and Miss Columbo be married while incarcerated at Cook County Jail in Chicago. But the next batch of marriage licenses to be approved for county jail inmates likely will not be given out until January 1977, said the marriage bureau spokesman. Miss Columbo, 20, and DeLuca, 39, a divorced father of five, are accused of the May 4 murder of Frank, Mary and 13-year-old Michael Columbo in their home at 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

Girl hurt by hit-run driver

A Schaumburg girl suffered serious injuries Wednesday night after the bicycle she was riding was struck by a hit-and-run driver at 9:15 p.m. at Springinguth Road north of Weathersfield Way in Schaumburg. Police said Stacy Detwiler was taken to Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, where she was reported being X-rayed in the emergency room of the hospital late Wednesday. Police at 10:30 p.m. were searching for the driver of a white-over-blue pickup truck last seen fleeing at speeds of up to 100 m.p.h. east from Barrington Road on the Northwest Tollway. Citizens' Band radio operators reportedly were aiding police in tracking down the fleeing vehicle.

Helvie loses bid for teaching job

A former Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education member who recently resigned to seek a teaching post in a district school has lost a bid for the classroom position. Lynne Helvie resigned from the board in August to become eligible for a seventh grade language arts teaching post at Lively Junior High School. The board, however, voted 4-2 Tuesday to reject an administration recommendation to hire Mrs. Helvie, who said she was "extremely disappointed" with the action. In voting against the administration recommendation, board members questioned the "propriety" of Mrs. Helvie's request.

Church fire was arson: probers

Elk Grove Village investigators are convinced Sunday's garage fire at the Elk Grove Wesleyan Church was deliberately set, but they are unsure whether a fire the same day at a nearby 7-Eleven food store was the work of an arsonist. The fire at the church was reported at 1:46 a.m. and the store fire at 555 Landmeier Rd. was reported at 11:33 p.m. A joint police and fire department investigation Wednesday found that an accelerant was used to start the church fire, which destroyed a garage and $2,000 to $3,000 worth of toys used in the church's preschool and nursery programs.

Train rams Oregon school bus, 2 dead

LAFAYETTE, Ore. (UPI) — Two young girls were killed and 36 other children were injured Wednesday when a school bus driver, apparently blinded by the morning sun, drove into the path of a railroad engine and caboose.

School officials said the bus was carrying 38 youngsters bound for their second day of classes at local elementary and junior high schools. The bus driver was also injured.

Three deaths had been reported by the school district superintendent, but only two deaths were confirmed. A third student was reported in extremely critical condition suffering from massive head injuries.

Hospitals in nearby McMinnville and Newberg were filled with the injured students. Some of the youngsters had to be taken to hospitals in Salem and Portland, about 35 miles from the crash site. Passenger cars were pressed into service when not enough ambulances were available to transport the injured.

"The engine hit the bus right at the front door and threw the bus up against the side of the train and dragged it down the road," said Herbert Cline, who witnessed the crash.

Cline told police the bus "made a rolling stop" before going onto the track, which is marked with stop signs on both sides.

The Southern Pacific engineer, Amos Timmerman, said he saw the sun shining off the side of the bus and thought the driver might have been blinded.

The crossing is in a clear area and under normal circumstances visibility extends to about 150 yards.

Wanda Stafford, 14, one of the students on the bus, said the bus driver, Rudy Baker, 53, McMinnville, said the children on the bus saw the train approaching. "When we all hollered 'train!' it hit us," she said. "Everybody started screaming and hollering. When I got up, everybody was trying to get out. The back door had been torn open."

Wanda, who was in the third seat from the back of the bus, said she made her way to the front of the bus after the crash to see if the driver was injured. He told her, "I didn't see it. I didn't see it. I'm really sorry, but I didn't see it," she reported.

Timmerman said the train was traveling about 25 miles per hour with its whistle blowing and the headlight turned on. He said he saw the bus pull to a stop and then pull ahead into the path of the train.

Doctors reported several of the children suffered major head injuries, while others suffered only minor injuries and were released from the hospitals after treatment.

THE SCHOOL BUS THAT crashed into railroad engine rests near crossing in Lafayette, Ore. Thursday. There were 38 children and the driver aboard when the crash took place. Two children were killed, and 36 children and the driver injured. The bus was on its way to McMinnville, Ore., to take the children to their second day of school when the tragedy occurred.

Common cold drugs remain on market

The government Wednesday approved over-the-counter sales of 10 drugs designed to temporarily relieve the coughing and sneezing of the common cold and such allergies as hay fever. The Food and Drug Administration announced it was removing — at least for the next year or two — the prescription requirement for 10 of 14 ingredients recommended for unrestricted sales by one of its advisory panels. New cough and cold products containing the ingredients will be on the market this fall, FDA officials said.

The Health Research Group, a consumer organization affiliated with Ralph Nader, called the FDA ruling "a major concession to the mammoth... cough and cold empire" and said almost all such drugs are of unproven safety and effectiveness.

Long-awaited aviation policy unveiled

The United States, saying it plans to end unfair discrimination against U.S. airlines flying abroad, issued a long-awaited new international aviation policy Wednesday that opens the door to federal subsidies for them. The policy statement, signed by President Ford and presented by Transportation Secretary William Coleman and Deputy Secretary of State Charles Robinson, says there is no need for two U.S. carriers to fly the same international route to provide adequate competition. It recognizes the competition posed by foreign carriers, which often are government subsidized.

'No reason for UAW strike at Ford'

Ford Motor Co. Chairman Henry Ford II said Wednesday he sees no reason for the United Auto Workers to strike his company next Tuesday. But he added he is opposed in principle to a key union contract demand for more paid days off. "I'd rather see the economy grow and have the jobs come with the growth in the economy rather than making people take time off and increasing it that way," Ford told a 1977-model car preview news conference. He said: "You can't pay people for not working and have the economy grow. Auto workers already have 33 paid days off a year."

Ford rejects Carter abortion link

With Jimmy Carter being haunted on the campaign trail by anti-abortion demonstrators, some carrying children's coffins, President Ford Wednesday said he backs the Republican platform favoring efforts to end legal abortions. Ford, during a hastily called news conference on the South Lawn of the White House, rejected efforts by Carter to link both contenders with the same position on the issue.

Ford said he "subscribes to the Republican platform that 'supports the efforts of those who seek enactment of a constitutional amendment to prohibit abortion.'" The Democrats adopted a plank opposed to outlawing such operations.

Palestinians charge Israeli occupation

Palestinians charged Wednesday that Israeli forces had occupied five villages in south Lebanon. A spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization said that Israeli troops had set up fortified positions and moved armored vehicles into the villages of Qlaya, Rmelsh, Ain Ebel, Debel and Alma al-Shanb. Several leftist newspapers reported similar information which they said came from travelers from the south. The reports followed a warning by Israel last week that it was considering "protecting" Christian villagers in the south after a clash between Palestinians and Christians from Ain Ebel.

Soviet pilot due in U.S. today

Soviet pilot Viktor Ivanovich Belenko played chess with his guards in jail Wednesday while Japanese engineers swarmed over the top secret MIG25 jet fighter in which he fled his homeland in a bid for refuge in America. A government spokesman said the 29-year-old Soviet Air Force lieutenant would be turned over to U.S. officials Thursday, one day later than previously announced, for a flight to promised asylum in the United States.

Ford: Africa peace effort needed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford said Wednesday the United States "must now make a major effort" to mediate peace in southern Africa because racial warfare there could threaten world peace.

But he stressed he would not try to impose any peace plan on the Africans, and said he has not decided whether to send Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to Africa next week even though Kissinger made "good progress" in his talks with South Africa's Prime Minister John Vorster.

"The process that is now beginning is an extremely important one," Ford told a White House news conference.

"It is extremely complicated. There is no guarantee of success. But I believe the United States must now make a major effort because it is the right thing to do."

"It is in our national interest and it is in the interest of world peace."

But he said that although the United States "is offering its good offices as an intermediary... (it) cannot solve by itself these complicated problems" of black African demands for majority rule in white-ruled Rhodesia and South African-run Namibia.

Ford said Kissinger, if and when he begins "shuttle diplomacy" among the Africans, would "present ideas" on how the conflicts may be solved, "but we are not... trying to develop a specific American plan" for peace.

Just before the news conference, Ford conferred at length with Kissinger on the conferences he had with Vorster and European leaders earlier this week.

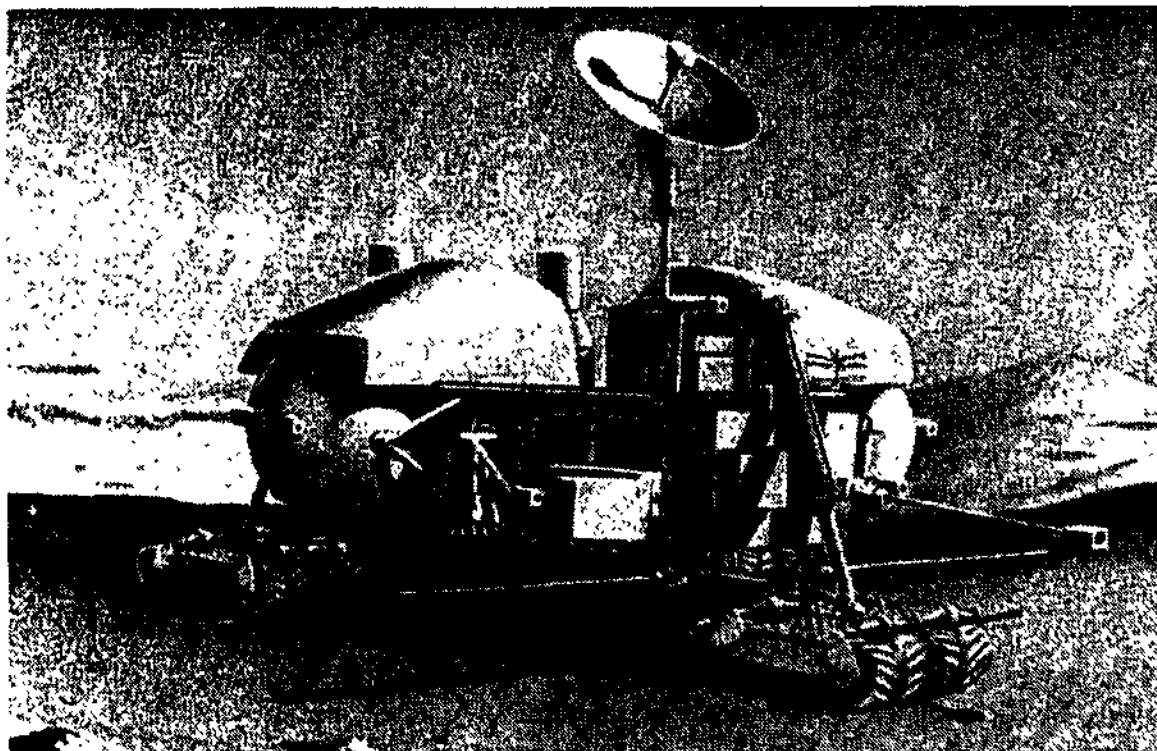

Ford said he would not decide on whether to dispatch Kissinger to Africa until he hears Assistant Secretary of State William Schaufele's report on conferences with black African leaders.

In Cape Town, meantime, police waded into a crowd of colored children and teen-agers singing hymns in a park in the all-white downtown area, driving them away with clubs. Whites booed the police action.

In the black ghetto of Soweto, black militants set fire to a Zulu hostel, burning three residents to death in renewed all-black feuding. The three deaths brought to 306 the number killed in 11 weeks of racial strife.

The racial violence in the two cities came as Police Minister Jimmy Kruger vowed, "The white man in South Africa is not to be sacrificed... not prepared to surrender parliament in Cape Town to them (blacks)."

$2,000 for Dole report is wrong —oil lobbyist

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Gulf Oil Lobbyist Claude Wild Jr. said Wednesday he was wrong in claiming he gave Sen. Robert Dole $2,000 in 1970. One report suggested the money went to Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe.

Wild's admission squelched one of two reports of alleged Gulf political donations to the Republican vice presidential candidate, but Wild made no mention of the second allegation involving a $5,000 or $6,000 payment in 1973. Dole's spokesman again denied that report.

Dole accepted Wild's apology for his mistaken claim on the $2,000 and said, "Let's get on with the campaign."

NBC News said it had learned that Kleppe's name was on the stub of the $2,000 1970 check Wild originally said he had written to provide Dole cash to disperse to other political candidates.

Legal twist enters Ehrlichman case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John D. Ehrlichman, former No. 2 man in the White House under Richard Nixon, apparently will remain free until the Supreme Court acts on an appeal of his conviction in the Pentagon Papers case.

But his own lawyers expressed uncertainty Wednesday about Ehrlichman's position in the courts.

District Judge Gerhard Gesell Tuesday revoked Ehrlichman's bond and ordered him to surrender to federal authorities by Sept. 17 and start serving his sentence for ordering the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

A short time later, in a ruling made public Wednesday, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals stayed the effect of its own ruling last May confirming Ehrlichman's conviction.

Sources told UPI Gesell did not know of the appeals court action when he issued his bail revocation order, which remains in effect although Ehrlichman's lawyers could ask the judge to reconsider in light of the appeals court's apparent willingness to let their client remain free.

A jury convicted Ehrlichman in July, 1974, of violating the civil rights of Dr. Lewis J. Fielding, a Los Angeles psychiatrist who had records on Ellsberg — a target of the Nixon administration because he leaked to news media the Pentagon Papers on the Vietnam War.

Ehrlichman gave the order for the White House "plumbers" to break into Fielding's office in September, 1971.

The appeals court action blocked delivery to the district court of its own ruling last May affirming the conviction. Under federal procedural rules, this would keep Ehrlichman free until the Supreme Court acts on his appeal — if it is filed at the high court by Sept. 16.

Still in question was the impact of Gesell's order revoking bond and ordering Ehrlichman's surrender.

"The case is in a rather unusual position," said Ehrlichman's Washington lawyer, Stuart Stiller. "We're working on it and think we'll have to file something else — either asking Judge Gesell for reconsideration or appealing to the court of appeals."

But Stiller said the appeals court apparently is willing to let Ehrlichman remain free until the Supreme Court acts on his appeal.

Ehrlichman's lawyers said the appeal would be filed by the 16th, and possibly by this weekend. The Supreme Court does not convene its new term until Oct. 4, and since the Watergate Special Prosecutor's office has at least 60 days to reply to the appeal, Ehrlichman is likely to remain free until Thanksgiving even if his appeal ultimately is rejected.

Ehrlichman was found guilty in July, 1974, of ordering White House "plumbers" to break into the office of Dr. Lewis J. Fielding in an attempt to obtain Ellsberg's psychiatric records. The break-in occurred Sept. 3, 1971.

Ford-Carter debate set in Philadelphia

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford and Jimmy Carter will meet in the first of three 1976 campaign debates Sept. 23 in a Philadelphia theater that opened its doors in the waning days of Thomas Jefferson's presidency.

The Walnut Street Theater, in use since Feb. 2, 1809, will be the scene of the first joint appearance of major party presidential candidates since the Nixon-Kennedy meetings of 1960.

The first Ford-Carter appearance, to run 90 minutes starting at 8:30 p.m. CDT, will cover domestic and economic issues. A panel of three reporters will question each candidate in turn, with time for follow-up questions and comments by one candidate on the answer of his opponent.

The candidates, however, will not directly address each other as in a formal debate.

Dates and places for the other debates have not been set.

Spiro's successor on trial

• Marvin Mandel, who succeeded Spiro T. Agnew eight years ago and became one of the most powerful chief executives in Maryland history, went on trial Wednesday on racketeering and mail fraud charges. He said he felt confident of vindication. Jury selection was expected to last through Friday.

• Former Army Lt. William L. Calley, who was convicted of murdering 22 Vietnamese civilians, said Wednesday he favors blanket amnesty for those who dodged military service during the Vietnam war.

• Former Supreme Court Justice William Douglas is expected to remain for a few days in the recovery room at Walter Reed Army Medical Center so the results of an operation to repair a broken hip can be watched closely. Douglas will be 78 next month.

• Jack LaLanne, owner of a string of health clubs and nationally televised exercise instructor, this week rehearsed for a 62nd birthday swim by trying to swim 100 yards in the Long Beach, Calif. harbor, bound hand and foot and towing 13 rowboats from a rope around his waist, including one loaded with reporters. He didn't make it. A 10-knot wind and strong currents carried him backward for 10 minutes — then he gave up. But he still has birthday plans to tow the same 13 boats, loaded with 76 persons — including motorcycle daredevil Evel Knievel — for two miles sometime in mid-October. "I'm not strong enough to do it right now," he said, "but that's what life's all about — a challenge."

• Maria Pecor, 14, has been playing soccer with her three older brothers for years, and now she wants a chance to follow in their footsteps. Because she's a girl, however, she has been denied a tryout with the South Burlington (Vt.) High School soccer team. Maria's parents are expected to trigger the machinery for a possible legal battle by filing a formal grievance with school officials. Federal regulations require public schools to offer equal opportunities for girls to compete in non contact sports. The law doesn't mention soccer as a contact sport.

State Dems unite for Carter's sake

Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley and his long-time enemy Gov. Daniel Walker joined forces Wednesday to ensure Jimmy Carter won't get bogged down in party bickering on his first visit to Illinois today as the Democratic presidential nominee. Walker planned to greet the former Georgia governor upon his arrival at the state Capitol and all the Daley-backed state Democratic candidates were to attend the session, too.

From Springfield, Carter goes to Peoria for a rally at the Caterpillar plant organized by the United Auto Workers. He also puts in an appearance in the Chicago suburb of Evergreen Park, the congressional district of first-term Rep. Martin Russo, who is seeking reelection. But the highlight of the day is a torchlight parade in Chicago, featuring 100 floats, 15 marching bands, antique cars and fire trucks and a raft of Democratic politicians.

Norton Kay, Walker's press secretary, said the governor will not be in the parade, but will be at the Medinah Temple, where the parade ends and Carter speaks before the Democratic State Convention.

Alton's river lock gets initial OK

A controversial proposal by the Corps of Engineers to build a huge new lock on the Mississippi River at Alton, was approved tentatively Wednesday by a Senate subcommittee in Washington. Approval of the project, one of many in an omnibus water resources bill, was a defeat for Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., who had called instead for a study of the project. The water resources subcommittee of the Senate public works committee voted to approve the project as it moved ahead with the "marking up" of the Water Resources Development Act.

'Massive injuries killed pair'

Autopsies have shown that two Springfield men killed in a light plane crash near Salem died of massive internal injuries, Marlon County Coroner Ed Perry said Wednesday. The victims, identified as William Joseph Cosgrove, 20, the pilot, formerly of Las Vegas, Nev., and George D. Stoffel, 23, were on an aerial photography mission when the single engine Cessna 150 they were in crashed Tuesday afternoon in a wooded area two miles west of Salem, authorities said.

Metropolitan briefs

Oak Park teachers ordered to work

A Cook County circuit court judge Wednesday night ordered some 300 striking teachers in Oak Park School Dist. 97 to abandon their picket lines and resume classes today. Judge Samuel B. Epstein also ordered negotiations between the Oak Park Teachers Assn. and the district board to resume with the aid of a federal mediator. The judge banned picketing by the teachers for at least 14 days.

The strike in Oak Park forced the district Wednesday to cancel the first day of class for 6,200 students in 10 schools. Teacher walkouts continued Wednesday in two other suburban Chicago school districts.

Chicago schools opened on time Wednesday, and negotiations tentatively were scheduled to resume later in the day. A strike in Downers Grove Dist. 58 entered its second day, closing 14 schools and giving the district's 5,800 students an extended summer vacation. In Blue Island Dist. 218, schools were closed as a teachers' strike entered its fifth day.

$1 million bond in accident case

Bond was set at $1 million Wednesday for Tommie Winston, 26, Maywood, who allegedly fled from a three-car crash Monday in which four persons were killed — the worst traffic accident in the state during the three-day Labor Day weekend. Winston surrendered to Maywood police Tuesday. He is charged with four counts of reckless homicide, leaving the scene of a fatal accident and reckless driving. Winston allegedly ran away after his car skidded past a stop sign and crashed into a station wagon at Maywood Drive and 17th Avenue in the western suburb.

Daniels named Playboy president

Derick J. Daniels was named president and chief operating officer Wednesday of Playboy Enterprises Inc., Hugh Hefner's $200 million publishing and entertainment empire. In announcing the appointment of Daniels, a 47-year-old veteran newspaper man who leaves Knight-Ridder newspapers to join Playboy, Hefner said he will remain chairman and chief executive officer and will continue to set policy for the sprawling enterprise.

Playboy Enterprises, founded 23 years ago by Hefner with an initial investment of a few hundred dollars, has grown into a sprawling group operating Playboy Clubs, resort hotels, model agencies, and TV and motion picture production subsidiaries along with the flagship — Playboy Magazine.

Unit hearing demanded for state school-aid bill

Springfield, Ill. (UPI) — House Republicans Wednesday insisted Gov. Daniel Walker's plan to add $50 million to this year's school aid program be put through the normal, lengthy committee process, dashing hopes for quick passage of the package.

House minority leader James Washburn, R-Morris, led the GOP fight against Democratic attempts to have the bills heard today in an unusual "committee of the whole" where action could be expedited.

"I at least want a chance to see what these bills say," Washburn said. "They were just introduced and the Democratic majority should give us time to study them as they go through normal committee channels."

SENATE REPUBLICANS, meanwhile, agreed to have nearly identical bills heard this morning in a Senate committee of the whole. Senate Pres. Cecil Pardee, D-Chicago, said the upper chamber originally planned to work through the weekend, giving Walker's bills final passage Sunday. But after the House adjourned in acrimony, Pardee said the Senate will stay in session only through Friday.

Democratic legislative leaders appeared ready to follow Walker's suggestions down the line, leaving Republicans as the only stumbling block.

Washburn noted Walker's plan would increase state revenue by $95 million but earmark only $50 million of it for schools.

"Where is that other $45 million going?" Washburn asked. "Walker and the Democrats don't say."

Assistant House minority leader William Walsh, R-LaGrange Park, said the GOP generally favors two formula changes, letting wealthy districts tax themselves more and for giving Chicago part of its early-closing penalty.

Home owners are acquiring capitalist-minded affluence

By Donald F. Morton, President
Arlington Heights Federal Savings & Loan Assn.

A decade ago, the senior editor of a national magazine described development houses as "long lines of house-sized piggy banks, set upon dollar-green strips of grass."

The house-with-mortgage had become the surest way to translate current income, before it evaporated, into a family financial basis, he said.

This observation is even more true today than it was ten years ago.

Median value of owner-occupied single-family homes increased faster than the income of owners from 1970 to 1973, according to a report released jointly by the United States Department of Commerce and the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Median value of owner-occupied single-family homes rose 41 per cent between April, 1970 and October, 1973. Meanwhile, the median income of homeowners rose less than 19 per cent, according to the report.

The value of owner-occupied homes in 1973 was about twice the income of their owners. This ratio varied considerably, however, according to income level. For example, the value of homes in the low-income group (owners with incomes of less than $5,000) was four times or more than their annual income; many of these owners were elderly.

In the high-income group (owners with annual income of $15,000 or more), however, the value of homes was only 1.6 times median income.

Our own Arlington Federal survey corroborates the national figures, reflecting a 10 per cent average annual rise in home values in north-west suburban communities. About 400 homes in these suburbs which had been bought and resold between 1972 and 1976 were involved in the study. Only single-family detached dwellings which remained unchanged between purchase and sale were considered.

Variations in average annual increases in sales prices ranged from 9.2 per cent to 12.2 per cent for specific communities. They were as follows:

Mount Prospect 12.2%; Buffalo Grove 11.4%; Schaumburg 10.7%; Elk Grove Village 10.6%; Arlington Heights 10.4%; Palatine 10.1%; Hoffman Estates 9.3%; Lake Zurich, Barrington and Wauconda, 9.2%.

More than ever, we can agree with the national magazine editor in his observation that "the housing market, with its long-term rise in values, has done far more than the stock market, with its limited group of customers, to turn the American majority to capitalist-minded affluence."

Harper unit reports today in Lahti case

The final report of a Harper College special committee formed to investigate College Pres. Robert Lahti's alleged violations of college policy will be presented to the Harper Board of Trustees tonight.

Trustee Robert Rausch, the committee chairman, said he was working on the report Wednesday and plans to present it to the full board at its 8 p.m. meeting in the board room of the A building.

The committee was formed in July by Board Pres. Shirley Munson to investigate reports in The Herald and other local newspapers that Lahti misused college vehicles, flew first class in violation of college policy and engaged in unannounced meetings with members of the board.

ANOTHER COMMITTEE that Mrs. Munson formed to investigate possible conflict of interest on Lahti's part regarding his seat on the board of directors of the Bank of Elk Grove, where the college has accounts, reported earlier that Harper followed proper procedure in opening accounts and awarding certificates of deposit.

The board also will discuss whether it will spend approximately $100,000 to dredge the man-made lake on the Harper campus, Algonquin and Roselle roads, Palatine.

The lake was built so the college would be able to retain storm water on campus as required by the Metropolitan Sanitary District, said William J. Mann, vice president of administrative services.

Mann said the Lake has been filling with silt because construction work north of the college has caused erosion into a stream that empties into the lake.

Harper's architectural firm, Caudill, Rowlett and Scott, told the board last spring that dredging the lake would cost about $70,000, Mann said, but that estimate did not include the cost of overhead and profit.

Firms have submitted bids for the dredging operation in the $100,000 range, Mann said.

mentary schools this year. The board had discussed in June eliminating the string program in the elementary schools because of low student interest.

Last year, about 150 students were enrolled in orchestra compared to about 800 in band. The cost per student was estimated at $200 for the string program.

A citizens' committee studying the orchestra program recommended the program be retained in the elementary schools with recruitment starting in fourth grade. Students will be involved in more group orchestra sessions through the program's changes this year.

Purse-toting man robbed at track

An Oak Park man lost $140 cash to a purse-snatcher at Arlington Park Race Track, police reported Tuesday.

Police said James P. Smith told them he was riding down an elevator in the third-floor clubhouse area of the track at 5:30 p.m. Monday when he was bumped by another man.

Police said Smith later discovered his brown purse was missing.

Also reported taken in the robbery were a driver's license, Social Security card and a retired sergeant's star from the Chicago Police Dept.

Volunteers sought for flu clinics

Volunteers will be needed to man the swine flu inoculation centers in Wheeling Township when the vaccination program for the elderly and chronically ill begins Oct. 11.

Esther Rabchuk, swine flu inoculation coordinator, released the inoculation schedule Wednesday. She asked for volunteers, nonprofessional and professional personnel to work five-hour shifts at the centers.

Inoculations for persons over 65 and the chronically ill will be available by appointment at the Mount Prospect Senior Citizens Center, or without an appointment at various inoculation centers in the township.

Swine flu inoculations will be available Oct. 11, 13, 15, 18, 20, 22, and 25-27 at the senior citizens center, 600 S. See-Gwon Ave. by appointment only. Call 398-4567 to make an appointment.

ONE-DAY MASS inoculation clinics, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., with no appointment necessary, will be held Oct. 11 at Wheeling High School, 900 S. Elmhurst Rd., and Miner Junior High School, 1101 E. Miner St., Arlington Heights; Oct. 18, Prospect High School, 801 W. Kensington Rd.; Oct. 17, Prospect High School; Oct. 23, Wheeling High School; and Oct. 24, Miner Junior High School.

Mrs. Rabchuck said the shots will be available to the chronically ill of any age provided they present a ticket from their doctor certifying that they should have the bivalent flu shot.

The special tickets are now being sent to doctors in Cook County, Mrs. Rabchuch said. She noted that bivalent swine flu inoculations will not be available from private physicians until the mass inoculations have been completed.

The shots will not be given to anyone who has had any other kind of flu shot two weeks before the swine flu inoculation.

The bivalent shots, for the elderly and chronically ill, vaccinate against two strains of flu. Bivalent shots will be given with syringes. Monovalent shots, for healthy persons and those under 65, will be available to Wheeling Township residents at a later date.

Demoted Stevenson quits teaching position

A former top-level Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 administrator involved in a management shakeup last year has resigned from the district to accept a principal's position in Minnesota.

Erwin Steveason, former assistant superintendent, was demoted to a fifth-grade teaching position for the 1975-76 school year after top level reorganization in June 1975.

Supt. Roger Bardwell recommended the demotion shortly after he was hired as superintendent. He replaced James Ervli, ousted by the board in December 1974. Bardwell also served as acting superintendent from January to June 1975.

Stevenson said he viewed his reassignment last year as a "political demotion." He said no one "questioned my competence" and asked why he was not allowed a "graceful departure."

STEVENSON SAID his search for a superintendent's position was hampered by the shakeup. When he was being considered for a superintendent's post in Oak Park, he said he was told the district could not consider him because it would be a "politically bad move."

He said he had to "move out in a wide circle to find a position" and decided to return to his home state of Minnesota.

Stevenson has started work at Hilltop School in Mound, Minn., a Minneapolis suburb.

$1,855, safe taken from tennis club

Burglars stole a safe containing $1,833.58 in cash and checks from the office of an Arlington Heights tennis club, police reported Wednesday.

Police said the burglars entered the Court House Racket Club, 106 E. College Ave., between 11:30 p.m. Tuesday and 6:50 a.m. Wednesday, and stole a safe containing $608 in cash and checks, $1,196 in personal checks payable to the club and $31.58 petty cash.

Police reportedly found no signs of forced entry.

Chicago may get jump on shot plan

by KURT BAER

The City of Chicago may be able to start its swine flu vaccination program two or even three weeks before shots are available in the Northwest suburbs.

The city expects to start receiving vaccine between Oct. 4 and 6 and will then use several days to publicize the clinics before it starts giving the shots, said Dr. Olga Brolintsky, who is coordinating the swine flu inoculation program for the Chicago Public Health Dept.

Swine flu clinics in Northwest suburban Cook County are scheduled around the last weekend in October.

THE EARLIEST mass immunization clinic scheduled so far in the Northwest suburbs will open Oct. 27 at Harper College in Palatine.

Persons may get a shot at any public clinic. Residency is not a qualification because the swine flu shots are part of a $135 million federal program.

Some clinics that are being organized especially for elderly residents by townships may be open before the end of October. Dates for most of the township clinics have not yet been announced.

Brolintsky said Chicago has had an inoculation plan ready since July and is only waiting for the vaccine to arrive.

"THIS IS A tremendous program. We plan to use parks, senior citizen housing sites, some 60 to 65 other permanent sites, nutrition centers and a great number of other special clinics," she said.

Unlike the clinics in suburban Cook County that need 200 to 250 volunteers, the Chicago sites will be staffed with full-time city health department employees, Brolintsky said.

"We'll be ready to get going very fast. The Chicago Public Health Dept. is a big organization," she said.

Also aiding the city is the fact that it already owns the jet injector guns that will be used to administer the swine flu vaccine. Suburban Cook County will get its guns from the Illinois Dept. of Public Health for only a limited number of days because the guns are needed in other parts of the state.

Vaccine will come to Chicago in several shipments, Brolintsky said. The city plans to give shots until the end of December.

The minimum age for a shot has not been determined, but it will probably be age 18, she said. There has been speculation that federal health officials will advise that no one under 24 or 25 get a swine flu inoculation.

'Ain't going to get no story here'

A single bluejay clung to the scraggly old tree. Its head bobbed forward and backward, then forward again. The bluejay struck the fruit with all the violence that nature had intended for such a fragile bird.

None of the men who sat peacefully below noticed their tiny visitor in the tree. The bird also paid them no attention. These three men who sat on old chairs didn't care for the fruit off an old tree.

The men sat facing the highway, except for the quiet old man who rested on his chair behind a fence. He could not see the highway. The others could.

He hardly spoke, this old man who sat behind the fence and wore a railroad conductor's cap. "Oh, yeah," the old man said; he had worked for the railroad many years ago.

THE OLD MAN'S friend almost did all the talking. They were just visiting. That was their old Buick Eight Special. In truth, the dinosaur-like automobile is owned by another old friend from Elgin.

An occasional automobile would veer off Roselle Road and halt at two gasoline pumps in the Schaumburg Service Station, just south of Schaumburg Road. They are very old pumps. But their prices read high, like all other gasoline pumps these days.

There never was more than one automobile alongside the gasoline pumps at any moment. Each auto would arrive in a cloud of highway dust.

Then the much younger man, who owns the Schaumburg Service Station, would rise during mid-conversation and walk over to fill the visiting automobile with regular or unleaded gasoline.

He usually did so very quietly. Just once, Jim Hanson said, "Well, got to go to work."

THE OLD MAN who enjoyed conversation knew Roselle Road when it was the only north and south route.

"I remember the pavement was put in about 1917," he said. "I traveled it those years."

Jim Hanson walked back from the old pumps and sat down. A fistful of dollar bills bulged inside his pants pocket.

"You can't really call this a gas station, not the way I run it," Jim said. "I open at 7. If the guys want to go drinking at 2 o'clock, I close and go drinking."

Schaumburg Service Station is an old place. It's been there since 1946

Today

Mike Klein's people

when the late William Brown, Jim's father-in-law, placed two gas pumps into the ground.

BEFORE THAT, from 1924 to 1946, it wasn't a service station, just a grocery store. Years and years of autos veering off Roselle Road in clouds of dust have weathered the old station where Jim Hanson sells gasoline and very little else.

Jim always drove trucks. He hauled freight from one coast to the other. Jim took up with the gas station about three years ago. He said that he doesn't know too much about the station's history.

"I never wanted the place. I wanted to go to Arkansas," Jim said. "You want to ask me about Arkansas and I'll tell you about Arkansas. There's only one place to live in the United States. That's Arkansas."

"You've got everything from sking to fishing in Arkansas," Jim said. "Fishing all year around. In Arkansas a man can leave his gun on the seat in his car and nobody comes around to bother him."

An automobile struggled off the highway and halted near the two gasoline pumps. A cloud of dust settled. Jim wandered over, did his work, and then returned.

JIM SAT DOWN and began to hold court again. "I can sit all day and talk about Arkansas," he said. "That's as close to Heaven as a person can get."

"We got the Baxter newspaper, the Baxter Bulletin. Every day you pick up the paper and see where someone's bought a business, they're from Illi-Noise, Indiana or Michigan," Jim said.

"I'd be willing to bet that down there in Mountain Home that 70 per cent of the peoples is from the North."

"You want one of the people down there to help around the house you just say, 'Zach, you able to come over and help do something?'"

"He says, 'No, I'm busy.' He's sitting there scratching the coon dog," Jim said.

"How about tomorrow?"

"No, I'm busy."

"WHAT YOU doing?"

"Nothing."

"Them people," Jim said, "they all say, 'Why are you people coming down here?'"

"Well, we're coming down because it's slower and peaceful."

"And they say, 'Then why do you want to rush us?' And do you know, they're right," Jim said.

THIS LESSON continued for another few intriguing minutes. "I've been all over the damn world," Jim said, and he proceeded to list numerous states within the United States of America.

"There's a place where the whole family went and we all fell in love Weather ear with it together. That doesn't usually happen," Jim said.

"Now my older daughter, she still wants to go, but she's got a boyfriend here." And Jim stopped talking.

It was suggested that perhaps his oldest daughter would find new boyfriends in Arkansas.

"Oh, sure," Jim said. "Hope she finds a good hillbilly boyfriend."

HE SWITCHED onto other topics. Then suddenly Jim leaped from his chair, plunged his right fist into the sky and screamed "Let's go to Arkansas!" at a passing truck.

"God dang him, he's going next week," Jim said. "Gonna look for some property. He's quite a fisherman, yes sir. Showed me some things about fishing."

"He was in here this morning," Jim said about his friend who soon would leave for Arkansas. "We had a conversation. Somebody had to come in and spoil it."

Jim continued like that for maybe another hour. The old man who enjoyed conversation also told stories.

Then another automobile veered off the road in a cloud of dust. Jim paused before his walk toward the two old gasoline pumps.

"You ain't going to get no story here," Jim said. "There ain't that much."

If funds can be earmarked for education

Tax speedup plan may win Thompson's backing

Republican gubernatorial candidate James R. Thompson Wednesday night said he is still opposed to a state tax collection speedup plan, but hinted he might change his mind if extra revenue from the proposal can be earmarked for education.

Thompson said he would not finish reviewing the facts concerning the tax plan until Friday.

The Illinois General Assembly began a new attempt Wednesday to act on Gov. Daniel Walker's accelerated tax collection plan during a rare pre-election special session called to deal with educational funding matters.

WALKER HAS proposed a plan to speed the collection of some state sales and income tax receipts that would give the state an extra $95 million during the current fiscal year. Thompson has opposed the plan since it was introduced last March, but indicated for the first time Wednesday that he is reassessing his position.

"The situation has changed. The governor first proposed spending $95 million for general purposes and it is considerably different to talk about spending that money for education," Thompson said.

The former U.S. Attorney said he wants to discuss the situation further with legislative leaders and his staff before making any further comments.

"I don't have any votes in my pocket," Thompson declared. He was attempting to soften reports that the GOP leadership in the legislature might be willing to support the tax plan if Thompson changed his position.

THOMPSON'S REMARKS came before he addressed the Northwest Municipal Conference in Hanover Park. During his brief speech he cited the reassessment of his tax plan position as an example of how he would be flexible on issues if elected governor.

"My feet are not set in concrete. No thoughtful candidate or thoughtful governor should take a position that cannot be changed to meet the needs of his constituents," Thompson told the group.

Thompson admitted that earmarking extra revenue for education spending could pose a problem but said he believes such a compromise could be achieved.

He said he discussed the situation with Walker on Tuesday but added the governor offered little insight or comment on his latest attempt to get the tax speedup plan approved by the legislature.

THE LAWMAKERS failed in two attempts during the spring session to put the accelerated tax collection plan into law.

In his remarks to area, city and village officials, Thompson outlined his recently released position paper on environmental and conservation topics. He told officials the document highlighted the need to give local communities input on location of sanitary landfills within their boundaries.

State law currently gives the Environmental Protection Agency the authority over landfill locations and operations and Thompson has suggested a new plan that would give local communities the right to object to proposed sites and suggest alternate locations within their boundaries.

In response to a question however, Thompson stressed his proposal would not give local communities the right to veto proposed locations.

Thompson also said the state should be more involved in helping local communities throughout Illinois solve water supply problems.

The local government leaders have been working to obtain an allocation of Lake Michigan water to supplement their dwindling supplies from below-ground wells.

when Howlett became chairman of the recycling board until last February when he resigned his Sun Steel job.

Berg ruled there were no programs developed by the vehicle recycling board which could have affected Sun Steel's business during the time Howlett was board chairman.

BERG ALSO criticized Scott for "improperly interfering" in the gubernatorial election and Ronald E. Stackler, director of the Illinois Dept. of Registration and Education, and Gov. Daniel Walker when the report was "improperly released to the public . . . in the heat of a political campaign."

"He (Howlett) has the right to run for public office without improper interference by the attorney general of the State of Illinois," Berg said.

The judge ruled in a court action initiated by Howlett, who asked for a clear ruling on the charges.

Howlett's opponent for governor, Republican James R. Thompson, said he would withhold comment on Berg's decision until he had read the opinion. "Since it's in conflict with Burt's ruling, I imagine it will have to go to the Supreme Court," he said.

The way we see it

Honesty setback spur to action

The Illinois Supreme Court decision throwing the political honesty amendments off the November ballot must seem to be a bitter setback to the 635,000 citizens who signed the petitions for the amendments.

However, this setback could become the spur to prompt an even more profound change in Illinois' political structure than the honesty amendments could have accomplished.

What the Supreme Court ruling points out is that Illinois needs provisions for expanded citizen initiative powers. Expanding those powers quite possibly could be accomplished by another citizen petition drive of the kind that launched the honesty amendments.

The expanded initiative power could broaden the kinds of Constitutional amendments which could be proposed by citizen petition in such a way as to allow the honesty amendments. In addition, it could provide for a legislative initiative, a device common in other states but viewed with alarm by this state's political establishment.

A legislative initiative allows citizens to gather sufficient signatures on petitions to put on the ballot proposed laws. In many western states, including California, the legislative initiative is as much a part of the political scene as the precinct captain is in Chicago.

To listen to Illinois political leaders of both parties, you would think the legislative initiative results in total chaos, with the political process constantly falling into irresponsible hands.

While the process is certainly open to abuse, as any one who has ever lived on the West Coast or visited there can attest, no one familiar with the monkey-shines which occur in the Illinois General Assembly ought to argue with a straight face that chaos and irresponsibility are unknown here under the present system.

The advantage of expanding the initiative in Illinois would be to open the political process to persons and groups who, until now, have found it difficult to find a voice in the process.

Initiatives can form the basis of coalitions of voters independent of the regular party organizations. They can provide public voice to concerns that are ignored in other political channels.

While any effort by citizen petition to expand the initiative power would be subject to court challenge just as the political honesty amendments, it is quite possible that such a proposal would meet the court tests which were used to throw the honesty amendments out.

If the political honesty amendments serve as the catalyst to prompt a drive toward expanded initiative power in this state, they will have served an important role.

Despite the court decision, the 635,000 signatures will not have been collected in vain.

Court, not street, proper setting for challenge

A group of parents who disagree with the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 school board's decision not to provide busing for their children have taken their protests too far.

The parents are asking for free busing for about 200 children living in two subdivisions across the street from Nerge

School in Schaumburg Township.

In order to get to their school, which opened last week, the children must cross Nerge Road, a 45 m.p.h. two-lane thoroughfare which is the main connector for people living in southern Schaumburg Township traveling to I-90 or Ill. Rte. 53.

Parents maintain that the road is unsafe and that the district, according to its own policy to provide free transportation where safety conditions merit, is obligated to bus the children.

The board held a public hearing on the issue and has discussed the busing situation with parents on a number of occasions. The decision was to correct safety hazards by building a sidewalk across from the school, have school signs posted to lower the speed limit to 20 m.p.h. and hire a crossing guard for the intersection.

The parents have now filed suit against the board, and a hearing on the matter will be held later this month.

The concern of parents is genuine; they have gone to considerable effort to press their case. The school board does not believe they have proved the need for buses, and their lawsuit is the proper vehicle for contesting the board's decision. Some of their other tactics have been less appropriate:

When the district approved building the sidewalk some parents vowed to prevent the construction. Their threats forced the board to hire a security guard at a cost of $1,755 to stand watch over the construction when work crews weren't present.

Some parents withheld their children from school the first day, again to protest the board decision. Children should not be used as pawns by their parents to make a statement. Their place was in school, not in a courtroom, where parents assembled for a hearing on their case, or in front of a television set at home.

The dispute over busing at Nerge School ultimately will be settled by the courts, and both parents and board will have to live with that decision.

Noncandidate's dream special

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — The following is a speech you will not hear from any of the presidential candidates this season. Too bad.

"Good evening, ladies and gentlemen.

"I know you will be happy to learn that I am not going to talk at length. Nor am I going to flatter my record, attack my opponent, or include in my remarks an outrageous gimmick to assure myself headlines in tomorrow's newspapers. I assume such nonsense is offensive to most Americans. If not, it should be. Your vote should not be purchased by the better showman in this or any other election.

"Instead, I wish to present a brief lesson in civics. To wit: It really doesn't make much difference whom you choose as president in 1976. I say this knowing better than any that there are differences between my opponent and myself, differences of style, of nuance, of personality, perhaps even of ability. But as president either of us would run the government essentially the same, that is according to the pressure from and changing attitudes of the people of the land. Presidents do not lead in America, they follow.

Of course, they do go in their own various directions regarding specific matters, but in the main they do little that the people will not allow them to do. Hence our government, as no other government, is a reflection of those it governs. Which leads me to a second part of my civics lesson: If you are unhappy with your government, and are honest about it, you must look to yourselves for the blame.

"What did I say? I said you are at fault, my friends. You are guilty of careless citizenship, of apathy in current affairs, of political ignorance and societal greed. The result is a government that mirrors your personality: it is self-centered, it is corrupt, it is fueled by voracity and it has lost its nobility. Worse, as you have withdrawn your support for it, it has withdrawn its respect for you.

"Allow me one moment for waiving, please. I am not here to accuse so much as advise. And I admit that I am exaggerating for effect. The people of this nation are as fine as those in any land on earth. As for the country itself, we must remember that it is a place where 93 per cent of those who want to work are working, where the poverty level is based on an income which in most nations would constitute middle class, where an imperfect constitutional system is nevertheless stout enough to seek out and eliminate its own aberrations.

"It is because we are so grand and have so much that I remind you of where the responsibility for our good fortune lies. The people rule. Sadly, you have not of late been ruling well. Fifty million of you did not bother to vote in the last presidential election. A significant number of you have never learned the name of your congressman. Most have not in your lifetimes performed any civic duty greater than that of paying taxes. Small wonder your government has been inherited by the irresponsible; you deserve what you've gotten.

"And what have you gotten? A government where public accountability has diminished simply because not enough of the public cares for an accounting. Leadership that genuflects to special interests because the people themselves are in the pews of those interests. And a bureaucracy that controls our lives because we have in countless ways begged it to do so. I could go on. Behind every crooked congressman there are thousands of crooked constituents. Behind every tax loophole there is an army of citizens profiteering. If government reeks, so do we.

"I say we, because I am one of you. We are all responsible for our national errors. But I am not more responsible because I have been in office and tried to serve. I've made mistakes, but no more than you. Tonight I ask you to think about that, to realize that I as your mayor or your senator or your president can do little but follow public will. If you tell me to spend, I must spend, and I must tax you for the funds to spend; if it's wrong, then the guilt is mutual.

"I want your votes, ladies and gentlemen. But unless I have your understanding also, I cannot promise you anything but politics as usual."

Buffalo plans criticized by writer

The Buffalo Grove Park Board and the village board have a "spending itch" . . . like some very young people looking in a catalog — "I need this — I need that — O! I gotta have this." You have a large acreage of land available — sell some to the Boy's Club — now this is a dire necessity — 15 years late — and a building that will be used.

The feeble attempts — more equipment for more parks — a waste; the young people are playing in the streets and driveways (not the back yards). Many of the teens play in the streets until WAY past dark and I mean 9 or 9:30 p.m. Take a ride to all the parks — they're vacant!

Many young couples come out here to live with the wrong conception that this is "country like." No more — with an average of two out of three families who have two cars and three bicycles — city traffic has taken over our country atmosphere . . . Make bike paths IN the parks . . . and please forget about more parks and more equipment.

Another "itch" they have revived . . . Another BIG BIG BUY — all reasons for NOT having them proved the idea as "dumb" — cute but dumb! They are naturally a wandering animal and need room to roam. NO ENCLOSURE is strong enough to contain them. They can't be petted or watched close-up or have peanuts thrown at them. They smell bad. On a windy day, the smell of the "zoo" would envelope the village. Several people would need to be employed, at the very least, at minimum wage. Some ONE person will need to be responsible. All the little expenses plus the most important — feed, a high rate of insurance. Vandals would have a "hay-day" — how do you cover that? If you insist on spending OUR TAX MONEY — then buy a fiber glass, regular full grown size buffalo and plant it in front of the village hall and you can "play zoo" every day.

I'm sure, with your permission, volunteers would be willing to help take a random vote in the shopping centers, churches, restaurants. If you have "all" that money around just waiting to be spent — then, for heavens sake — lower the park district taxes — it's HIGHER than the education tax.

Dole's war record source of pride

The selection of Robert J. Dole as President Ford's running mate is a definite answer to the so-called glamor of Jimmy Carter's military career. Dole, while Carter was fighting WW II with Governor Walker at Annapolis Naval Academy, enlisted in the U. S. Army. He served as a 10th Mountain Division platoon leader in Italy and was twice wounded and twice decorated for "heroic achievement." After serving 5½ years in the Army, part of which was in the hospital for rehabilitation, Dole, at age 25, was honorably discharged with the rank of captain. By coincidence his military service was akin to that of former Gov. Ogilvie, Pres. Ford's campaign manager in Illinois, who likewise was very seriously wounded in WW II.

The combination of President Ford, who served in the U. S. Navy from 1942-46, and Dole gives the Republicans a team of loyal, dedicated Americans for which every war veteran can proudly vote.

Local merchants don't offer service

Cash discount a new buyer issue

by LEA TONKIN

If Harold (Red) Best of Arlington Heights had his way, storekeepers would give him a discount on every purchase.

The general contractor and former Arlington Heights director of building and zoning said there's a simple reason why he expects this windfall: he always pays cash. Best is a consumer who believes he is subsidizing the credit card-toting customer, and he intends to do something about it.

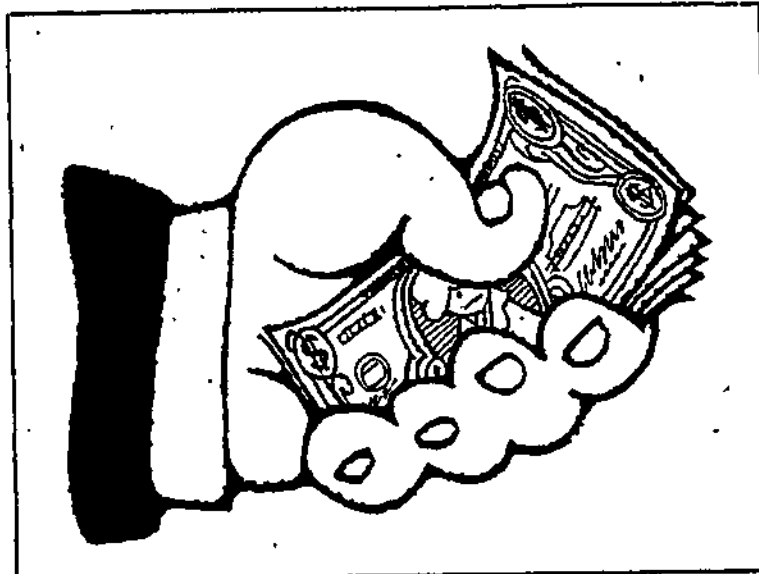

Retailers can offer cash customers a 5 per cent discount under the Fair Credit Billing Act, which went into effect in October 1975. As Best discovered, most merchants are hesitant to offer the discounts and many consumers are unaware of the potential savings. A Herald survey of five area retailing experts turned up no immediate plans for the cash bonus and suspicion that cash discounts would alienate credit customers.

BACK TO HAROLD Best. Carrying on his lonely crusade each time he steps up to a cash register, the contractor asks about cash discounts. Best figures that if more persons would demand a price break whenever they shelled out cold cash, retailers would wake up to this consumer cause. As it now stands, he said, "Some people will look at you like you're nuts."

Discrimination against the cash customer is evident in the merchants' willingness to pass along bank credit card servicing costs to those who use credit as well as those who don't, Best said. "My theory is this. Everyone objects to the 2½ per cent income tax in Illinois. But here everyone is paying an extra 5 per cent on a purchase and no one seems to give a hoot," he said.

Consumer action will convince merchants that cash discounts are a good idea, said U.S. Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill. As chairman of the Consumer Affairs Subcommittee, he noted that the discounts offer a means for cash customers to sidestep credit card service subsidy.

Annunzio cited the discount-winning efforts of a New Jersey senior citizens group, the Gray Panthers of South Jersey. The Gray Panther members talked local merchants into offering the discounts and shoppers into asking for the price break. A directory of stores where the discounts are offered is another group project.

"WHEN I BEGAN my cash discounts campaign I said that creating a local demand would be the key to winning discounts," Annunzio said. "The efforts of the Gray Panthers have been geared not only toward creating that demand, but also toward educating the community as a whole about the benefits of shopping first in discount-granting stores."

The Fair Credit Billing Act says that retailers do not have to offer cash discounts. If they do, the discount offer must be posted in the store and available to all customers. Annunzio notes that the law eliminates the Truth in Lending Act paperwork for merchants who offer the discounts. It also bars the credit card companies from interfering with affiliated retailers who offer discounts.

Yet the retailer hesitancy remains. "The merchants themselves still are fearful either that offering discounts will cost them money, or that their standing with the credit card companies will be jeopardized," Annunzio said. "Actually just the opposite is true."

Paul Jaffe, marketing director for the First National Bank of Chicago's BankAmericard division based in Elgin, disagrees. The notion that credit costs should be singled out is "a little bit silly," Jaffe said. "It's like asking for a discount because you don't use the parking lot, rest room or ash trays."

Jaffe said a discount fee is negotiated with affiliated retailers to cover servicing costs. The merchant's volume of sales and average sales amounts affect the fee, which generally ranges from 2 per cent to 6 per cent.

FOR A 3 PER CENT fee, for example, a retailer would be paid 97 cents on the dollar. The fee is an overhead cost passed along to all customers. It is a lower cost than an internal credit operation for many retailers, Jaffe said. Bank charge cards account for only 2 per cent of U.S. retail sales, a small bite," he added.

Bank charge cards, store charge cards, cash and "will call" are among the options offered to shoppers at the Crawford Department Store, Rolling Meadows, said A. J. Garber, president. "We have not considered it actively," he said about the cash discount proposal. The "less than 3 per cent service charge" on third party credit cards is included in the store's operating costs, he said.

"Less than 5 per cent" is the service fee for Master Charge transactions at the Dominick's Finer Foods stores, said Larry Nauman, public relations director for the Northlake-based chain. No cash discounts are offered by the firm. Added security and check-processing expenses mean cash accounts are more expensive than credit card purchases, Nauman said.

A representative of Montgomery Ward & Co. said a cash discount is "inappropriate" because the Chicago-based retail chain has its own credit operation maintained by finance charges. A Courtesy Home Center spokesman, Mount Prospect, said no cash discounts are offered at the store.

"I THINK THERE is a hesitancy in retailing to have a two-price system, which this could be interpreted as being," said Hugh Muncy of Des Plaines, president of the Illinois Retail Merchants Assn. By offering cash discounts, retailers would create uncertainty about which services are provided, Muncy said. "I haven't heard of any one who is doing it."

Annunzio is confident that the cash discount concept will take hold. A discount program will not crimp a consumer's right to use credit, he noted.

"It is a shame that so simple a concept has been overlooked by consumers and merchants, but I am confident from the enthusiasm I have already encountered from consumers who received discounts that very soon, next to the credit card decals on their doors, merchants will be proudly displaying their 'We Offer Cash Discounts' sign also."

Philanthropy costs $2.25 billion a year

A study of The Conference Board, a nonprofit business oriented organization, shows that U.S. corporations spend $2.25 billion annually on philanthropic causes. Over the past decade corporate philanthropy has averaged about 1.1 per cent of net pretax income of the companies.

Insurance firms' surplus rises

Six-month operating results for more than 90 per cent of the property-casualty insurance industry show a continued improvement in the firm's surplus position and underwriting losses of nearly $2 billion. A report by the National Assn. of Independent Insurers, Des Plaines, shows the net underwriting loss reached $1.4 billion for the first half of the year. When policyholder dividends are added to that amount, the combined underwriting loss is some $1.7 billion. The combined underwriting loss for the first half of 1975 was $2.05 billion. Policyholders' surplus accounts increased $2 billion during the first half of 1976, the association report said. The industry's total surplus stands at $21.3 billion. The report includes figures reported by 350 companies.

Details on mismanagement

Partee charges against Scott promised Sept. 15

by STEVE BROWN

Substantiation for Illinois Senate Pres. Cecil Partee's charges of mismanagement against Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott will be released Sept. 15, aides said Wednesday.

Partee, the Democratic candidate for attorney general, has been touring the state in recent weeks contending he will release the details of his criticism of Scott, but he has been vague on the charges.

The Democrat repeated his criticism of Scott Wednesday at a luncheon sponsored by the Community and Suburban Newspaper Publishers Assn. He again promised that he will be detailing the accusation at a later time.

AN AIDE SAID that a series of press conferences are scheduled to be held next week. Partee is expected to offer comments on specific topics such as the environment or consumer affairs at each of the sessions.

"I will document instances where Scott has been on both sides of a lawsuit, representing one side in a lower court and then refusing to take the case on appeal," Partee said.

He told the publishers that while he is opposed to the idea of a special session of the Illinois General Assembly, he will go to Springfield and work "to see the needed laws are passed."

Partee also indicated he was opposed to the idea of giving the attorney general the power to empanel special grand juries. He said a statewide grand jury system would be "fraught with mischief."

He noted that the state's attorneys in the 102 counties in the state already have the power to convene grand juries.

Before flying to Springfield for the special session he said that he was uncertain what the legislature would accomplish, but noted that he will support Gov. Daniel Walker's accelerated tax collection plan, which will give the state $85 million during the current fiscal year.

Service panel meeting today

The Northwest Suburban Council for Community Services will hold its first meeting of the fall from noon to 1:30 p.m. today at Harper College, Building A, in the faculty dining area, Room 242-B.

Luncheon meetings of the group, whose purpose is to support and improve human services in the Northwest suburbs, are held the second Thursday of every month during the school year. Interested persons may call Arlene Avischious, 392-6204, for further information.

Wristwatch—a rare item in India

by JOHN NEEDHAM

BANGALORE, India (UPI) — Two well dressed African men cleared customs without a thorough search or any delay at New Delhi airport because they were attached to a diplomatic mission.

But as they walked through the concourse toward the exit, a battered old suitcase popped open, spilling several electronic calculators and scores of watches across the floor. The men were doing a little smuggling on the side.

The incident took place earlier this year. Although the men were taken into custody and the loot confiscated, numerous other travelers would slip by customs that day, heeding the pleas of Indian friends and relatives to "please bring me a watch."

SOME WOULD stride through the airport wearing one watch on the wrist and three or four others higher up on their arms, covered by a jacket. Others would conceal the timepieces in their luggage.

A few would be bringing back a watch taken out of India to be repaired, for it is a fact of life in India that if you bring an expensive foreign watch into a shop to be cleaned or fixed, it may come back with a whole new set of "works" — far inferior to the original.

S. M. Patil, chairman and managing director of Hindustan Machine Tools Ltd., says the demand in India is for five million to six million watches a year and "we cannot stop smuggling until we can meet the demand."

Patil's company — wholly government-owned — is the only one making watches in India, although five or six other firms are licensed to do so. Imports are banned.

PATIL ESTIMATES at least 1,000 watches are smuggled in each day and says the figure could be three to five times larger.

Patil's timepieces won't pass for an Omega, Rolex or Bulova, but they aren't meant to. The prices start about $22 and range to around $35.

"We have been asked by the government to provide watches to everyone in the country and stop this smuggling," Patil said.

One problem is that India currently has a population of 604 million and Hindustan Machine Tools produces only about 600,000 watches a year — one for each 1,000 people.

It currently makes 22 models of hand-wound and six of automatic watches. Executives have studied digital watches but are shying away from them because of the nation's high illiteracy rate — 70 per cent.

"WE SEE TIME, looking at a watch, but with an electronic watch you read time," Patil said. "It may be difficult for some of our farmers and poor people to read time."

For now, the objective is getting watches onto the wrists of the Indians. Per capita income in the nation is $130 per year, so obviously it will be quite some time before every Indian can afford one.

They're rare enough, in fact, to require the daily 9 a.m. siren in New Delhi that tells those without timepieces it's time to go to work.

Ask Andy

Tick larvae hatch from shiny eggs

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Darrin Holland, 10, of Franklin, N. C., for his question:

HOW DO TICKS MULTIPLY?

Ticks belong to a group of animals known as arachnids. This group also includes the spiders and scorpions. Although often mistakenly called an insect, the tick, like all arachnids, has eight legs and one large unsegmented body part. Insects, of course, have six legs and two segmented body parts.

Most ticks are much smaller than half an inch in length, and while their color is more or less a standard drab dark, their body may be oval, egg-shaped or rectangular.

The life cycle of many ticks is a complicated process that can take three years or longer to complete. When the female is ready to lay her eggs she selects a spot on the ground or in a clump of grass to deposit up to 8,000 shiny round eggs. The eggs may hatch in as few as 19 days or take as long as six months, depending on the type of tick.

When the egg hatches, out crawls a tiny six-legged larva called a seed tick. As soon as possible the seed ticks attach themselves to passing animals and begin feeding. The unlucky host — who may be a tiny mouse, a rabbit or even a dog — becomes a source of food for the seed tick for the next few days.

After feeding for a few days the seed ticks drop to the ground and molt, or shed their skins. The creature is now an eight-legged nymph, and its first order of business is to find another host. In many cases this may take weeks or even months. The tick is a patient parasite, however, and can go as long as a year without feeding.

After finding another host, the nymph feeds until it becomes full. Then it again drops to the ground to shed its skin. Many species of ticks molt three times before becoming adults. Some species molt five times and others as many as seven times. The adult tick lives on blood from a host animal the same as the seed tick and nymph.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Karen Reece, 10, of Charlotte, N. C., for her question:

WHAT ARE THE DARK SPOTS ON THE MOON?

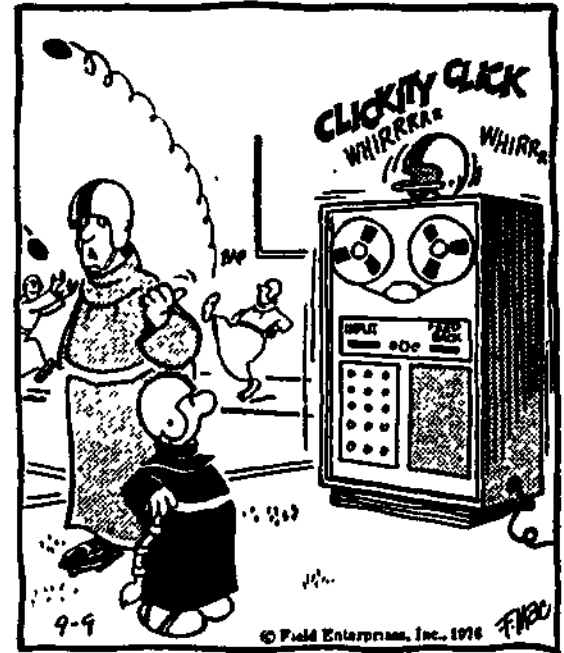

For thousands of years persons of all ages have pondered at the heavens, pondering the great mysteries of the universe. Perhaps the moon brought about the most speculation because it is our closest neighbor in space — about 238,000 miles away. During the 1960s, almost 50 spacecraft probed the moon. They took countless pictures, poked and scratched its surface, measured its temperature and analyzed its chemistry.

These probes, plus the Apollo 11 and 12 manned lunar landings, have given us fabulous insight into the moon's characteristics. Precise maps of the moon's surface detail every major feature, such as craters, mountain ranges and vast lunar plains. Included also are the numerous lunar seas. The largest of these dry areas is the 340,000-square-mile Sea of Showers, about the size of Britain and France. These various terrains of the moon form the shadows or dark spots we see from Earth. The most obvious feature we see with our unaided eye is the crater Tycho and its huge system of rays which stretch for long distances like thin strands of gold.

Bidding and play excel

One facet of expert bidding is that they go out of their way to show singletons. Thus, when South responded two hearts to the spade opening, North rebid three clubs. This bid, which went by both two spades and two notrump, showed extra values.

After South went to three notrump, North showed his heart support and at the same time told South that he, North, held a singleton diamond.

South revalued his hand, since he held six hearts and no waste value in the diamond suit. He went into Blackwood and hid the heart slam.

If West had opened a diamond South would have been able to ruff two diamonds in dummy. But West made the inspired lead of a trump.

This forced South to work a little for his contract, but the slam did come

Win at bridge

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

In South won the heart lead with his eighth spot and played a diamond. West won and led a second trump to dummy's jack.

South cashed dummy's ace of spades, ruffed a spade, ruffed one diamond with dummy's last trump, ruffed a second spade, pulled West's last trump and claimed since he could enter dummy with the ace of clubs and discard his last two diamonds on the king and eight of spades.

Freeway building losing public support

Sept. 23 hearing on highway construction set to solicit citizens' opinions on projects

by LEA TONKIN

There was a time when suburban residents thought paving over the remaining patches of open space for new highways was a sign of progress. Some still do. But times are changing. As the Illinois Transportation Study Commission members are discovering in a series of hearings on planned Illinois freeway construction, an increasing number of citizens question the need for new strips of concrete on the landscape.

Chicago area residents will have their say on the freeway plans at a hearing Sept. 23 at the Howard Johnson Motel on Northwest Highway in Palatine, with a second hearing in Chicago Sept. 24. Among the segments recommended: the Elgin-O'Hare freeway from the south side of O'Hare Airport to U.S. Rte. 20 and the extension of Ill. Rte. 83 from Dundee Road in Arlington Heights to Libertyville. The freeway system is designed to eliminate traffic bottlenecks based on projections through 1991.

ILLINOIS CITIZENS will be asked to ante up a big chunk of the estimated $3.07 billion per mile construction cost. Although the Illinois Dept. of Transportation listed 1,664 miles of freeways to be completed at a cost of $5.115 billion in 1978, the commission is considering public comment on a consultants' report which recommends a drastic cutback to 417 miles of new freeways.

Increased gasoline taxes and other sources of revenue for the massive construction plan must be considered by the state General Assembly when the Transportation Study Commission presents its final report in 1977. By the time the freeways can be built, the tab will rise to an estimated $14 million per mile in major metropolitan areas. Environmental and social costs join economic issues in the controversy.

"There will come a point when we'll have to ask ourselves, How bad do we want the freeways?" said Frederick Schoenfeld, executive director of the Transportation Study Commission. "There definitely has been a different opinion coming to the fore on highway construction, particularly as it becomes more expensive."

Schoenfeld said irate homeowners and farmers who stand to lose their land to the freeways, as well as business executives who favor the freeway construction plans, have appeared before the commission.

"THE DOLLARS ARE enormous. The impact on suburban citizens will be significant," Schoenfeld said. "We hope for public participation."

Area residents who cannot attend the hearings may send written comment to the commission.

The deadline to submit written statements on the supplemental freeway plan is Nov. 16. Illinois residents should address comment to: Transportation Study Commission, Suite 485 Lincoln Tower Plaza, 524 S. Second St., Springfield 62704.

Do the planned supplemental freeways represent the road to progress? Disagreement among Northwest suburban residents provides a sampling of opinions presented to the study commission.

Take the Elgin-O'Hare route, for example. It would run parallel to the Northwest Tollway. Schaumburg village Pres. Raymond Kessell takes into account the traffic generated by local industry. "We feel that not only is it needed in terms of good traffic flow, but it also will enhance industrial areas on our southern perimeter," Kessell said. "The sooner it's constructed, the better."

ROSELLE RESIDENT Ralph Potter, who lives in a development adjacent to the planned route, said he opposes the freeway plan. "It would go almost through my backyard," he said, citing potential noise and vibration problems.

The Arlington Heights-to-Libertyville freeway, which will slice through a portion of Long Grove, also draws mixed opinion. A spokesman for the Kemper Insurance Co., headquartered on Rte. 12 in Long Grove said the new extension of Ill. Rte. 53 "will make it safer and faster" for some 1,800 employees to reach Kemper.

"Secondly, we're concerned about the orderly development of Lake County. We feel that future development should be consistent with community needs," he said.

"Highly desirable, economically and ecologically beneficial wetlands" will be destroyed if the Rte. 53 extension is completed through Long Grove, said Lou Lundstedt, chairman of the Citizens Committee to Protect the Environment of Long Grove.

He predicts flooding problems will result from the project as natural drainage areas are eliminated. "It's not people versus industry or progress. But we're talking about a lot of money," Lundstedt said. "When you relate it to the perceived benefits, it becomes questionable as to the value."

U.S. REP. PHILIP Crane, R-12th, also has announced opposition to the Rte. 53 extension.

Jackie Kendall of Palatine, an organizer for the Illinois Public Action Council, said the statewide coalition is monitoring citizen action groups opposed to the supplemental freeway plan. Farmers and homeowners are represented in west, north and south suburban Chicago area groups, she said.

"Due to the adverse economic, environmental and social impacts of new highway construction, the state of Illinois should reconsider its support of the proposed supplemental freeway system in favor of a sound road rebuilding program," said Ron Sundell, director of the Illinois Committee on Freeways, Champaign. He said maintenance and upgrading of existing roads will solve many traffic problems in the state.

Sundell said the original Wilbur Smith Study conducted for the state in 1967, illustrating the need for the freeway system, is now outdated.

"MANY OF THE population projections and traffic trends have not materialized while construction costs and energy costs have soared," he said.

The cost to build the originally planned 1,616 mile freeway system could range from $3.8 billion to more than $10 billion, Sundell said. If the system is built along the lines of the commission study, the tab for freeway, six-lane, four-lane and two-lane highways included in the plan would cost more than $7 billion. The state pays 30 per cent of the cost, and federal funding will complement state funds.

Sundell said taxes would be increased to build and maintain the new freeways. Social problems such as displacement of families and the environmental impact on natural areas should be considered, he said.

Chicago metropolitan area freeway corridors studied by the Transportation Study Commission include the following federal aid project (FAP) segments, and commission recommendations.

• Richmond to Waukegan (FAP 420): Increased accessibility and the elimination of traffic congestion in the McHenry and Lake County areas are planner's goals. Freeway design is recommended.

• Fox River Valley (FAP 430): The north-south road would link Aurora and Elgin and provide a bypass for traffic skirting Chicago. Freeway design is recommended.

• Arlington Heights-Libertyville (FAP 432): This 14-mile segment will carry an estimated 95,000 vehicles per day by 1995. Freeway design standards are recommended.

• Elgin-O'Hare (FAP 426): The road will provide access from the western outskirts of the Chicago metropolitan area to the south side of O'Hare International Airport. It is expected to carry 54,000 vehicles per day by 1995. Freeway design standards are recommended if adequate terminal conditions are provided.

• Lake front (FAP 437): Heavy traffic volume in northeast Lake County would be served by this road, recommended as a six-lane divided road with partially controlled access.

• North Chicago-Highland Park (FAP 99): It will connect I-94 on the south and FAP 420 on the north. Freeway design standards are recommended.

• Lake-Will (FAP 431): A north-south road between Aurora and Elgin, it would provide a bypass for traffic skirting Chicago. Freeway design standards recommended.

• South Suburban (FAP 433): It would provide a connection to the Lake-Will segment and it would link I-57 and I-80 with a Chicago to Danville segment.

HUD changes flood premium rule

The Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, after revising a number of its flood hazard identification maps, has taken steps to refund premiums to some property owners who had previously been required by law to purchase flood insurance policies.

The announcement was made recently by J. Robert Hunter, acting federal insurance administrator, who said HUD now is using more refined mapping techniques.

Under the Flood Disaster Protection Act of 1973, anyone seeking financial assistance from a federal agency or federally-related lender to buy or build a building is required to purchase flood insurance if the property is located in a hazard area shown on HUD's flood map and if flood insurance can be purchased in the community.

"SOME PROPERTY owners," Hunter said, "may now be entitled to a refund of one year's premium if they were required to purchase flood insurance by law, and if HUD's latest flood map now excludes insured structures on their property from an identified hazard area."

"These refinements also will assist community leaders to safeguard with a greater degree of certainty new construction in local flood plain areas from potential flood loss," he said.

Even when a revised map is issued, this will not necessarily make a substantial change in the community's flood hazard boundaries.

Hunter said that HUD's premium refund procedure is limited to those properties included in an area originally shown to be flood-prone on HUD's unrevised map but now excluded from the hazard areas on HUD's latest, revised version of the map.

"Of course," he said, "the lender that required flood insurance for such loans has the final word in waiving the flood insurance requirement. The refund does not apply to property owners who were not required to purchase flood insurance but did so on a voluntary basis."

PROPERTY OWNERS who may question their flood-prone status are advised to follow the following steps in sequence to determine eligibility for a refund on their past year's flood insurance premium:

• Contact the mortgage lending institution that required flood insurance to determine if the property is now excluded from an identified hazard area.

• If the property is excluded on the revised maps and if the lender no longer requires flood insurance, obtain a written certification from the lending institution that the insurance requirement is waived.

• Submit the written waiver to the agent who sold the policy so the refund application can be processed.

Property owners who think they may be eligible for a refund should make application by Dec. 1, or within one year from the date the revised flood plain map was issued.

HUNTER DISTINGUISHED between those property owners legally required to purchase flood insurance, who may be eligible for a refund, and voluntary insurance purchasers who are seeking protection against unforeseen flood losses, and who are not eligible.

July construction contracts reach $9.8 billion; up 9%

Contracts in July for new construction of all kinds totaled $9,774,133,000, it was reported by the F. W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Company. A key factor was another gain in residential construction contracts for the month, with a sharp increase noted in apartment units.

On a seasonally adjusted basis, the July value of new construction work showed little change from the June figure, but was 9 per cent above the previous July total. The Dodge index of total construction contract value was 184 in July based on a 1967 figure of 100. This compared with 187 in June and an average of 186 for the first six months of 1976.

McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co., an authority on the construction market, produces Dodge Reports on construction activity and Sweet's Catalog Files on construction product information.

"JULY'S CONSTRUCTION contracts fit the general pattern of a temporarily stalled recovery, as shown by many other key economic indicators," said George A. Christie, vice president and chief economist for F. W. Dodge. He said "The construction industry's recovery is presently hung up because one-family housing has begun to level off and nonresidential building, still in the early stage of its recovery, hasn't yet developed enough momentum to sustain the advance."

Continuing the pattern of large year-to-year gains, housing contracts showed a 35 per cent increase over last July's depressed rate of building and accounted for $4,148,869,000 in new residential work.

"With one-family home starts now leveling off at just above the one-million rate, the apartment market is being watched closely as the source of further expansion," Christie said. "Both 'raw' and seasonally adjusted statistics prepared by the F. W. Dodge Division show a sizeable gain in starts of apartment units in July, in contrast to the Dept. of Commerce's report of a sharp decline for the same month. We believe that Dodge data support our conclusion that the incipient recovery of apartment building is strengthening."

Christie said that differences in definition, timing, and reporting methodology normally result in a small amount of variation between the Dodge and Commerce Dept. data, affecting the number of dwelling units reported in any individual month. Minor variations of this sort usually balance out over a period of a few months. However, a comparison of the two series for July shows not only a much larger-than-normal difference but that they were headed in opposite directions, said the Dodge economist.

NONRESIDENTIAL building contract value, at $3,031,362,000 in July, was 1 per cent off its pace a year ago. The Dodge economist stressed, however, that this virtually unchanged figure concealed a wide range of variation among individual types of non-residential buildings. "Compared with the same month last year, commercial building (stores, offices) has improved substantially and institutional building (schools, hospitals) is holding steady while industrial construction remains depressed," Christie said.

July contracts for nonbuilding construction declined eight per cent to $2,593,902,000. Among the major types of heavy construction represented in this category, electric power plants and sewer systems showed gains but highway work fell far short of last July's exceptionally strong rate of contracting resulting from the release of federal funds released as an anti-recession stimulus.

Attempt to beat utility bills

by WILLIAM J. STANFIELD
HEMET, Calif. (UPI) — Warren Buckmaster is building a solar housing development.

Buckmaster was a diamond salesman back East. When his utility bills kept climbing, he turned down his thermostat and put on extra clothes to keep warm. The bills went higher. He decided there must be a better way.

Buckmaster quit his job, moved his family to Southern California and spent the next two years designing a home — one that takes advantage of the sun's unlimited energy to heat the water supply and keep the house warm during cool months.

Buckmaster, 46, now heads a construction firm which is building 17 solar homes, has plans for another 16 and may be the nation's largest builder of tract solar homes.

"The secret in building a solar system is to insulate the home well," said Buckmaster who never built a home until he started his construction company.

"The only function of a heater is to replace heat that's lost. When you open a door, heat escapes and the heater goes on to replace it. If you had a perfect cube and didn't leak air, you could heat it one time and never need to heat it again.

"That's how we got into solar heating. We minimize the heat loss by wrapping the homes in insulation. They are literally built like a refrigerator."

In addition to heavy insulation in all exterior walls and some of the interior ones, all windows and sliding glass doors are double glazed.

The heart of the solar system is a set of solar collectors — from nine to 14 depending on the size of the house. They are hidden behind a stucco wall on top of the Spanish-style homes. The rest of the roof is covered with heavy tile roofs which serves as additional insulation.

The glass-covered collectors are three-foot by 6½-foot "standard off-the-shelf collectors available everywhere." They are connected to a 1,000-gallon cement storage tank buried under the house and insulated by five inches of styrofoam.

Water circulating through copper pipe in the collectors is heated by the sun to 200 degrees or more. It is pumped to the storage tank. Water circulating through 200 feet of one-inch copper pipe coiled in the storage tank picks up the heat and flows to a pair of standard 40-gallon hot water tanks. One is for the home's potable water supply, the other for space heating.

During typical sunny weather, water reaching the 40-gallon tanks will be sufficiently hot for most domestic uses. Buckmaster said the system will store enough heat to last through three days of rain when no heat is picked up from the sun.

If bad weather persists and the temperature of the water drops below a pre-set level — usually 140 degrees, thermostats activate a backup natural gas water heater.

"Solar energy can save as much as 80 per cent of conventional water and space heating costs," Buckmaster said.

Buckmaster's Blue Sky homes range in size from 1,000 to 1,500 square feet and in cost from $37,900 to $45,900. They are located about 80 miles from Los Angeles.

The area is admittedly good for solar heat since the sun shines about 300 days a year. But Buckmaster maintains there would be financial advantages to building them elsewhere.

"This house could be built in Minnesota and work just as well as here," he said.

Make it realistic

The homeowner sales dilemma: What price to put on the house

One of the most difficult problems in selling a house today is trying to decide what price to ask. The following letter is typical of the type of dilemma a homeowner faces when it comes time for a sale.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: We have a problem. Maybe you can help. We have decided to sell our house. We checked around the neighborhood and selected a real estate broker whom we feel has produced the best results in recent years. We met with him and decided to use his services.

We told him we would like to ask $70,000 for our house, but would be willing to take less. The real estate broker said our house is only worth $33,000, and he would recommend strongly against asking for the higher figure. One of our cousins sold his house two years ago for $70,000. He never expected to get that much, and was pleasantly surprised. Why won't our real estate broker try for a higher sale price? Should we look for another broker?—WANT $70,000.

If you have checked the real estate broker out as carefully as you indicate, then you must assume that he knows what he is doing. An asking price that is too high very often frightens the typical purchaser.

Bear in mind that almost every purchaser offers less for a property than the asking price. However, it is most unusual for a purchaser to submit an offer that is more than 10 per cent less than what you are asking. Most purchasers are embarrassed to do this. They feel that the real estate agent will not consider them as serious buyers, and that they will anger the seller.

A realistic asking price will attract more potential buyers and also make it much easier to sell your house. However, if the real estate agent thinks you can sell the property for $35,000, then you would be wise to ask for $59,500. If you ask for $55,000, most of your offers will be in a range of $50,000.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: I read your column regularly. Several years ago I wrote to you about an argument I was having with my plumber. He was installing a new water service, and refused to replace the old lead pipe with a new lead pipe.

Your advice was that lead is no longer used, and that copper was the best type material to use today for this purpose.

Now I am in the process of replacing the gutters and downspouts for my house. The original installation, which is over 40 years old, was copper. When I told my roofer to replace them with copper, he laughed at me.

Is it true that copper is now out of style?—WANT COPPER.

It is true that copper plumbing has become the standard for American construction. However, the expense of copper has now made it impossible to purchase this material for roofing work. The replacement today is aluminum. You will be interested to know that substitutes are even being developed for copper in plumbing because of its expense.

The fact that your house has lasted for all these years with the original equipment is a good indication of the durability of copper.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: We live in a rural area with cesspools. Our neighbors have their cleaned twice a year. We have lived in our house for five years and have performed no maintenance. We have never had a problem.

Should we be cleaning it regularly, or should we leave well enough alone?—LUCKY.

The textbook answer for this is that you should be performing regular maintenance. However, take my advice as an old-timer and don't bother it until it bothers you. Proper cesspool drainage is an art, and not a science. Apparently you seem to have an ideal situation, so just leave it alone.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: We decided to build a patio onto the back of our house, and so we obtained a contractor's estimate. We told him to go ahead and he said he'd do the job on his first free day.

The following day we spoke with a neighbor about this, who told us that the contractor he had used for a patio was much more reasonable. So we hired him and sent the original contractor a letter, advising that we had changed our minds, and not to go ahead with the patio. Then we left for a holiday.

Upon returning, we found a beautiful patio installed, and we telephoned the second contractor to tell him how pleased we were. He said he hadn't yet been out to our house.

We were shocked! We were even more shocked to receive a bill from the first contractor a few days later. We called him and reminded him that we had cancelled it, but he claimed our letter hadn't arrived in his office until the day after he did the job, which was five days after we mailed the letter.

I can't believe it took six days for a letter to be delivered a few miles. I have refused to pay him more than I would have had to pay the second contractor. What is your opinion?—FEEL RIPPED-OFF.

If you had sent the letter via certified or registered mail, requesting a return receipt, you would have saved yourself money. In that way, you would have proof as to whether he received your letter before the work was done.

This is one case in which someone has tried to take advantage of our slow postal service.

Solar heat not right for everyone

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Solar home heating is a reality today, but not everyone should invest in it, the experts say.

A new government booklet says the potential buyer of a solar heating system should consider five key factors — home location, the type of house, the quality of insulation in the house, conventional energy costs and the type of solar system to be purchased.

The booklet, entitled "Buying Solar," was published jointly by the Federal Energy Administration and the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Office of Consumer Affairs. It is designed as a simple guide to anyone contemplating a switch to solar energy to cut home fuel bills.

Similar information is available from many commercial solar equipment makers.

Virtually all experts stress that the first step is to consider how much heat is being lost through inadequate insulation. A Grumman Corp. publication says too little insulation can cut the performance of a solar heating system in half.

"The message is clear," Grumman says, "Energy conservation first, solar energy second."

The FEA book says systems to provide hot water — and nothing else — with solar energy are the ones that are most often economical because they cost the least and pay for themselves quickly by reducing gas or electric bills. Solar heating systems for swimming pools also may be a good buy.

For total home heating, it says, a house should have a place where solar panels can be mounted on the roof facing south and slanted at an angle roughly equal to the latitude of the geographic location.

The book lists the problems weather can cause and details the good and the bad points of the two major competing solar heating systems — hot air and hot water. It also lists the potential legal problems, such as ill defined "sun rights," and discusses the financial aspects of switching to solar heat.

The book closes with this warning: "If you buy a solar system without taking all these factors into account, then, frankly, you are gambling."

Gas company suggests

'Home insulation can reduce bills'

How do you keep old man winter out, and dollars in your pocket?

By properly insulating your home, according to Northern Illinois Gas, insulation may be the single most important step any homeowner can take toward holding down energy costs and consumption.

To help consumers make sure their houses are properly insulated, once again NI-Gas is offering a ceiling re-insulation program to its existing single-family residential space heat customers.

Because insulation is a permanent improvement, the program is intended to promote added conservation of gas supplies and should help customers heat and cool their homes more economically. Offered through area subcontractors, the plan will include financing by the utility.

Don Nelson, program coordinator, said, "The re-insulation program is designed to bring homes up to current Federal Housing Administration (FHA) minimum insulation standards."

"Over 90 per cent of the homes NI-Gas serves were built prior to 1970, when the recommended FHA ceiling insulation standard was significantly less than today's. Earlier this year many customers responded to our offer, and obviously, there are many more NI-Gas customers who would benefit from additional insulation in their attics."

NI-Gas hopes the program will encourage customers to install additional ceiling insulation, resulting in dollar savings in fuel bills and stretching existing supplies of natural gas.

NI-Gas will make the offer through special mailings included with the customer's regular bimonthly bill. Customers who want their homes inspected, without obligation, may complete and return the reply cards. The company will then arrange for a qualified insulation contractor to call on the homeowner, recommend and, if desired, install the needed insulation. NI-Gas will later bill the homeowner for the cost of the insulation under one of three repayment options.

Community program study fund OK'd

Award of a contract to help document the experience of the federal new communities program has been announced by the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development.

Booz-Allen and Hamilton, a Washington-based management consulting firm, was chosen from among 10 applicants to conduct the $245,000 study.

The firm will analyze the legislative, administrative, financial and socio-economic factors that may have affected the federal new town program since 1968.

James F. Dausch, New Communities Administrator, said the study will compare the experience of federally-assisted new town development with that of non-federally-assisted new communities such as Columbia, Md.; Reston, Va. and Irvine, Calif.

HUD will use the Booz-Allen study to develop a new communities "white paper" for the board of directors of the department's New Community Development Corporation. The "white paper," in turn, will be used by the board in recommending new policy, program and legislative directions.

fer of commitment to guarantee $18 million in debentures for San Antonio Ranch, in Texas, and has issued certificates of eligibility for assistance to two projects operated by the New York State Urban Development Corporation, Radisson and Roosevelt Island.

MAP sales climb; record year forecast

MAP Multiple Listing Real Estate Service sales figures for the first seven months in 1976 continue to indicate a record volume year in local residential real estate sales. In July, the co-operating MAP Multiple Listing Service offices in the Northwest suburbs had a 33 per cent increase in sales volume over the same period in 1975 and for the year to date, MAP sales figures are running approximately 32 per cent over 1975.

To date in 1976, MAP offices have participated in over 5,600 sales transactions totaling over $280,000,000.

"There is a great deal that can be learned about community development from the new community experience to date," said Mr. Dausch. "We want to see whether these lessons can help us create more livable central cities, suburbs and rural communities."

Since 1970, HUD has guaranteed $294 million of debentures for 13 new towns under Title VII of the 1968 Housing Act and Title VII of the 1970 New Communities Act. The 13 are Jonathan and Cedar-Riverside, Minn.; St. Charles, Md.; The Woodlands and Flower Mound, Texas; Shenandoah, Ga.; Harrison, S. C.; Maumelle, Ark.; Soul City, N.C.; Newfields, Ohio; Gananda and Riverton, N.Y.; and Park Forest South, Ill.

In addition, HUD has issued an of-

Savings and loan adopts new logo, moves offices

Illinois Savings and Loan League, with headquarters in Springfield, has adopted a new graphic symbol and comprehensive identification system which is being used as the trade association also occupies new offices.

On Oct. 1 the Illinois League will move into new offices in Springfield at 220 East Adams St. A switch-over to the new design will be completed then.

RVI Corporation of Chicago, which has developed identification programs for Unarco Industries and Pullman Incorporated, was retained by the Illinois League to develop an identification system to better position the League with its membership and in its marketing and public relations activities with the public.

Illinois is the second largest state in the nation in savings assets ($26 billion), and with 402 member institutions the League is the second largest savings and loan trade association in the nation.

The League's previous logotype had been in use for more than 20 years and no longer reflected the contemporary and fast-moving changes which characterize the savings and loan industry in recent years.

Another objective of the identification program was in unifying the visual impressions that the League makes in the correspondence, publications, bulletins, and other collateral communications.

RVI Corporation conducted a verbal and visual research audit of financial institutions and trade associations and from their studies the "new look" evolved.

The mark expresses a dynamic design employing three directional arrows and a triple IL meant to express both Illinois and the Illinois League. Implied is the relationship between the three components of a savings and loan — the depositor, the association as a financial intermediary and the depositor's ultimate use in providing housing through home loans. The mark also suggests roof-forms that relate to the major role of savings and loans in providing home mortgage loans.

The savings and loan business in America dates from 1831, and this year marks the 125th anniversary of the chartering of the first savings and loan in Illinois as the Chicago Building Association, now extant.

Kunkel tells of referral sales record

Ralph H. Martin, President of Wm. L. Kunkel & Co. with offices in Des Plaines and Arlington Heights has reported that the Homes For Living Network has set a record for June in referral sales, as well as shown a sizeable increase for the first six months in residential sales to families who have relocated and purchased homes through HFL affiliated members.

The Homes For Living Network is a national marketing network serving over 8,000 communities in all 50 states, Canada, and Puerto Rico. Its numerous programs and services assist the home buying and selling public.

During June, $10,286,596 in sales were reported to the HFL St. Louis headquarters by Network members. This breaks the old record set in August of $10,094,482 in reported sales.

For the first six months of 1976, Homes For Living Network members have sold a reported $36,140,282 in residential property as a result of working with other HFL members assisting relocating families. This figure is 40 per cent ahead of the same period last year when $25,888,917 in sales were reported between members for the first six months.

As HFL Network headquarters does not share in members' sales and referral commissions, HFL Network members are not required to report such statistics on a sale-by-sale basis.

These statistics reflect only about half of the over 1,300 member offices of the Network which have reported their respective statistics to HFL national headquarters.

Based on the half reporting, in actuality, HFL Network members have closed approximately $72 million in sales generated by families relocating from other HFL Network member areas.

Fix-it tips told

Booklet describes ways to save on roof repairs

If your roof is leaking, it's not only a pain in the neck but an unwelcome expense to boot. If the repairs are fairly minor though, you can do them yourself and save money. And, the sooner the better, before the leak does serious damage.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has a booklet that tells you how to do these repairs. It also gives the pros and cons of various roofing materials. For your copy of Building and Replacing Roofs, send 45 cents to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 47, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Just as soon as you see a wet spot on the wall or ceiling, inspect the roof to find the cause. The location of the spot may indicate trouble. If it's near a chimney or exterior wall, look for defective or narrow flashing or loose mortar joints.

When you replace missing shingles, use the same kind or a piece of rust resistant metal. In an emergency, make a temporary repair with metal cut from a tin can. If you use metal, paint it on both sides. Slip it under the shingle in the course above. Be careful not to dislodge the shingles.

On metal roofing, close small holes in steel or tin roofing with a drop of solder. Solder a patch of the same kind of metal over large holes. If you don't have soldering tools handy, seal small holes with elastic roofer's cement. Paste a piece of canvas over large holes, using paint as the adhesive. Apply several coats of paint over the patch.

To close small holes in aluminum roofing, use a sheet-metal screw and neoprene washer or with an aluminum-pigmented caulking compound. Holes up to 3/8 inch in diameter can be closed also with cold solder. Holes over 1/2 inch in diameter should be covered with an aluminum patch.

you like them. And the price is really good. But it will need some work.

To help customers decide whether an older house you are buying or living in is worth fixing up, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has published a new book called "Renovate an Old House?" Copies are 35 cents from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 45, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Before you make any decisions, inspect the house very carefully. You have to spend some time to recognize clues to problems that aren't obvious at the moment.

Start in the basement. Is the foundation good? Some minor settling is normal and can usually be fixed by re-leveling floor joists and beams. But if you notice settling and cracking of the foundation walls in a number of places, beware. This could indicate the need for major foundation work, a very expensive proposition.

See if the basement is damp, and, if possible, check it after a heavy rain.

With the point of a knife, check the wood in the beams and joists. If the wood is easy to poke or a section comes out with very little resistance, chances are there is decay. And mud tubes going from the ground to the wood mean termite trouble.

Upstairs, try the doors and windows to see if they open and close easily. Jamming probably indicates uneven settling.

Look at the ceiling and walls for water spots, the signs of a leaking roof, vapor through the walls or gutter and downspout problems.

For the mechanical parts of the house, you will probably want an electrician, plumber, and heating specialist. Needing now plumbing, wiring and heating is not uncommon for an old house, but the cost must be added to the total.

When you know what work must be done, get estimates. Add this cost, plus a little for slippage, to the price of the house. If the total is about the same or below the price of similar houses in the area, you have a good buy.

Point out loan terms

Consult lawyer if irked by chronically late-payer

It's not quite what Shakespeare had in mind when he penned the well-remembered line, "Neither a borrower, nor a lender be," but that's only because the phrase, "It's a pain in the neck," hadn't yet passed into the English language.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

I enjoy your column very much and have certainly gained much from it. Now, if you will, I need an answer to our problem. My wife and I sold our residence three years ago with low down and we carry the paper on a 25-year loan. We hold the note and first mortgage. Each year we are notified by the title insurance company that the taxes are delinquent. He later pays, plus penalty, but it's always a worry. His monthly payment are always late, also.

The property must be insured in our name for at least the amount of money due us. Now I have been notified by the insurance company that the policy was not renewed when due.

The buyer lives in another state. I have called by phone and he and his wife are never in to me. I have written and they refuse to reply. Please tell me what legal action I can, and must, take—Mr. E.L.R. (Lakeside, Ariz.)

ANSWER: It should be quite apparent by now that you have a chronic slowpayer on your hands and no power on earth is likely to change the situation.

I would retain a lawyer to jump, soundly on this guy the next time he

About real estate

by Don G. Campbell

is delinquent and have him point out the terms of the loan. Have him strongly emphasize, too, that this pattern of delinquency is solid ground for foreclosure. And then — when this doesn't work (and I hate to be pessimistic, but I don't expect it to) — follow through on your threat.

Sure, it's unpleasant and messy. But you can't go the rest of your life with this deadbeat giving you perennial high blood pressure.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

I own a warehouse and for several years have leased it to a moving and storage firm. Our relationships have always been excellent. A few months ago, however, he had some labor trouble and things got a little rough — quite a few windows got knocked out and a large section of fence was knocked down. Now we are quarreling about who's responsible for getting these things repaired — he calls it an "act of God." — Mr. L.D. (Long Beach, Calif.)

ANSWER: God may have been involved in the dispute on one side or the other, but that still doesn't get your lessee off the hook. It's his job to put things back together.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

We will be moving to another town for about a year and a half and so are planning on renting our home for that length of time. Can you give us the basic things we'll need to know — ways of determining rent, whether to include utilities in the rent, what rights tenants have, what rights the owner has, or any other I may not have thought of? — Mrs. W.P.H. (Buffalo, N.Y.)

ANSWER: The simplest way to do this, of course, is to drop the whole job in the lap of a local property management firm. But, if that doesn't excite you, then go to a large office-supply firm which should have in stock a standard "lease of dwelling" form incorporating the clauses and provisions that are essential. Then consult a lawyer to make sure that there are no special factors in your case that should be included in the lease, too.

Almost invariably the landlord is better off making the tenants responsible for their utilities, and the rent question is strictly up for grabs. Check the "for rent" ads in your local paper and visit the properties that size, location and general desirability. That's the market against which you'll be competing.

Americans begin to tap powers of sun

by EDWARD K. DeLONG

WASHINGTON (UPI) — From the chill shores of a Vermont lake to the desert sands of New Mexico, from Maryland to California, Americans are beginning to tap the limitless power of the sun.

By the end of this year, U.S. energy officials say, gleaming solar collector panels will provide heat — and, in some cases, cooling — for almost 1,500 homes, schools and commercial buildings across the nation.

One such house at Quechee Lake, Vt., gets up to half its heating from solar panels despite winter temperatures that plunge to minus 31 degrees Fahrenheit and summer days that average only 63 degrees. Operating costs are said to be $613 a year — one-fourth to one-half that of traditional fuel systems.

Houses in less severe climates do even better, getting 85 per cent or more of their heat from the sun.

Solar manufacturers offer consumers everything from solar house plans and rooftop heat collector kits to backyard solar barbecue grills.

And despite the high costs involved, solar cells like those of spacecraft are generating electricity for such earthbound devices as electric car battery chargers, railroad crossing lights and cabin cruiser bilge pumps.

The Energy Research and Development Administration, meanwhile, is developing an installation near Albuquerque, N.M., to test a total solar energy system. By 1978, ERDA says, it should produce large quantities of both heat and electricity.

In short, tapping the energy of the sun is no longer a dream.

"Solar energy is a huge and essentially inexhaustible supply of global energy that is widely available in a number of potentially useful forms," said Dr. Lloyd Herwig of the ERDA Division of Solar Energy.

The sun is thermonuclear fire blazing 93 million miles from Earth. Man's quest to harness that fire is ancient. His success at doing so is in its infancy.

"Until recently, it was just not economical for a homeowner to install a solar unit when there were cheap sources of conventional energy around," says a newly published book from The Federal Energy Administration. "But those days are gone forever, and now solar is becoming increasingly competitive with electricity and oil."

In absolute terms, the sun's ability to replace other energy sources is almost boundless.

Just two or three days' worth of sunlight worldwide has the same energy value as all the fossil fuels man will ever burn. FEA scientists say the solar energy striking Lake Erie in but one day equals America's consumption for a full year.

Putting all that energy to work is another matter.

Much solar energy falls in uninhabited areas. Sunlight in populated areas must be converted into other, more useful forms of energy. Ways must be found to store energy for dark nights and cloudy days.

Experts disagree on how much solar energy man can use.

A 1974 study predicted the sun could supply 1.6 per cent of the nation's energy by the year 2000. The National Science Foundation in 1975 said it could be 4 per cent by 1985. FEA plans call for solar power to replace a million barrels of oil a day by 1985 — about 2 per cent.

Since one-fourth of America's energy consumption goes into heating homes and office buildings and only half that heat is likely to come from the sun, Seamans, chief of ERDA, said, solar energy eventually may supply 12 to 15 per cent of U.S. energy needs.

There are four basic ways to turn sunlight into useful energy — passive absorbers, active solar panels, the solar-electric cell and the solar furnace.

The first is the simplest. All it takes is a way to trap the sun's heat, such as a glass wall with insulated curtains that can be opened by day to let heat in and closed by night to keep the warmth from escaping.

Passive systems, although relatively inexpensive, can result in rooms that are stifling in daylight — too chilly at night. There are ways to solve the problem, but at the cost of a view.

Active solar panels are perhaps the best known solar energy system.

Each panel, typically two or three feet wide and six or eight feet long, is a shallow box with a glass or plastic front and a back made of copper, steel or aluminum. The black-painted metal back, or absorber plate, converts sunlight to heat.

Banks of solar panels are mounted on a south-facing roof or wall, slanted at an angle that roughly equals the latitude of the house. On a cloudless day, even in zero weather, temperatures inside such panels can hit 200 degrees.

Water or air circulates through the panels, carrying the heat to storage and distribution equipment that usually is located in the basement. Huge water tanks or tons of stones store heat for nighttime use in the typical system.

The least developed solar energy system, from a consumer's viewpoint, is the silicon solar cell that turns sunlight directly into electricity.

Solar cells may soon run portable TV sets, clocks, radios or other relatively low-power devices. But the day has yet to come when such cells turn out enough power at a reasonable price to heat a house electrically.

There has been much progress since silicon solar cells were developed in the 1950s and used to power spacecraft starting in the 1960s.

The Southern Railroad uses solar cells now to operate a crossing signal light in Rex, Ga. Similar crossing signs draw sun power in Montreal and Jacksonville, Fla.

The Park Service uses sunlight to run pumps in a mountain restroom. Africans in isolated villages watch sun-powered TV. Offshore oil rigs, remote radio relay stations and floating navigation lights use solar cells.

The price of solar electric energy has dropped from $200 a watt five years ago to about $17 today. Researchers hope to achieve an additional hundred-fold reduction by the 1980s, making solar cells competitive with other sources of electricity.

But solar cells presently cost so much — about $150,000 for enough to cover an average roof — that they are used only for test purposes or where the cost of conventional electric power would be even higher.

The child who burns a piece of paper by focusing the sun's rays to a pinpoint with a magnifying glass is using the fourth solar energy device, the solar furnace.

Simple, low-cost solar cookers that focus the sun on a pot, frying pan or oven with a parabolic mirror or a Fresnel lens have been developed in India, in Mexico, at the University of Wisconsin and in Europe.

Costs of such devices are low — $15 to $30. They can even be made at home. But there are drawbacks. They will operate only when the sun is shining. The cook must readjust them every 15 minutes or so to keep the sun's rays on the food.

Similar sun focusing techniques are being used experimentally to increase the efficiency of both rooftop solar panels and silicon solar cells.

At the other end of the solar furnace spectrum are gigantic versions of the system used to power the printing press at the 1873 exhibition in Paris.

France built such a furnace in the Pyrenees Mountains in 1963 using a huge wall of mirrors to focus the sun on the top of a tower. It can reach temperatures of 6,000 degrees and produce one megawatt of power a day.

ERDA is working on a similar system in the desert near Albuquerque. The agency's goal is to build a five megawatt system first then follow it with a 10 megawatt power generating unit.

Pierce brigade saves home of former president

by BRENDA W. ROTZOLL
CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — The home of President Franklin Pierce has been saved from urban renewal and opened to the public, thanks to begging, borrowing and bake sales.

Gifts from Pierce descendants and

New Hampshire residents helped furnish the Pierce Manse. The local women's club paid to paper the parlor. And the Pierce Brigade now is looking for a stenciler who might like to do a stenciled border in the kitchen "to gain experience."

The house is a labor of love for the Brigade, founded in 1966 to save the building. It took its name from the army group Pierce headed when he fought in the Mexican War. He was a former U.S. Senator, but wouldn't ask for a commission and entered the war as a private, rapidly rising to brigadier general. He was wounded in action at Contreras.

"I haven't done anything else for five years," Ila Bonneau said, recalling the fight to save the house, move it, furnish it and keep it open for the public.

Many visitors don't remember New Hampshire was the birthplace of a president.

Pierce owned the house six years prior to becoming president. It stood two blocks north of the state capitol and was slated to be torn down to make way for an apartment building for the elderly.

It was not architecturally distinguished, being one of many houses built here in the plain style popular midway between the Federal and Victorian eras.

But it was a president's home, and local resident Carl Irving Bell decided it should be saved. He formed the Pierce Brigade and led the drive for funds.

Eventually $18,000 gathered from begging and bake sales were matched with $20,000 from the state.

There were anguished and futile battles for federal money. State funds were tied up for years. The brigade finally borrowed $21,500 to get the house moved and have a foundation built beneath it.

The architect who restored the house checked all the details by walking down the street to the home of Miss Alice Dana, 96, who lives in a home built exactly the same, except for the location of the fireplaces.

In the Pierce residence, on one wall is a small painting from Italy, where Pierce took his wife after leaving the White House. They made the trip to distract her from ill health and her grief. Jane Pierce bore three sons but all died.

Robert died when he was 3 days old and Franklin died of typhus when he was 4. It was the death of Benjamin, 11, which prostrated Mrs. Pierce and caused Pierce to be the only president inaugurated with no members of his family present.

The Pierces had been in Massachusetts for a funeral shortly before the inauguration. The railroad car in which they were returning home tumbled down a 20-foot embankment and the top of Benjamin's head was cut off. His mother never recovered from the shock.

Pierce was born in Hillsborough in 1804. His father, Benjamin, was a captain in the Revolution and served two terms as governor. Pierce attended Bowdoin College, taught school one winter, studied law and served three terms in the New Hampshire House. He then was elected twice to the U.S. House of Representatives and in 1837 was appointed to the U.S. Senate, where he was the youngest member of that body.

Mrs. Pierce became ill and Franklin retired from the Senate, refused a reappointment and turned down President James Polk's request to serve as attorney general.

He was elected President in 1852, shortly before his 48th birthday, carrying 27 of 31 states. During his four-year tenure in office, which ended in 1857, Pierce's diplomacy resulted in the Gadsden Purchase from Mexico and he opened Japan to trade with the world by sending Commodore Matthew Perry there. But he fell from public favor because he favored a strong union and opposed to abolition.

Pierce made a speech at a mass meeting in Concord in 1861 when war broke out, declaring himself for the Union. It was his last public act. He lived the remainder of his life in retirement, dying in 1869 at the age of 64. He was buried in Concord.

Ready home for winter by do-it-yourself method

Full is the time for preventive maintenance to protect your home from the onslaught of winter and, according to one area home-building executive, a bundle of money can be saved if you are willing to do it yourself.

"Anyone who can handle a broom can perform most of these tasks," said Stephen Hershoff, marketing director for Kaufman and Broad Homes, Inc. "The problem is simply that most people do not know what has to be done."

Kaufman and Broad has built and sold almost 9,000 homes in the Chicago area and is currently offering townhomes and single-family homes priced from $26,990 to $52,490, at nine different locations in five suburbs — Bollingbrook, Matteson, Carol Stream, Country Club Hills, and Hoffman Estates.

As a service to their homeowners, K&B has developed a 10-point Fall Home Maintenance checklist which Hershoff called a good list for anyone to clip and save for annual reference. "They are simple but necessary chores for any homeowner," he said, "and they shouldn't take more than one weekend to complete." Following are his suggestions:

- Remove the garden hose from the outside faucet, otherwise freezing water may break the pipes.
- Clean out gutters and downspouts, then pour a bucket of water into the gutter at a high point to make sure it properly flows, thus preventing clogging, freezing and damage.
- Seal cracks around antennas, chimney and door vents. Roof sealer is available at any hardware store and is easy to apply.
- Clean out basement sump pit and drain, to prevent the backing up of water.
- Clean out storm window weep holes, as clogged holes will allow water to drain through the framing causing drywall to rot from the inside.
- Seal storm windows and doors. Caulking material is available at every hardware store. Proper sealing may save as much as 25 per cent of the heating bill.
- Check exterior caulking and recaulk as necessary.
- Install new furnace filters and oil the motor. Dirty filters cause the heating bill to skyrocket and the motor and thermostat may burn out.
- Cover the air conditioner condensers to keep dirt and water out of the interior workings.

Homebuyer desires extra space: report

What does the homebuyer want to find most in his new house?

"Extra space is the factor sought with the greatest frequency by these home shoppers. And, the great majority of them want four bedrooms or more," said Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Investors Mortgage Insurance Company, Boston.

According to a recent survey of 456 home shoppers, the following housing features were most often cited as "preferentials":

- 65 per cent of the shoppers queried opted for a split level design, as favored a single-story layout. The other compared with 18 per cent who favored a single-story layout. The other 17 per cent were hunting for a multi-story setting.

- Families of three or more were looking for four-bedroom units. One-person households chose two bedrooms as their ideal-sized dwellings. Both groups strongly favored convertible den options.

- Comparing household size to the number of bedrooms desired, there appears to be a consistent demand for at least one extra bedroom.

- One third of those queried explained the need for an extra room as space planned for a study or "guest" room. Another third — particularly in the 35-and-under age group — wanted to make provision for future familial growth.

- Many of the single-family detached home shoppers desired dressing room facilities as a small "retreat area." Next in order of preference came the patio and fireplace. Some 22 per cent of those queried expressed an interest in a fireplace — but almost all of these were 35-and-under in age.

When asked which room could possibly be sacrificed, 68 per cent of the home buyers decided the dining room was a "first-to-go." Other choices, in order of selection, were the family room and closed-in garage.

"Home shoppers today," Goss said, "are very certain about their tastes and needs — they are looking for the means to combine the two."

Agencies frustrate missions?

The government's commitment to provide adequate housing to low-income families has been largely frustrated by the very agencies whose mission it is to carry through this objective, a leading spokesman for the housing industry has said.

"Neither the cities, which have been recipients of vast amounts of federal funds, nor the federal programs have succeeded in housing low-income families," said Jerome Howard, president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, at a recent meeting of the Washington Mortgage Bankers Association in Seattle.

"Today's housing legislation and regulations are not designed to provide more housing for the American people, nor to improve the performance of the mortgage market," said Howard. "They are designed to protect the consumer, largely from himself; to make lenders the whipping boy for government programs that fail, and largely for failures that occurred over five years ago."

Bureaucratic fumbling by agencies such as the Department of Housing and Urban Development is resulting in market conditions where "every borrower and every lender will pay higher costs — and what is worse — the effort will create more foreclosures and more consumer complaints. It will bring still more criticism to federal programs," he said.

Howard also called for reduced government interference in the money market. Citing a report given by the Council of Economic Advisors last January that anticipated a three-year recovery period to balance the federal budget, he said, "If it takes that long to balance the federal budget, it is highly likely that this nation's private activities will suffer severe capital shortages. If the government does not move over and let capital flow to private uses, the construction industry will develop an intolerable credit gap. The demand for credit will be large, and private credit users will be hard pressed in competition with the federal government for a share of our financial resources."

Basic lesson keeps home comfortable

Some of the basic principles we learned in high school are most useful in keeping our homes comfortable, says the Better Heating-Cooling Council.

In our science classes we all had to recite, "heated air rises, cool air falls." Nevertheless, when we look about our homes we can find glaring examples of this scientific maxim being ignored.

For instance, if you have a combination heating-cooling system, where are the outlets? If they are near the floor, they are adequate for heating. But what about cooling? The cooled air rolls along the floor and does little for the "living" level.

On the other hand, if the outlets are near the ceiling, you may be comfortable in summer, but during the colder seasons the only place you'll feel warm is around your head, and then only if you are standing.

To be comfortable winter and summer, advises the Council, you should have two separate systems — hydronic heating with baseboard panels near the floor, and overhead cooling with outlets in or near the ceiling. This way you'll find comfort from the old maxim — heated air rises, cool air falls.

Ex-city cop prefers life as small town's big chief

CLINTON, N.J. (UPI) — The other cops back in Newark where he was chief of detectives think Joseph Manghisi flipped his lid.

Manghisi is still a chief all right, but his force no longer numbers in the hundreds. It's more like six officers, two part-time officers and four crossing guards.

"Don't forget the crossing guards," said Manghisi, who fled the city last spring.

Today, 51 and balding, Manghisi is chief of police of Clinton, population 1,900.

In Newark Manghisi was chief of a 272-man detective force with a fat budget and extensive facilities. In Clinton, as he describes it, he operates out of "two cigar boxes back to back."

"They think I'm crazy," Manghisi said.

Newark was the big time. Only last October Manghisi headed the security detail during President Ford's visit which arrested a man with a knife who was accused of threatening the President's life.

"They say, 'In Newark you had it made' — in other words just sit back and push buttons," Manghisi said.

But, after 23 years on the Newark force, Manghisi is convinced he made the right move.

"I'm a small town boy at heart," he says. "I'm 10 years younger and five pounds lighter, but I'm still bald."

The chief took an $8,000 pay cut from $23,000 in Newark to $15,000 in Clinton. However, he will begin drawing a half pension from Newark in October.

"I'm a new person," Manghisi said. "I think the main difference is that the pace is different. There's not as much violence. There's nobody getting their head bashed in."

Clinton's crime problems are miniscule compared to Newark. There was not a single homicide in the town last year. Newark had 154.

"It's quite a friendly town. People stop by and visit at the office. I have direct contact with the people there and when I go on patrol."

Manghisi rides patrol daily now, sometimes in uniform. He often finds himself working long hours to make up for the lack of extra manpower.

Clinton's total annual police budget is only $30,000. The 1,400 members of the Newark force were budgeted at $20 million, with a major chunk of that allocated to Manghisi's detectives.

"I'm really not a chief here, I'm more like a patrolman," Manghisi said. "The rank never meant that much to me. It just came and I accepted it."

Manghisi decided to take the job in Clinton after a friend told him the town was looking for a police chief. His family still lives in Newark's Vailsburg section but they plan to move to Clinton later this year.

Clinton does have its problems, especially with break-ins, and the town is growing.

"We may get some city problems," Manghisi said.

So all of Manghisi's officers have visited Newark's police headquarters to get the feel of a big city police force. Several have gone on narcotics and robbery stakeout duty with Newark detectives.

"The fellows out here like to have the taste of being a city policeman, but I think you can appreciate the job in any place," Manghisi said.

The change from big city to small town has led Manghisi to a pet theory.

"I think America should be made up of small towns instead of big cities. I think big cities become unwieldy."

POLICE CHIEF JOSEPH Manghisi was never happier than he is as chief of the Clinton, N.J. 12-man police force. He earlier served as chief of detectives in Newark (N.J.) over a staff of 272 for 23 years. "I'm a small town boy at heart," says Manghisi, 51, whose current staff consists of six officers, two part-time men, and four school crossing guards.

Tightening the belt . . . another look at cash crisis

(Last week Paul Logan of The Herald explored the financial crisis in the Rockford schools and its effect on sports. Today, Loren Tate continues the examination in his syndicated column.)

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — A world-respected system, effective for decades, of financing public schools primarily through real estate taxes appears to be evolving into a powder keg in this state.

Each August is becoming a crisis. Judges are annually called upon to keep some schools open, as was the recent case in Springfield. Vital teacher-parent relationships are threatened by the dollar dispute.

In Rockford, suddenly, they're without an extra-curricular program. Charleston threatened to eliminate athletics too but, like Rock Island, has settled for football and basketball. Elsewhere, sports and other after-school activities, once fondly described as "an extension of essential learning," were resting shakily on a chopping block.

To keep non-academic activities going in Wheaton, they've decided to try a pay-as-you-go plan with interested students paying for participation.

Realistically, this may be only the beginning. There is clear evidence that older citizens, growing in numbers due to modern medical and nutrient advances and more inclined than young marrieds to invoke their voting privileges in local referendums, are rebelling against ever-increasing taxes. Small wonder. In many cases they're reaching the point in life where incomes become fixed, while inflation and taxes roll onward.

"I knew the Champaign Park District referendum would fail last week when I saw the number of older people voting," said a Champaign teacher. "Now we have new buildings with no one to operate them. It's too bad but these people are sick of more taxes."

There is also the problem, seldom discussed but very real, of white property owners in larger cities coming to the realization that their tax dollars are being funneled to support heavily black football, basketball and track teams in the high schools.

And if matters weren't already at the breaking point, the women have burst upon the scene, motivated with a new desire to compete inter-scholastically and backed by a federal regulation guaranteeing them equal opportunity.

Athletic directors are being advised to incorporate the girls out of old budgets. Some are dropping boys' sports as a result. Others, like Paul Shelby in Danville, are squeezing both in.

At Champaign Central, Lee Cabutti looks back on two decades of experience at that school and says:

"We can't drop sports simply because they don't pay for themselves. If we cut baseball, how could I ask Charlie Doe (baseball coach) to help me in basketball? We're a family here, and some of our coaches are closer than brothers."

"We have 14 sports at Central, nine for boys and five for girls, and we feel strongly that they contribute to the learning process. Our administrators have always agreed. However, if the public feels differently, this will be reflected at the school board level and we might have to change."

Figures show that athletics play a major role in the lives of many Central students. If the band and cheerleaders are included, approximately half of Central's 1,200 boys and girls participate. Tom Stewart's football team, opening Friday against cross-town rival Centennial, includes 64 juniors and seniors and 85 altogether, or one-sixth of all the boys in the school.

Central's operating budget for sports, reduced from $24,000 to $18,000, brings a wry smile to Cabutti's countenance.

"This school district allocates $20,000 per year just for broken windows," he says. "They'll need to allocate a lot more if we don't have athletics."

"Our approach here is to tighten our belt. We have increased ticket prices, cut out some of the free loaders and eliminated our post-game meals. We'll charge for some girls' events for the first time. Then too, we'll have better football and basketball teams this year so we should draw better. We can almost break even."

Central took in $16,273 in receipts last year, so the idea of matching the $18,000 allocation isn't beyond the question. But these figures don't recognize $15,825 in salaries for 24 coaches, growing transportation costs and maintenance of facilities, all absorbed by the school district.

The coaching salaries are, by any standard, a bargain. Tom Stewart, a former Illinois prep football "Coach of the Year" and a bonus to the community receives $1,540 above his teaching salary to direct a football team encompassing one-sixth of the male enrollment and popular enough to take in an anticipated $4,500-plus in Friday's game with Centennial. Gene Ward runs the track program for $770. Assistant coaches receive considerably less.

Still, the popularity of sports can work to their own disadvantage in those cases when administrators and school boards use them as "wedges" to attain other ends. The threat of dropping athletics is usually a big factor at referendum time.

So, while everyone agrees that all extra-curricular activities are "good," the problems increase. Tax-weary citizens are weakening under the burden. Many would prefer, frankly, that the users pay for them.

There will undoubtedly be more Rockfords in the future.

New look for Bison

by KEITH REINHARD

Who said the Bison is an endangered species?

The biggest danger might be to the enemy around Buffalo Grove this fall as coach Grant Blaney prepares his particular brand of Bison for the 1976 prep football campaign.

One of the definite contenders for title laurels in the Mid-Suburban's North Division, Blaney's bunch is coming off a solid 5-4 season with much of their roster intact, including a backfield tandem that rolled over nearly 1,100 yards of turf in '75.

There's been a new touch added as well at Buffalo Grove and it figures to contribute greatly to an improved Bison club.

"We're going 100 per cent with a platoon system," explained Blaney. "Just from what I've observed in practice already, this is going to have a very positive effect on us in the coming year."

The Grove mentor went on to cite some plusses in the new system: "Obviously it's helped us a great deal in our game preparation. We also seem to be a lot less injury prone and generally fresher. These are all important factors over the course of a long season."

Blaney brought up another point that he felt was as important as the others: "Team morale has never been better. I think this is because everyone on the team feels he has an opportunity to actively contribute."

Proving out this point is the fact that there were originally 72 candidates out for varsity and juvco football at Buffalo Grove this fall. Just a few days before opening game, the program still listed 72 players.

Among those 72 names are a very veteran offensive unit, headed by running back Ben Orcutt (5-11, 180 pounds) and John MacIsaac (6-2, 198). Orcutt has rushed for over 600 yards in each of his two previous varsity seasons and MacIsaac last fall scrambled for 455.

Scott Groot (6-11, 167), probable starting quarterback, is another veteran, accumulating over 300 yards of offense in a back-up role last autumn.

BUFFALO GROVE 1976 FOOTBALL SCHEDULE

Sat., Sept. 18 — WEBER, 2 p.m.
Sat., Sept. 25 — at Regis (Cedar Rapids), 2 p.m.
Fri., Oct. 1 — at Palatine, 8 p.m.

Fri., Oct. 22 — at Wheeling, 8 p.m.
Sat., Oct. 30 — ARLINGTON, 2 p.m.
Fri., Nov. 5 — at Elk Grove, 8 p.m.

The fact that these letter earners will not have to fill in at defensive positions as they did in 1975, should make them all the more effective now.

Other offensive vets include ends Mike Valentine (6-2, 199) and Wayne Eichen (6-1, 175), tackle Fred Hoesch (6-4, 211), and guard Steve Pfister (6-1, 191).

Also experienced returnees are defensive back Greg Thomson (5-11, 172), halfback Nick Zec (5-8, 152), linebackers Tom Lindholm (6-1, 174), Craig Pitts (5-11, 172), Tim Dunn (5-11, 168), and Scott Shedler (6-1, 180), defensive tackles Kerry Carpenter (6-6, 207) and Jim Fritchie (5-11, 171) and guard Mike Gillman (5-11, 168).

"We're optimistic," Blaney summarized. "This is the fourth year we've had the program going now here at Buffalo Grove and it appears to be on a solid footing."

"We have a rugged schedule ahead of us this year, but I think we're a well-rounded enough team that opposition will have to play us pretty straight," he added. "All in all, the other coaches, and the players are as anxious as I am to get the season started."

Vet backs key Grens

by BOB GALLAS

While the Elk Grove Grenadiers will return a better than average number of seniors to their football squad this fall, underclassmen will be the key to the Grenadiers' success.

While Elk Grove is an early favorite to give defending champion Schaumburg a run for the Mid-Suburban League South title, head coach Don Schnake feels his squad right now is an unknown quantity for the most part.

An ever-cautious Schnake won't talk about his crop of junior talent for the simple reason they're unproven on the varsity level against outside competition. "We have some sort of an idea about them, but we won't know until we see the game films after two or three games."

What experience the Grenadiers have will be highly visible when they take the field for their opener Friday at Elgin Larkin, because their experience is at the highly visible positions, such as at quarterback, in the backfield and at the ends.

Dave Champa, a 6-1 166-pound senior who directed the Grens' attack for the last half of the 1975 campaign, will again be at quarterback for Elk Grove.

Don Schnake

In the backfield, 6-1, 178-pound Shawn Murphy will be in the tailback slot and 5-5, 157-pound Tim Roberts will run at fullback. Both are seniors and both were starters last year at their respective positions.

Schnake's troops have good size at the ends, where seniors Mark Smith (6-2, 215 pounds) and Gary Knapik (6-3, 190 pounds) are set for another season. Knapik missed the last half of the '75 campaign due to an injury.

After 5-10, 205-pound Mike Sargent at tackle, the rest of the offensive line will be left in the hands of juniors, and positions still are not set yet, according to Schnake, who has but a day left to make up his mind.

"On defense, we're greener," said Schnake, who is going into his ninth season as head coach at Elk Grove and owns a 29-25-1 mark in MSL play, 35-31-1 overall.

Schnake has some experience on defense, something the Grenadiers have been noted for in Schnake's reign.

Kevin McCloughan will be back at safety and Dan Streich, who played the first half of last season before being injured, will be in at linebacker. Sargent, one of several players who'll have to go both ways for Elk Grove, will get plenty of work on the defensive line as will Scott Stromberg, who played defensive end all last season.

Schnake's biggest problem right now will be putting together an offensive line for his experienced backfield. The offensive line play will be important for the Grens, who usually stress a strong ground game, but should be able to pass more than usual this year because of Champa, who can run or throw.

Nagging injuries have kept a number of Grenadiers out of practice. And a demanding early schedule won't give them much time to heal.

After hooking up with a tough Larkin squad, which started practice four days earlier than Mid-Suburban League schools, the Grens meet Schaumburg in a tilt which could end up the decisive factor in the division race.

Palatine has tough act to follow

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

The Popp has gone out of Palatine's offense but head coach Arv Herstedt, who has won more Mid-Suburban League games than any other coach, is certain he can tag a few more on with his 1976 Pirates.

Jim Popp, who set conference and area records with 1,214 yards rushing last year and scored 18 touchdowns along the way, has graduated.

The Pirates also lost quarterback Mark McCostlin (438 yards passing, 620 rushing), fullback Jeff Williams (337 yards rushing) and receiver Bill Finley (33 catches for 375 yards).

With only 45 yards of rushing offense coming back Herstedt would be excused for writing this year off but he figures the Pirates' situation will just give some others the chance to produce.

"We've got three good kids working at quarterback," Herstedt said. "The offense will work with any of them, we just have to make a decision."

The solution rests among juniors Gary Batke (6-1, 164) and Craig Long (6-1, 160) and senior Jeff Mosley (6-1, 162).

Batke has the most experience of the three, throwing for 34 yards last year, and Mosley averaged 7.5 yards a carry in limited service.

"All of them are good, smart kids," Herstedt observed, "but the juniors haven't played a varsity game."

Charged with the task of picking up the offensive slack played out by graduation will be halfbacks Brad Bouwman (5-9, 168) and Alan Knotek (5-10½, 168).

The fullback job is still with the jury, the main candidate being Jim Luzinski (5-11, 184) and Dan McSweeney (5-9½, 168).

McSweeney, Bouwman and Knotek all picked up some loose change yardage with Bouwman, the fastest man on the team, scoring the only touchdown.

"It may be that we will just have to distribute the carries more," Herstedt said. "Actually, they were spread around pretty much last year. It just happened that we had a halfback and quarterback who were good runners. Our fullback still carried the ball 89 times."

Palatine's split end situation is also unresolved with junior John Comerford (6-0, 168), senior Kevin Carrier (5-9, 158) and senior Steve Boshardt (5-9, 167) all trying for the job. Herstedt will have an experienced offensive line, starting six seniors. Providing the protection and opening the holes will be center Dan Sanky (5-10, 175), guards John Stauner (5-10, 195) and John Thomson (5-11, 208), tackles Phil Unterreiner (6-2, 202) and Mike Oswald (6-3, 190) and tight end Tim Martin (5-10, 175).

Arv Herstedt

Herstedt has several players going both ways. Stauner and Thomson will be the Pirate defensive tackles, Bouwman will play defensive end, Unterreiner will take a turn at outside linebacker and Knotek will be in the defensive backfield.

Chuck Roegge (5-10, 164) will share the defensive end chores with Bouwman and Chuck Such (5-10, 168) will be the other outside linebacker.

McSweeney and Luzinski, who still

Mustangs prepare under new coach

by JIM COOK

Rolling Meadows has the look of a smile with a front tooth missing.

The varsity program, under the first-year leadership of Arlington transplant Art Klein, has responded enthusiastically to a new system with 60 candidates accepting the challenge.

But a toothless smile will be greeted by the absence of co-captain Dennis Drolet, the squad's starting quarterback and one of the best athletes on the team when the Mustangs make their 1976 debut against Wheeling Friday night.

Drolet was limbering his football throwing arm by pitching for the Arlington Heights American Legion team that finished second in the National World Series over the weekend in New Hampshire.

By participating in the series, Drolet did not fulfill the pre-season practice requirement handed down by the Illinois High School Assn., so will be ineligible for the Mustang opener.

"Of course we've missed him," Klein admitted. "He's invaluable as a team leader and when you're missing your starting quarterback, scrimmages just aren't the same."

Drolet's assets are his size (5-foot-

10, 170 pounds), ability and his arm. "You'd better believe he can throw," Klein said. "Otherwise he wouldn't have been in New Hampshire."

With Drolet on the bench against Wheeling, the signal-calling chores will go to either Bill Collis (5-10, 160) or Mark Rustemeyer (5-10, 150), a pair of juniors.

"We'll probably use a mixture of the two," Klein said. "It's a tough assignment for them, but the experience will be good."

Collis or Rustemeyer will be flanked

Cross country opens in South

by ART MUGALIAN
Cross Country Editor

Five area cross country teams will take to the hills and dales for the first time today with a lot of attention focused on three state contenders, but the main emphasis will be on the start of the Mid-Suburban South dual season.

The league slate features a big early-season showdown between South Division contenders Schaumburg and Prospect. The meet will be run at Prospect at 4:30.

Another MSL duel will be at Union Oil and will pit Conant against Forest View. On hand for the meet will be Maine West, a Central Suburban League powerhouse hoping to improve on last year's 6th place performance in the state meet.

The other South dual matches host Rolling Meadows against Elk Grove.

Another possible state quaffer is Palatine, which will host a quadrangular at Palatine Hills featuring Barrington, Maine South, and six-time state champion York. The meet starts at 5:00.

In other meets today, Buffalo Grove visits Warren and Hersey travels to Libertyville for a quad.

Defending MSL champion Fremd opens its season Saturday in the 10-team Crystal Lake Invitational.

The big area attraction will be the Maine West Warriors of coach Bill Barringer, a team that lost just one scorer from last year's sectional champs.

"They're all back, they look good, and they should do better than last year," said Barringer, whose team's 6th in state was the school's best ever.

Leading the Warriors' returnees are Jeff Brydges, a senior who was 23rd in the state meet, and Brian Tolan, who was 34th. Other lettermen are Gary Paul, Don Murray, Terry Walters, and Morris Danielson.

"We should do alright this year," Barringer added. "Of course the field is different. There are a lot of good teams around like Deerfield, Sandburg, Thornridge, and Palatine. And you can't forget perennial champions York — they're always a power, as is Fremd."

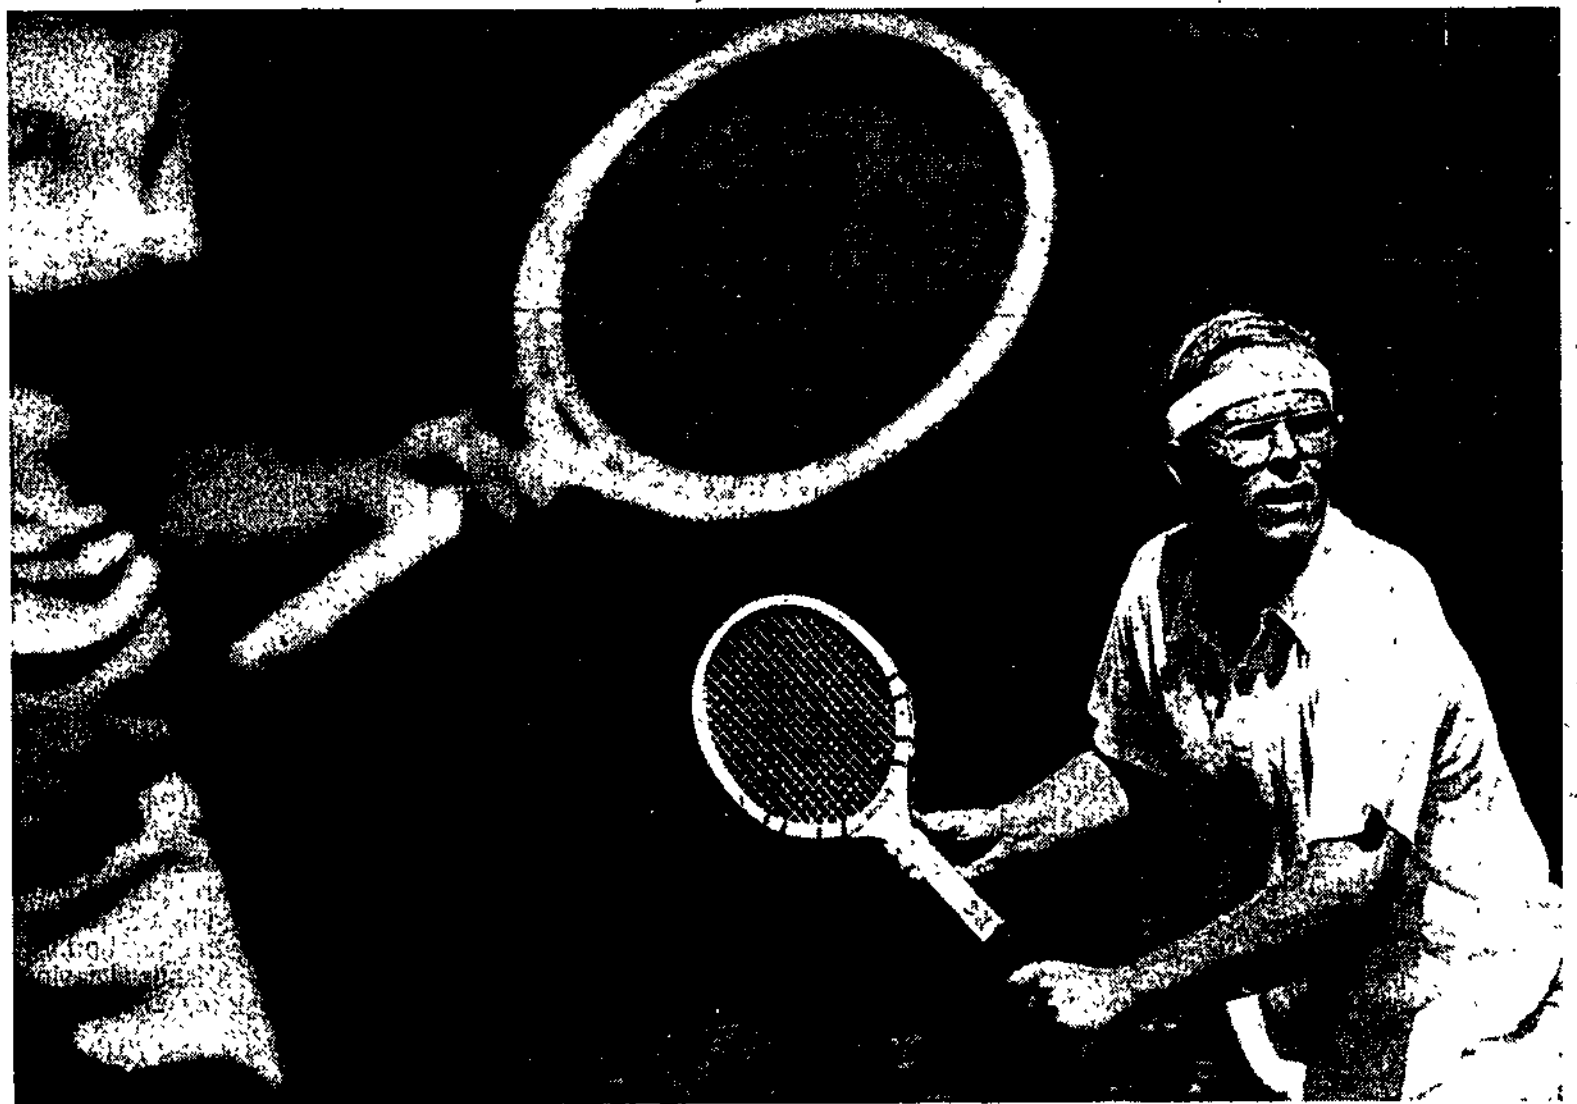

Palatine's chances against York today will be reduced because of the illness of junior standout Tom Johnson, who ran a 4:16 mile in the state track meet as a sophomore.

But head coach Joe Johnson otherwise has a healthy team that includes juniors Chuck Elliott, Jon Dahlgren, and Kevin Nikolai, and senior captain Tony Vargas. Three seniors round out the Pirates' top eight — Brian Kessler, Kevin Koy, and Dave Imig.

"This is a traditional meet we have every year with York to open the season," said Johnson, whose team will eventually duel four of the top squads in the state — York, Fremd, Deerfield, and Maine West.

Elk Grove, meanwhile, will help Rolling Meadows open its season with an MSL duel. Joe Cullen of Elk Grove captured his first victory of the season Tuesday while his teammates dropped a 24-33 decision at Addison Trail. Cullen ran 14:48 on a rough 2.8-mile course as Howard Emory placed 4th and Tim Roberts 6th for Elk Grove.

In another non-conference result Tuesday, Hoffman Estates edged Wheaton North 26-29 as Hawk runners Kevin Rooney (16:13), Tim Jorgensen (16:21), and Ken Krueger (16:23) ran second through fourth behind Wheaton's Doug Diekema. Diekema ran 15:44 on his own three-mile course.

Wisconsin coach just hoping

Jardine isn't making predictions

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Still bearing scars from the 1975 season, Coach John Jardine is not about to predict a trip to Pasadena, Calif., for his University of Wisconsin football team.

In fact, he is not about to predict anything.

The Badgers have some excellent material, Jardine says. Whether it is of Rose Bowl caliber, or even title-contending caliber, he isn't saying.

Asked what he would consider a satisfactory season, Jardine says, "You automatically start out thinking 11-0 and go from there. I've had teams that finished 5-5 and it was a good season. And I've been with a team that finished 9-1 and it was a disappointment."

Last year, he admits, was a disappointment, and it goes deeper than the Badgers' 4-6-1 record overall and 3-4-1 in the Big Ten.

Coming off a 7-4 season in 1974 — Jardine's only winning season in six years here — Rose Bowl fever spread across campus even before the Badgers had played a single game.

Despite strong performances from running back Billy Marek, who became the Big Ten's all-time leading scorer; Dennis Lick, who blossomed into an All-America offensive tackle; and the secondary, which at season's end ranked third in the nation in pass defense, the Badgers swooned.

What went wrong?

The answer, says Jardine, is immaterial.

His only concern now is preparing his young team for what promises to be a rugged opening game against Michigan at Ann Arbor on Saturday.

Although Marek, Lick and the entire secondary have graduated — along with a number of other key performers — Jardine says he doesn't consider this a rebuilding year, what with 32 lettermen returning, including senior co-captain Andy Michuda, who prepped at St. Viator, at defensive tackle.

His backfield, for instance, is experienced and potentially explosive; that is, if the newly-installed multiple "T" functions smoothly.

Running it will be quarterback Mike Carroll, a senior who started seven games last year and completed 58 of 123 passes for 708 yards. On the negative side, Carroll had 13 intercepted and failed to throw a touchdown pass.

The running backs will be junior Mike Morgan, senior Larry Canada and sophomore Ira Matthews. A fourth back, senior Ron Pollard, will also be used extensively.

Morgan, who wallowed in Marek's shadow last season, was impressive as a freshman when he scored eight touchdowns, averaging 5.4 yards per carry.

David Charles, a sophomore who was red-shirted last season, is considering an excellent prospect and will start at split end.

But the Badgers may have problems protecting their talent, since only one starter, guard Terry Lyons, returns in the offensive line.

Inexperience will probably plague the defense, too.

So is the middle guard, sophomore Dan Rellch, a former fullback who earned a starting berth during spring practice.

More promising is the kicking game, with punter Dick Milneger (42.2-yard average) and Vince Lamia (108 career points) returning.

Overall, Jardine remains hopeful.

"When I took this job, I thought it would take us three or four years to get where we wanted to be," says Jardine. "And I thought we got to that level two years ago. It will be interesting this year to see if we've got there, or I've still got a long way to go."

Illinois Masters Swim Club wins in St. Louis

Illinois Masters Swim Club won the National Masters Long Course Swimming Championship in St. Louis. Northwest suburbanites Bob Acker of Des Plaines, Jurgen Schmidt of Arlington Heights and Frank Navilleck and Bobbi Turcotte of Palatine were all gold medal winners.

Turcotte was first in the 50, 100, 200 and 1500 meter freestyle as well as swimming on a winning relay. Navilleck won the 100 meter breaststroke and swam on two winning relay teams, one of which set a national record for the 55-59 age group 200 meter mixed relay. Schmidt was on a winning relay and garnered three third places and one fourth in the freestyle events.

Also scoring points for Illinois Masters was Betty Bennett of Algonquin who was second in the 100 meter backstroke, third in the 200 backstroke, 200 freestyle and 200 individual medley and fifth in the 400 meter freestyle.

Helen Curtis of Crystal Lake won two third places, two fourths and one sixth place. Bunny Havlicek of Palatine was fifth in the two backstroke events.

Swimming for the Ryall YMCA was Irene David of Schaumburg who was second in the 100 meter freestyle, third in the 50 butterfly, 50 freestyle and 100 butterfly and fifth in the 400 meter freestyle.

Julio Mackey of Mundelein, swimming for the Camp Duncan YMCA was third in the 50 meter freestyle and 50 meter butterfly and fifth in the 200 individual medley and 400 meter freestyle.

The Masters swimming program is an AAU sponsored program for individuals over 25 years of age. Swimmers compete in five year increments. . . 25-29, 30-34, etc.

The St. Louis meet drew several former members of American Olympic teams among the 514 participants. This year's meet also attracted representatives from Australia, Ecuador, South Africa and Canada. The event is expected to expand to World Championship in Ecuador in 1977.

have to settle the fullback question, will be the inside linebackers.

Filling out the defensive backfield will be Carrier, Batke (if he doesn't start at quarterback) and possibly Frank Eckstein (5-11, 159).

After a 7-2 campaign last year that he fully expected, Herstedt is applying the same criteria to this team as any other in his 15 years.

"We're looking for the best possible achievement," Herstedt said. "We're only asking that they meet their potential."

"When you ask who's tough in the North Division all I can say is that the North Division is tough."

"We've got a good, eager bunch of kids who are soaking everything up and sticking with it."

Palatine enjoys special place in league history

by KEITH REINHARD
Who has been the most successful football coach in Mid-Suburban League history?

Names like Joe Gliwa, Don Schnake, Don Williams, Bob Walther, Ken Olson and Bob Ferguson come to mind.

With those names go the likes of Hersey, Elk Grove, Prospect, Arlington, Maine West and Schaumburg. All these schools have experienced some great campaigns over the years since the Mid-Suburban first came into being in 1953.

As for the No. 1 grid mentor, however, there are two ways of determining it, and in both cases they point toward Palatine.

Yes, Palatine. The coach with more MSL victories to his credit than anyone else, past or present, is Arv Herstedt.

And the coach topping the list on a won-loss percentage basis is John Ellis, now at Rolling Meadows. He guided the Pirates in the MSL for only one autumn but it developed into a season of perfection.

"As the fall went along, we really weren't gunning for a perfect season," Ellis recalled of his glittering 1965 bunch. "It's the same old story... we were just taking them one game at a time."

One at a time or all at once, when the '65 campaign was over, it read almost like a fairy tale. In addition to an overall undefeated slate, Palatine's conference mark contained five wins, no losses, 93 points scored and no points scored by the opposition.

"It looks beautiful now but it didn't really come that easy," Ellis smiled. "Just about every game was a tough one. Wheeling, for example, completely shut off our sweep and we were pretty fortunate to come away with a victory."

Keith Reinhard

Staff SportsWriter

Wheeling was a brand new school at the time, coming off a 0-8 inaugural season. Palatine barely rang up a 10-0 decision.

"The Forest View game was probably the toughest though, coming at the end of the season with a lot riding on it," Ellis remembered that Bob Scott, now a counselor at Hersey, was the Falcon head coach and his team was a talented young group just beginning to come into their own.

"They had Pat Dunnigan then too, and it seemed like he carried the ball against us 80 per cent of the time," Ellis said. "We managed to keep him out of the end zone though and scored on safety to lead 2-0 for a time. Before the first half ended our end Bob Payne barely grabbed a pass away from a Forest View defender and it held up as the only touchdown of the game."

Ellis also recalled that the game nearly ended in a brawl. There was a penalty on the final play, but fans had already started to empty out onto the field so the game was not technically ever completed.

Ellis mentioned some of the people who made that perfect season possible. Two of his assistants then are now head coaches, Herstedt at Palatine and Al Eck at Maine East.

The host of heroes on the field included tailback John Ekeberg, fullback Bill Peterman, lineman Jeff Keller, who went on to become a Little All-American at Indiana State; Duane Hosmer; Denny Meyer; John Blanchard; Ken Johnson; Joe Coffaro; Larry Marchel; Paul Dolik and Panye.

"I guess the one thing I remember most about that season really didn't have anything to do with our winning the championship," Ellis chuckled. "Payne came out dressed for one game, ran halfway up the field and fell flat on his face for no apparent reason... it seems he had put his shoes on the wrong feet."

All the Palatine feet were well-filled the rest of the year though.

They were filled, in fact, to perfection.

by fullback Gary Adams (6-0, 200), split end Rick Sutton (5-10, 183) and slotback Steve Sliert (6-0, 175) as Rolling Meadows displays size and speed in its ball carriers and receivers.

"Sutton runs the 40-yard dash in 4.4," Klein noted "and Adams and Sliert are really powerful runners. They have been working pretty well together."

Also bolstering the Mustang lineup are lettermen split end Jeff Schrock, defensive lineman Jim Hattory, Mike Holthe and Owen Hallerud, cornerback Paul Schwellert and defensive captain Tim Jacobson.

Center Scott Jennings, offensive guards Dave Molgo and Roy Miller, defensive back Jeff Smith and defensive end Bill Kasper add additional strength.

"I'm very pleased with our progress so far," Klein said. "I took over in the middle of the summer program, changed the offense and defense somewhat and instilled a new philosophy and the kids have exerted a good effort and are working hard to create a winning atmosphere."

Klein failed to eliminate any of the seven South Division teams from title contention, showing his homework by pinpointing opposing team's strengths and their most talented players by first and last names.

Building on a sophomore program that finished over .500 and a junior varsity that lost just once last year,

Klein views the upcoming season very cautiously.

"Until we get Drolet working with us regularly, it is difficult to say how many games we'll win or lose. Rolling Meadows has a tradition for being respectable and that shouldn't change this year."

That would make the smile complete.

In these sedentary times

Running around might do you good

by BARBARA LADD

All of this running around is supposed to be good for me.

My heart rate should decrease, my slumber could be sounder, my, ah, extra inches will hopefully disappear somewhere along the way.

But so far, puff-puff, it hasn't been much fun and it certainly hasn't been, ouch, easy.

"Running never gets easy," commented Hersey High School conditioning instructor Claudia Olsen. "I hate it each time I do it."

So do I. . . I started running, or jogging, a few months ago after a "friend" commented on my growing flab. A quick gallop around the apartment complex proved the point.

MY ACHING BODY suffered from a violent case of sore legs, shin splints and breathless lungs. And I thought my heart would never stop beating its double-time rhythm.

But with some six million runners or joggers in the country, it wasn't difficult to obtain some good advice.

"First time runner'll run too long and too far the first day," explained Jim Nagel, track coach at Wheeling High School. "Then they get so terribly sore, they don't ever want to run again."

(No kidding?)

He recommended I follow a regime similar to one he started last year for sedentary employees at his school.

NAGEL, WHO runs about three miles each day and occasionally competes in 26-mile marathons, based his program — keyed to strengthen the heart — on the Run For Your Life plan at Eastern Illinois University.

He divides participants into fitness categories and gradually works everyone up to running two miles without walking.

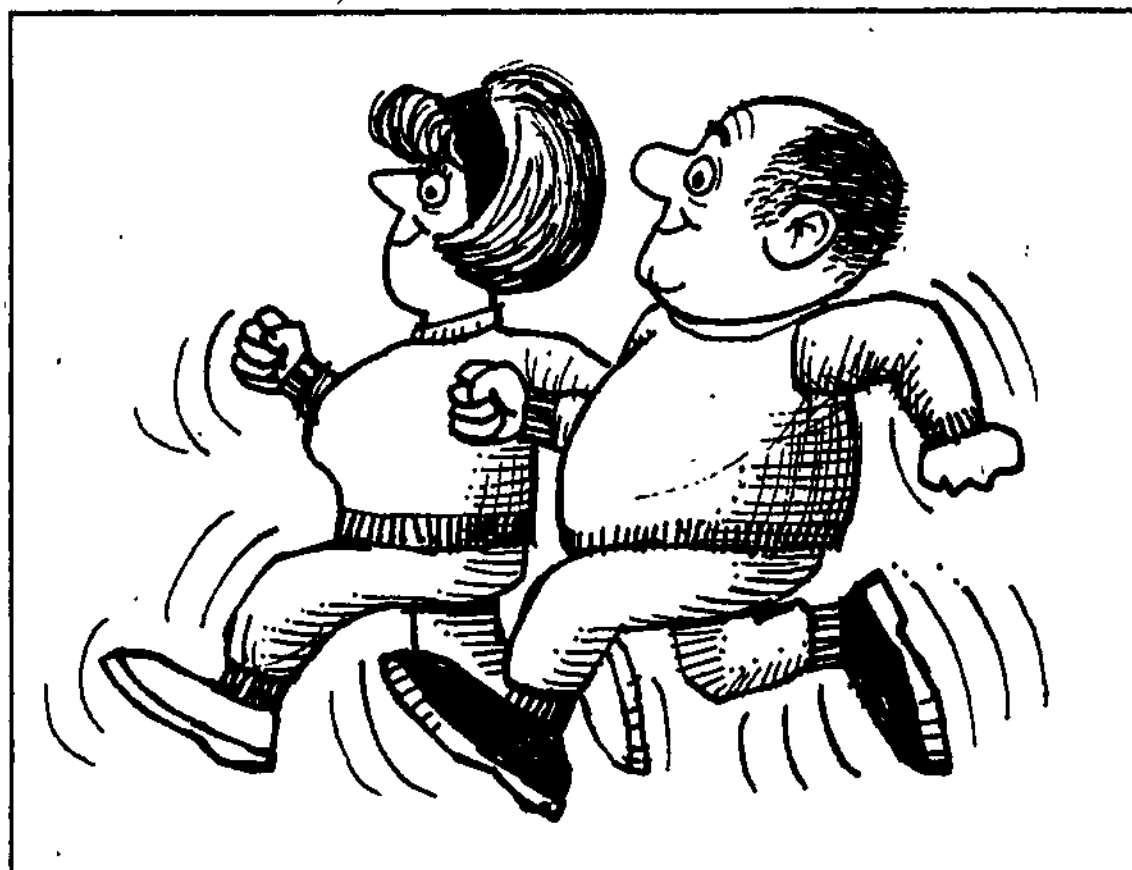

Overweight, out-of-shape people start by merely walking a mile each day. The next step is to jog a quarter-mile, walk the same distance and repeat the sequence. A mile run followed by a quarter-mile walk makes up the next category, with running time increased until the goal is reached.

"I had several 35 to 50-year-old women running and they kept it up," said Nagel. "And I know several men in the program who have run throughout the summer."

HE SAYS that Americans aren't in the condition that Europeans maintain and he points to the healthful habit of running as the most important reason to drag one's body outdoors every morning. He also says running only once or twice a week doesn't do much for improving health.

"Running firms up the entire body, which helps appearance," he said. "It helps control and stabilize weight, and it helps maintain an efficient body."

Apparently, others feel the same, since running or jogging is part of the U.S. Navy, U.S. Air Force and Royal Canadian Air Force official exercise programs.

However, some doctors regard running for health as more beneficial for men than women. Only after menopause do women develop heart problems in numbers comparable to men, say cardiologists at Northwest Community Hospital.

BUT HEART disease, which includes heart attacks, strokes and general heart deterioration, is the No. 1 killer of all American adults.

So it can't hurt for younger women, like myself, to get out and run. In fact, in "The New Aerobics," author Kenneth H. Cooper says women, more than men, have become victims of the sedentary era. Instead of feeling strained and nervous, running helps relax women and make them feel fit. Also, he says, it heightens self-esteem.

Self-esteem is one of the other benefits to running, according to Coach Nagel.

"There's positive accomplishment to running. If I feel I've succeeded in nothing else for the rest of the day, I know I've finished something by running."

BUT I'VE FOUND beginners need more than "positive accomplishment" to keep on the two-mile course. They need incentive.

At first I thought my incentive would come from losing weight. But no pounds have been shed, and ac-ording to Conditioning Coach Olsen, the average run-of-the-road trodder doesn't lose weight — she just eats more.

In fact, to burn off two pieces of 600-calorie pecan pie, a person needs to run 10 miles in an hour at (wheew) six minutes a mile.

Most persons burn off only 100 calories a day by running their mile or two. At that rate, 10 pounds would be lost in a year — if running doesn't stimulate the runners' appetites.

SO I THOUGHT my new, sleek look would encourage me to continue if unlost pounds didn't. But so far I'm the same size as I was prior to running.

Amazingly, my incentive came from the expense of running. After the first painful days of jogging I broke down and followed Olsen's and Nagel's advice. I bought some $23 running shoes.

Running shoes are the most important item in the wardrobe of a jogger, says Nagel. They should be thick soled, to absorb the shock of pounding on any surface, and they should be light weight so the runner won't tire.

But $23 is a lot of money to spend just to run around the block. And it's quite an incentive to keep at it.

There is one, uh, other reason I run. Lots of folks jog or run nowadays. There's one really cute guy who lives in my building and runs every day. And every once in awhile we go running around together. . .

Some jogging paths better than others

Anywhere is a good place for veteran runners and joggers to journey. But according to those who daily push their cardiovascular systems to the limit, some places are better — and worse — than others.

Car fumes from rush hour traffic can overpower shortbreathed dashers; beginners usually try to avoid uphill grinds on their muscles.

Dimly lit streets are poor choices for early morning-late evening runners and lone females probably don't care for the whistles, catcalls and abusive language coming from popular hangouts or drunken party porches.

Conversely, school-athletic fields and empty playgrounds attract many runners and joggers and some park districts have organized running in addition to exercise classes.

In the Palatine Park District, a women's jogging class is offered at Birchwood gym. And their annual cross country race at Palatine Hills Golf Course and Recreation Center is scheduled for Nov. 13.

THE PALATINE BIKE Trail is one of the most popular running and jogging areas and is especially appreciated by those bothered by cement-produced shin splints, since they can run alongside the asphalt. The bridge path in Deer Grove is nice, and the Rolling Meadows Park District has mile tracks set up at Campbell and Kimball Hill Parks.

For those who need a bit of added incentive, Northwest Suburban YMCA offers pacer lights with its new indoor track. Runners who keep up with the lights are guaranteed to run a mile in eight minutes, according to Helen Coryell, assistant executive.

There are also programs designed for guilt-ridden, once-a-month joggers who desire more fun in their exercise.

Park districts teach strenuous dance classes, including jazz, modern and folk. And a new, more expensive mode to stressing the cardiovascular system called aerobic dancing and developed by Jacki Sorensen is popping up in the Northwest suburbs.

"It's a complete physical fitness program through simple vigorous dances," explained instructor Cyndi Connelly, Arlington Heights. "It can take the place of jogging — but it's not as boring."

Science wants us to die healthy

by ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON — Dr. Magnus Pyke, secretary of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, was talking of the goals of its Committee on Aging which is studying how best to prolong active life in a world in which the death rate always has been, and always will be, 100 per cent.

There will come a day, he said, when one of the fellow members of the committee, Sir Ferguson Anderson, "a marvelous geriatrician," has to make the ultimate report of his accomplishments on Earth.

"When he climbs that staircase, when he goes to the Pearly Gates," said the ebullient Pyke, who is probably Britain's most popular scientist, "and St. Peter says: What did you do: Did you succeed on Earth, my dear Sir Ferguson Anderson, OBE-Order of the British Empire?"

"There's no longer an Empire," confided Pyke in an aside, "but it's a nice medal to have."

"YES, ST. PETER, I did. Although all the British still die, which is a pity, they all die healthy."

"That," said Pyke, "is what Sir Ferguson Anderson is aiming at."

And that, as it happens, is the goal of the study group which expects to issue another report soon on some of the aspects of the problem of aging — a most complex problem.

Trying hard not to anticipate the report, Pyke said there was progress at least in identifying the areas of research into senility — one of the most demeaning conditions of old age. But there were stronger indications that more firm but sympathetic attention to the aging and the old might add as much to longer and happier lives as medical breakthroughs.

Did Sir Ferguson mean that people should simply wear out instead of dying of disease?

"THAT'S SEMANTICALLY tricky," said Pyke. "What it really means is, let the old die in the best possible condition. You've got to die of something obviously. His idea is that the old shall be healthy as long as possible and one of the things he is always saying is:

"Don't be too kind to the old. Be kinder to the old by not being kind."

One area of Anderson's geriatric research at the Stobhill General Hospital in Glasgow overlaps Pyke's own specialty as a food scientist — he was Scientific Advisor to the government on food in World War II. The great Scottish doctor is deeply interested in the diet of the old and especially the way it changes when they are living loose in a community after a period in a hospital or institution.

Just as Anderson does not believe the old should be treated like fragile china, except in unusual cases, so Pyke thinks the average person, young or old, tends to be over-addicted to safety in his diet and makes too much fuss about additives and chemical fertilizers.

"IF YOU CARRY food arguments to the extreme," he said, "there are many wholesome foods one couldn't eat such as cabbages, potatoes, onions and watercress, because they contain tiny amounts of poison. People are too finicky about food sources; in the future they won't be able to be."

Apparently reflecting some of the views expressed in four years of group meetings, Pyke condemned the drive in some quarters to lower the age of retirement to 55 or 50.

"You do harm when you tell a healthy fellow that age that he's old," he said. "Retirement is like the evil eye of a medicine man, cutting a man's links with society until there's nothing left for him to do but go home and die. You take away his ear, his secretary and his office. In six months people are beginning to say: Have you seen old so and so? No use inviting him any more. Poor fellow looks like he's for it."

He said one London borough, aware of this, had been looking kindly on a novel scheme called "the link system" in which retired people register their skills at a central office — many of these skills are rare among younger people.

SOMEONE WHO wants a grandfather clock fixed, for example, finds a clockmaker on the register and pays in return in his own skill, whatever it is — electrician, plumber, shoemaker, etc. Money is not the preferred medium.

"In this country," said Pyke, "if you're poor and you're old, you may suffer from hypothermia which may partly be due to the fact that the weather is cold and also partly due to biology. When you're old, you don't know that you're cold."

"I find, now that I'm getting old (68), that you lose your sense of balance. When I was a boy on a farm in Canada, I could stand on a wagon while loading hay because I had a very good sense of balance. I've already lost my sense of smell, but that's only a qualified disadvantage since, although I can't smell roses, I can't smell my fellow passengers in the underground (subway) either."

"YOU ALSO LOSE your sense of heat and cold. And these unfortunate people, just because they don't remember that 'now I ought to shiver,' sometimes wind up in an intensive care unit with the complete panoply of science around them, tubes stuck up their nose and through other orifices of body, drips with people bustling around and electrocardiographs going on and the family waiting in the street till the experts have finished."

"This is really what it's all about. You can have an old person with all these tubes and knobs in him, but he's not living a human life. How much better it would have been if he had had a son or daughter who could say: 'Watch out, Dad, you're colder than you think.'"

(United Press International)

A TIP STRAIGHT from the horse's mouth may make for an interesting race when members of Infant Welfare Society of Palatine sponsor "A Day at the Races" Saturday,

Sept. 18, at Arlington Park. "Young Nobleman" clues Betty Brown, Kris Howard and Vivian Gombert in on the benefit which begins with post time at 2 p.m., followed by cocktails at six and dinner and dancing to the music of the Phil Varchetta orchestra. Tickets are $17.50 from Mrs. Gombert, 358-4939, or Sarabere Rex, 358-3676.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Reader complains she's always cold

What makes a person feel cold? I am 25 and when the temperature is below 70 degrees Fahrenheit I feel cold. I stay in the house most of the time unless it is above 70 degrees. I don't go swimming because I can't stand the water temperature. It doesn't matter whether it is an indoor or outdoor pool, I still feel cold.

I receive quite a few letters from people about this. The sensation of feeling cold is not a reliable indicator of how hot or cold the body really is. It only indicates that the skin is hot or cold. You feel hot or cold only in relation to stimulation of nerve endings in the skin, not the rest of the body.

The sensation of being hot or cold is greatly affected by the amount of blood circulating through the skin. A person with low thyroid functions feels cold because this condition results in decreased blood flow through the skin. By contrast if you had an overactive thyroid, your body would turn on the cooling mechanisms to eliminate the excess heat generated by increased metabolism. That would increase the flow of warm blood to the skin.

Feet and hands feel cold because they get the least amount of circulation under normal resting circumstances. So what can you do? Increase the flow of blood to your skin. The best way to do that is to be more active. Physical activity generates body heat and in turn the blood flow to the skin is then increased.

Another cause for feeling cold is a poor diet. Inadequate caloric intake means less heat is formed. The body metabolism slows when you don't eat enough. It is nature's way of protecting you, but this causes you to feel cold. So, eat right and increase your physical activity. It could help. If you still feel cold, have a checkup of your thyroid and be sure you are not anemic.

For more information I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-6, Body Temperature and Fever. Others who want this issue can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Just send your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 328, San Antonio Tex. 7829.

What are the symptoms of an abdominal aneurysm? Is there any visible movement on the outside of the abdominal area? I am a female age 36 and weigh 117 pounds.

An abdominal aneurysm is a dilation of the large artery, the aorta, that courses down the front of the spine. The sac-like dilation most often occurs in middle-aged or older persons, usually with some atherosclerosis (fatty cholesterol deposits) of the large aorta.

If the aneurysm is small and the abdomen is large, it may be impossible to feel it on physical examination. When the stomach is very lean and if the aneurysm is larger, then it can be felt and the pulsations can also be seen when the patient is lying on his back.

Many very thin people with normal forceful pulsations of the aorta have pulsations you can see and if you put your hand over the aorta, you can then feel it. That does not mean it is a dilated sac or aneurysm. I would guess you are in that category and do not have an aneurysm, but the way to find out is to let your doctor do a physical examination and find out what is worrying you.

Trees in urban setting really need fertilizer

Dear Dorothy: You see trees, big, middle and small, growing beautifully in woods and forests. They defy all kinds of troubles. This is a roundabout way of wondering aloud whether we don't waste money, time and effort doing so much fertilizing of trees around our house. Real question: Like so many of the commercial holidays, isn't this fertilizing something that has been foisted off on us — just another piece of useless trapping?—R. G. Redmond

I have to disagree with your premise. First, not all trees in natural settings do well. Many are crowded out of sufficient sunlight or adequate subsurface water and fall victim to insect damage and other blights. Second, urban trees have a hard time of it in soil that is often clayed and lacks natural compost. They have to contend with urban pollution and frequently human damage. Their value — esthetic and financial — is undeniable. Anyone who has had to replace one can offer fervent testimony. The new fertilizers are simple to use and, for me at least, make great good sense.

Dear Dorothy: My sister-in-law clearly thinks I'm flaky for using fresh spinach in cooked dishes. Might I be?—Sue Bauer
Only time I buy fresh spinach is when it's to be used in a fresh green salad. For every other purpose, frozen spinach is a better buy. It's already cleaned, it's simple to cook in the frozen state, and it costs less.

Dear Dorothy: I have no end of trouble when working with the mixing bowl on our kitchen counter. What do you do to prevent all the sliding, and so forth? —Helen Vidal Put the mixing bowl on a wet cloth or paper towel.

Beware zucchini! It takes over

There's a threat to our national security lurking in the garden — its name is zucchini. Gourd have mercy! One day the zucchini is a pretty, little leafy beauty, and before you know it, the plant is out of control. Personally, I believe the combined forces of Burpee could smother Rand-hurst in one growing season, maybe even Mount Prospect, if the urge prompted.

Why is zucchini such an embarrassment of abundance? You can cut off two dozen five-inchers, but one always gets away to balloon into a rowboat. Then you have to hire a U-Haul to truck it into the kitchen. Eat it raw, fry it, boil it, stew it, you'll glut on zucchini until your tummy bloats. Invite the local high school band over to the house — one zucchini serves all.

ZUCCHINI ROWBOATS

TAKE ONE giant zucchini that ballooned while you weren't looking and scoop out the flesh into a rowboat shape. (Don't peel the zucchini.) Save the flesh. Blanch the rowboat in boiling water, about four minutes. Fry three slices of bacon, crumble and reserve. Chop the scooped-out flesh from the zucchini and saute it in bacon fat until tender. Combine the sauteed zucchini bits with crumbled bacon and one cup of shredded Swiss cheese, 1/8 teaspoon of nutmeg, 1/4 cup of half and half, one slightly beaten egg and salt and pepper to taste. Fill rowboats with zucchini mix and sprinkle bread crumbs on top. Place in shallow baking pan and add one inch of water. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes or until a knife inserted in the zucchini comes out clean.

One thing about these giant zucchinis. Use recipes calling for four cups or more of zucchini at a crack and the supply will dwindle faster. For the last month, zucchini has been all the rage, with recipes ranging from zucchini soup to macaroni and cheese zucchini, zucchini salad with blue cheese and olives, French fried zucchini, Pennsylvania Dutch zucchini, and my Polish mother-in-law is expected to come up with a Polish zucchini kolachl any day now.

Whatever recipe you have for zucchini bread, do try this one. It's the best I've tasted:

ZUCCHINI BREAD

Stir together three cups of flour, 1 1/2 cups of sugar, a teaspoon of salt, one of baking powder, 1/4 teaspoon of baking soda and 1 1/4 teaspoons of pumpkin pie spice, two cups of shredded unpeeled zucchini, one cup each of raisins or dates and walnuts or cashews. In another bowl, mix one cup of peanut oil with three eggs, then pour into flour mixture and blend. Turn into greased loaf pans or discarded soup cans. You'll get only one loaf out of a 9x5x3 inch pan. Two loaves from frozen turkey roll tins, four from Chunky soup cans. Bake in a 350-degree oven an hour and a half or until a knife comes out clean. Cool loaves in pan for 10 minutes, then invert on a rack and finish cooling. Preparation time is only five minutes, so make a second batch and you'll be able to dispose of a giant zucchini and have enough bread to freeze and give as gifts. Frozen loaves will keep three months.

Incidentally, one day I goofed and used a bowl of peeled, diced Patty Pan squash (bush scallion) that was in the refrigerator. I put this squash in the blender because I was too lazy to grate it. It worked equally as well in the bread recipe. The only difference was that no green specks (from the zucchini skin) appeared in the finished product. If you're not fussy about green-specked bread, why not try it?

Resolve next year to plant no more than a six-pack of zucchini starters or a few seeds, unless you are on an exclusive diet of squash. Viva la zucchini!

More plant decor ahead

Pots, baskets and other containers for indoor gardening are going to play an increasingly important role in interior decor, says Linda Reece of the University of Minnesota.

Ms. Reece, an extension interior design-furnishings specialist, also foresees growing interest in natural, textured materials such as hemp, linen, wool and rattan. She credits the popularity of plant containers to the boom in indoor gardening.

Ethnic looks remain favorites, she said. She expects styles and accessories from the American West, the Orient and Latin America to become increasingly important. (UPI)

Weddings

Sue Anderson-Wayne Doversberger

The Village Church of Northbrook was the setting Aug. 14 for the wedding of Sue Anderson, daughter of the Raymond Andersons of Buffalo Grove, and Wayne Doversberger of Peoria.

The couple met at Augustana College where the bride will graduate in February and the groom has completed three years. Sue is also a graduate of Wheeling High. She and Ishing school.

They exchanged vows and rings by candlelight at 5 p.m., then greeted 130 guests at a buffet dinner in the church hall.

SUE WORE A white sheer gown with lace trim and an elbow-length veil with a headpiece trimmed in lace. She carried white roses with a single red rose in the center.

Her attendants were Kerry Vloedman, Homewood, as maid of honor and Sue's sisters, Judy, Carol and Joann, as bridesmaids.

The maid of honor wore an apricot halter gown with a floral printed jacket and carried a white basket filled with mint carnations, apricot roses, pompons and baby's breath. The bridesmaids wore identical gowns, but in mint green and carried peach carnations and apricot roses.

The groom is the son of Mrs. Elizabeth Doversberger and Richard Doversberger, both of Peoria. His best man was John Feteo, Peoria, and groomsmen included Bill Manella, Oswego, his brother, Larry; and the bride's brother, John.

After the reception the bridal pair left for a week in the Pocono Mountains of Pennsylvania.

Next on the agenda

Northwest Panhellenic

The first meeting of the club year for Northwest Suburban Panhellenic will be held this morning at 9:45 in Southminster Presbyterian Church, Arlington Heights. A sitter is available. Nancy Slowinski of Arlington Heights, 392-4213, is president.

Millie Dienert

Riverview Homemakers

Riverview Homemakers begin the club year Friday at 10 a.m. in South Park Fieldhouse, Des Plaines. In keeping with the Bicentennial, an "American Heritage" luncheon will be served at noon by Janet Church and her committee, all gowned in old-fashioned costumes. The afternoon program will be a "show and tell" of antiques.

Christian Women

Millie Dienert, International prayer chairman of the Lausanne Committee for World Evangelization, will be guest speaker Tuesday at a "September Spectacular" luncheon for Northwest Suburban Christian Women's Club. Ms. Dienert is also adviser and lay speaker for citywide Christian crusades.

The 12:30 luncheon will be held at the Arlington Park Hilton and includes a fall fashion show presented by the Robin's Nest, Mount Prospect, with the ensembles modeled by club members.

Reservations are due Friday at 392-2368 or 885-0911. Free babysitting is available.

Slate senior seminars

Because of the enthusiastic response last spring to the mature adult seminar series sponsored by Harper College, another luncheon seminar series will be held this fall.

"Feeling Good about Me," which focuses on needs and values and discovers ways of fulfilling personal needs and goals begins Monday, Sept. 20, at 1 p.m. at Arlington High School.

A discussion of current national and local topics begins at 1 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 22 at Prospect High and a seminar on helping persons recognize the relationship between what they eat and drink and how they look and feel begins at 10 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 23 at Rolling Meadows High. The seminar on assertiveness, speaking and listening begins at 1 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 23 at Elk Grove High.

Each is a two-hour program lasting four weeks and enrollment fee is $2. Interested senior citizens may call the college, 397-3000, Extension 329.

Form new singles group for area

New Beginnings, a group for separated and divorced adults, has recently been formed and will meet at 8 p.m. Mondays in St. Hubert Parish Hall, Hoffman Estates.

Still in the organizational stages, the group strives to help members with child care, financial aid and other problems associated with divorce. Discussions will focus on self-understanding and religious identity. Social functions are also planned. Those wishing further information may call Betty Seelbach at 439-4490.

Next Monday's meeting will feature Dr. Robert M. Shenberger, Ph. D., who will talk on "Life is a State of Consciousness."

Elderly do think better

A study on aging supports the long-held theory that wisdom comes with age.

Dr. Raymond Bosse, associate director of the study by the Veterans Administration Outpatient Clinic here, said older people think more slowly, but seem able to make more accurate judgments, partly because they are cautious. The on-going study began in 1963 with 2,000 veterans between the ages of 50 and 75.

Save the living, recover the dead

NIAGARA FALLS, Canada (UPI) — Wesley Hill, his late father and brothers, and now his children, are legend on the torrential Niagara River.

The Hill family name, already famous for attempts to traverse the falls, today is almost synonymous with the word rescue.

Wesley, himself, keeps no track of the lives he has saved. For one thing, there are often many willing hands assisting in a rescue. For another, there have been so many.

But with the dead — the victims of the river and the falls — it is another matter. The Hills have recovered their bodies for years — particularly when it was most difficult and the danger acute.

It is a grim, but Wesley believes accurate, statistic. The Hill family has recovered 500 bodies.

"I went out in the Whirlpool and got my first body when I was 12 years old in 1942," said Hill, a lean man of moderate stature, about five-foot-six. "My boys are 10, 12 and 19. The 19-year-old, he's been helping me for a number of years."

One day this summer, he said, "The 12-year-old went with us and helped with the recovery of a woman's body from the Whirlpool."

"My kids are getting the same feelings about the river I had as a kid. I've been taking them down there since they were small. My whole family — even the 4-year-old girl — can go down a rope, over the cliff, right to the Whirlpool."

The Whirlpool, a giant, churning pool of water in the treacherous gorge below the falls, has been the scene of many of Hill's recoveries. It was also the site of one of his biggest Niagara River adventures.

Last summer, an experimental raft overturned as it attempted to pass through the Whirlpool. Passengers said a "wall of water" slammed into the heavy craft and flipped it and its 29 passengers over like so many match sticks.

Three persons drowned. Ten were injured and evacuated to area hospitals by helicopter after Hill, other volunteers and police rigged an emergency landing pad at the edge of the Whirlpool in 20 minutes flat.

A week later, Hill piloted a small boat into the Whirlpool and saved a man who became trapped on the raft while trying to salvage it.

Another time, Hill and another man waded waist-deep into the freezing Niagara during winter to take a rope to a man and daughter who had become stranded on a rock.

Hill's father, William "Red" Hill Sr., went over the Falls three times in wooden and steel barrels — once in 1910, again in 1920, finally in 1930. He made countless trips through the rapids above and below the falls and rescued 28 persons, who was one of the few persons ever awarded four Royal Humane Society Lifesaving Medals.

Wesley's brothers, Major and William "Red" Jr., also successfully navigated crafts over the falls. But then, in 1951, Red Jr. died in attempting his third conquest of the thundering falls.

The river is his legacy, Hill says today.

"I kind of feel like I've inherited it. If anything happens where rescues are needed, they call the fire department. But when the chips are down and they're stuck, they always get in touch with me."

"When dad died (of a heart attack) in 1942, he had taken out 177 bodies. I have helped on almost 300 myself now and my brothers helped when they were alive. So it's a bit above 500 bodies recovered now."

Most of the bodies have been sui-

WESLEY HILL CLIMBS out of the Niagara River victims from the thundering river. Hill keeps no after a recent scuba dive. Hill, 46, figures he and track of the lives he has saved — for one thing his family have removed more than 500 drowning there have been so many.

cides. Relatively few died in accidents.

Hill's most dangerous exploit? Rescuing a dog, he says. He also considers it the most exciting.

The collie had been trapped on a rock in the river for two days. Others had given up attempting to reach it.

"I took a few minutes to look for the light and dark places so I could tell where the shallows were. Then I took a rope and waded into the river. The rope was weighted at one end. So I'd throw it upstream a little, pull myself out a bit with it, pull the rope in and throw it again. I worked my way step-by-step until I reached that dog. He was just full of happiness."

Hill's favorite part of the story is the aftermath, when "they found that dog a good home a few days later."

That rescue may be another part of the "Red" Hill legacy. Wesley's father waded across ice floes in the Niagara one winter to save injured swans from death. Wesley did the same thing in 1967. There are seven swans in various Canadian parks as proof.

For Hill, there is another side to the river, a pleasant one. "I think the river is just more or less something that's a part of my life."

"I was brought up on it. My father loved this river. Through the recreation possibilities — hunting, fishing, scuba diving — it's fantastic. I can do all the recreation I want and there's always something new happening, there's always excitement."

"The river's never the same two days in a row. It's always changing. You just can't predict it. Every time you go down to the water, you usually see something new."

But he is frank. The rescues and the recoveries of bodies, albeit grim, provide some of the thrills.

"Every body you take out, you see something different. Each one's a different experience."

"It's not the challenge so much. It's something to do. It's adventure. It offers a lot of recreation and excitement. I don't know how anyone could lead a dull life, but I guess a lot of people do."

Despite the family's own experiences traversing the falls, Hill does not approve of such stunts today. Development of hydro-electric power plants on the river has loosened rock and, he says, made the falls "100 percent more dangerous."

"But I don't think that's going to stop the stunting because there's so many more people on the Earth. There aren't any more frontiers and no place to go looking for gold."

"Some people are just adventure-prone. Foolish stunts are going to keep growing and growing. You can't stop people from looking for adventure, you can't stop them from dying, either."

Hill likes to tell of one man who wanted to go over the falls in a barrel.

"He came to me for advice. I told him 'I'm glad you came to me first so I know what you look like. That'll save a lot of time and problems when I pull you out of the Whirlpool. I'll be able to identify you immediately.'"

"I think that kind of scared him off," he said. "I haven't seen him since."

Descendant of Sitting Bull meets the tribe

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Cathy Chatelein was weaned on Hollywood's depiction of Indians. She admits she tended to side with Errol Flynn in the movie version of Custer's Last Stand.

"An old boyfriend made a big thing out of the fact I descended from Sitting Bull," she said. "He'd tell everybody and then they'd call me 'Pocahontas.'"

Cathy is Chief Sitting Bull's great-great-granddaughter.

Raised in New Jersey, Cathy became interested in her Indian ties five years ago. Now an Ivy League graduate student, she takes time from her chemistry studies to develop her knowledge of Indians and Indian lore.

Wide-eyed and thin-faced, Cathy looked out of place at the Narragansett Indians' 300th annual tribal meeting in rural Charleston, R.I.

But they treated their visitor like the Sioux princess she would have been a century ago.

"One of Sitting Bull's daughters married a Montana senator," she said. "That took us off the reservation. I'm a direct descendant through the female line."

To the savage whoops and the pounding of an Indian water drum, she slipped into the medicine circle and latched onto a hefty squaw who showed her the steps.

She stumbled through a few ceremonial dances, then fled to the sidelines faintly red in the cheeks.

"I wish I had a costume," Cathy said, watching Narragansett girls in their buckskins. "I love the beading and the feathers."

"When I got a good tan I took fairly Indian with high cheek bones and long, straight hair," she said, a bit defensive about her pasty-white complexion.

Cathy, 24, now attending Brown University, said that, as she became interested in her heritage, her only contact was a grandmother in California who died two months ago.

"I saved all her letters. I don't think she was much interested in me though. After all I was a long way away and she had family close to her in California."

But she liked the idea of being an Indian. "It made me feel different."

Then she told the story of the boyfriend who called her Pocahontas. A Narragansett woman standing nearby said she'd "go for the throat" if anyone called her that.

Cathy made it clear she thinks differently.

"It's nice to keep traditions and all that bit. But it can go too far. We'd be much better off if everyone just thought of themselves as Americans."

Seafood salute to the Atlantic

Two hundred years ago, when new settlers caught fish from ocean to lakes, they discovered how versatile their catch, how fast its preparation. Now it's known that fish is low in saturated fats, high in protein and conservative in calories when plainly cooked.

New preparation ideas for non-dieters include: sea bass fillets brandied and flamed, even flounder fried after crumbing with ground walnuts and seasonings. Fisherman's Stew takes on a Portuguese touch, haddock fillets are poached in apple juice and served with cranberry-cinnamon sauce. Catfish is stuffed and baked Iowa style while cod becomes Cape Cod Turkey with Egg Sauce.

Today, the catch from the sea may be purchased fresh, frozen or canned — a big improvement from 200 years ago.

- | | |
|--|-----------------------------|
| 2 pounds flounder fillets or other fish fillets, fresh or frozen | 1 teaspoon marjoram leaves |
| 1 teaspoon salt | 1/2 teaspoon leaf thyme |
| 1/2 teaspoon pepper | 1 cup all purpose flour |
| 1 1/2 cups fresh bread crumbs | 2 eggs, beaten |
| 1 1/2 cups ground walnuts | 1/2 cup margarine or butter |
| 1 1/2 teaspoons crushed rosemary | 1/2 cup cooking oil |
| | Lemon wedges |

Thaw fish if frozen. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Combine bread crumbs, walnuts, rosemary, marjoram, and thyme. Roll fillets in flour, dip in egg, and roll in crumb mixture. Heat margarine and oil in a fry pan until hot, but not smoking. Place fish in pan and fry at a moderate heat for 4 to 5 minutes or until browned. Turn carefully and fry 4 to 5 minutes longer or until fish is browned and flakes easily when tested with a fork. Drain on absorbent paper. Serve with lemon wedges. Makes 6 servings.

PORTUGUESE FISHERMAN'S STEW

- | | |
|---|--|
| 2 pounds striped bass fillets or other fillets, fresh or frozen | 1 teaspoon leaf basil |
| 1 tablespoon margarine or butter | 1 teaspoon leaf thyme |
| 1 cup chopped onion | 1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper |
| 1 clove garlic, crushed | 1 tablespoon salt |
| 2 cans (1 pound each) tomatoes, undrained, cut up | 4 cups pumpkin or winter squash, cut into 1 inch cubes |
| 3 cups water | 2 ears corn, cut crosswise into 1 inch pieces |

Thaw fish if frozen. Cut fish into 1 inch cubes. In a large saucepan melt margarine. Add onion and garlic and cook until vegetables are tender. Add tomatoes, water, basil, thyme, red pepper, salt, pumpkin, and corn. Cover and bring to a boil; simmer to 10 to 15 minutes or until pumpkin and corn are done. Add fish and continue to cook for 5 to 10 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Makes 12 cups.

NOTE: Any left over stew may be frozen for future use.

IOWA BAKED CATFISH

- | | |
|---|--|
| 6 skinned, pan dressed catfish or other fish, fresh or frozen | 1 1/2 cups fresh bread crumbs |

| 1/2 cup minced green pepper | 1 egg, beaten |
| 1/2 teaspoon salt | 3 slices bacon, cut in half |

Place fish in a well-greased baking pan, 15 by 10 by 1 inch. In a skillet cook bacon until lightly browned. Remove bacon from skillet reserving 2 tablespoons bacon drippings. Add onion and green pepper and cook until vegetables are tender. Stir in salt, pepper, bread crumbs, cream style corn, whole kernel corn, egg, and cooked bacon. Stuff fish loosely with mixture. Place one half slice of bacon on top of each fish. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 25 to 30 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Makes 6 servings.

SANDY BOG FILLETS

TEXAS-STYLE barbecued turkey, along with pinto beans, is a favorite summer party menu for Peg Golden and her husband, Ron.

Texans big on barbecued turkey

by LOIS SEILER

Living in Austin, Tex., for three years inspired Peggy and Ron Golden to use their grill on a regular basis, cooking up until snow flies. "Texans barbecue everything, and so do we," Peg said. The Mount Prospect couple grills every type of roast, including leg o' lamb, in their kettle cooker, and turkey is a common entree.

"Turkey adapts itself to any type of entertaining," Peg said. "You can serve it as an elegant dinner with wine, fine china and crystal, or for a casual meal with beer."

She and Ron devised their own sauce for barbecued turkey. They just mixed and tasted until it suited them. The sauce has a margarine base seasoned with Worcestershire sauce, dry mustard, vinegar and brown sugar.

The Goldenes also use the sauce on roast pork, and after adding a can of tomato sauce, also on chicken and spareribs.

AT TEXAS barbecues, pinto beans are traditional so Peg learned to make them too. After soaking, the beans are cooked with bacon, onion and garlic, and a thick sauce develops. Tomato sauce may be added.

Pinto beans are milder in flavor than baked beans, and Peg recommends them as an accompaniment for the turkey, or with beef, chicken, spareribs, hot dogs or just about anything. They are a great favorite of the Goldenes' three children.

Leftovers can be used in chili, or they can be mashed and fried in bacon grease to make Mexican frijoles (refried beans).

Another Texas specialty, Baked Lima beans, are cooked until soft but firm, then baked in a sauce of margarine, dry mustard, molasses, brown sugar and sour cream.

EITHER OF THESE savory bean dishes may be served with the barbecued turkey, along with a green vegetable, tossed salad and crusty bread.

In addition to grilling, Peg likes to prepare ethnic food, and often tries to duplicate interesting dishes she is served in restaurants. She and Ron also belong to a dinner group.

Sewing is another of Peg's hobbies. She makes all of her own clothes and some of her children's. Active in civic affairs, she is on the school board of District 26, and serves as second vice president of Bond School PTA.

BARBECUED TURKEY

Salt and pepper a 10-pound turkey inside and out. Make a large bed of coals on each side of kettle cooker with a drip pan in the middle, about 20 coals on either side. Place turkey on center of rack. Keep vents closed most of the way to provide slow, even heat. Time cooking according to directions on wrapper, or three hours for a 10-pound turkey. During last hour, baste with the following sauce:

- 1/4 pound margarine
- 4 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
- 4 level tablespoons brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- 1 tablespoon dry mustard
- Garlic and cayenne to taste

Mix all ingredients together over heat until well-blended. Baste turkey about every 15 minutes during last hour of grilling. (An 8-ounce can tomato sauce may be added to the above sauce and used for barbecued spareribs and chicken.)

PINTO BEANS

- 1 pound pinto beans, washed and sorted
- 1/2 pound raw bacon, cut in bite-size pieces
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 3 large cloves garlic, chopped
- 1 tablespoon salt
- Pepper to taste

Put beans into a 3-quart pan. Fill with cold water. Bring to a boil, remove from heat and let soak for two hours or overnight. Drain.

Fill pot with fresh cold water to cover beans. Add remaining ingredients, bring to a boil, cover and simmer until soft, about two hours. Serves 8 to 10.

Canned tomatoes or tomato sauce may be added to the beans, if desired. Leftovers may be used in chili, or they can be mashed and fried in bacon grease to make refried beans.

BAKED LIMA BEANS

- 1 pound dry lima beans, washed and sorted
- 1 tablespoon baking soda
- 1/4 pound margarine
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1 tablespoon dry mustard
- 1 tablespoon molasses
- (light or dark)
- 3/4 cup brown sugar
- 1 cup dairy sour cream

Place beans in a 3-quart saucepan. Cover with water and bring to a boil. Remove from heat and add baking soda. Stir, drain and rinse twice.

Immediately cover beans with water, bring to a boil and cook, covered, until beans are soft but still firm. Drain and place in baking dish.

Melt margarine and add remaining ingredients. Mix thoroughly. Pour mixture over limas. Bake, covered, 45 minutes at 325 degrees. Serves 8 to 10.

Delicacy from old spuds

Don't ever ask a French waiter for vichyssoise. He's apt to give you Vichy water. Vichyssoise is a 1917 invention of Louis Diat, chef at New York's Ritz-Carlton Hotel. Necessity was the mother of his invention. He had a lot of leftover potatoes and wondered what to do with them. The result was the cold potato soup with the ultra-fancy name.

The House Soup is a fancy name for the popular bean soup served in the U.S. House of Representatives restaurant. It's been on the menu since 1904.

A Western sandwich can be ordered in the East or South, but in the West it's called a Denver.

We used to joke about cottage cheese and say it was made from a cottage because it tasted like a piece of the plaster walls. Actually, it got its name because it was the kind of cheese housewives first made in their farm cottages. Their cottage cheese was dry and sour tasting and it stuck to the roof of your mouth. (Do you think some plaster really did fall into it?) It's a far cry from today's creamed and moist dairy product.

by Jarvis Rice

A final note: The hot dog is, after all, the noblest of all dogs. It feeds the hand that bites it.

Beef prices down again

Middleman's cut gets larger

Beef prices continued to decline for the third consecutive month. The Herald's monthly price survey of five area food stores taken Sept. 1 indicated.

However, beef prices would have been about nine cents a pound cheaper throughout August if middlemen's charges for processing and marketing had not risen substantially the preceding year, a U.S. Dept. of Agriculture report shows.

The report, a monthly calculation of the spread between farm and retail food prices for a typical farm food market basket, recently appeared on the heels of renewed government forecasts that most retail food price increases in 1976 and early 1977 will come from rising middlemen's margins rather than increased returns to farmers.

AGRICULTURE department analysts said in a report last week that retail food prices during the first six months of 1977 may average three to four per cent above a year earlier, "with most of the rise due to wider marketing spreads and higher prices for fish, coffee and away-from-home eating."

In the monthly report on farm-to-retail price spreads, meanwhile, officials estimated that farmer's returns on a typical food market basket in July were 8.5 per cent below a year

Price comparisons

Following are average prices for several items surveyed last week, six months ago and a year ago. In each case the averages are based on prices obtained from a representative mix of area food stores.

	Sept. 1976	March, 1976	Sept. 1975
Lean ground beef, per lb.	$.78	$.74	$.88
Round Steak, with bone, per lb.	1.20	1.31	1.71
Chicken, whole-fryer, per lb.	.53	.49	.71
Pork center cut chops, per lb.	1.72	1.54	1.99
Milk, 1 gallon	1.52	1.49	1.37
Land O'Lakes butter, 1 lb.	1.35	1.06	1.05
Margarine, house brand, 1 lb.	.37	.33	.45 earlier while the middleman's share was up 4.5 per cent.

The report showed that retail beef prices last month were down 2.6 cents a pound. The Herald survey noted drops of 10 cents a pound for lean ground beef and 11 cents a pound for round steak, compared to the Aug. 3 survey. T-bone steaks held steady in price.

THE USDA REPORT indicated pork was up slightly from a month ago but was still under the 1975 average. However, the local survey showed prices steady with a month ago, and 30 cents a pound less than last year.

Chicken fryers were down slightly in price from August readings and for the first time in nearly two years turkeys were moving into plentiful supply and should show price declines in following months. New crop marketings of turkey are about five per cent more than a year ago and nine per cent above the September 1973-1975 average, according to the USDA.

And good news is also in store for lamb eaters. Favorable weather and excellent feed conditions throughout the Rocky Mountain area are providing some of the highest quality lambs seen in years. According to Evandina Hammersley, American Lamb Council, the consumer can expect larger and meatier cuts of lamb during the next few months.

HOWEVER, FOOD prices were not encouraging in other areas of the store.

September milk production, which is still in a seasonal decline, continues to push the price of butter, margarine and cheese up over last month. Coffee also increased another 30 cents per two pound can, compared to August readings.

But the bumper grain crops last year are finally affecting some of the prices, notably flour and dried cereals. Flour dropped five cents per five pounds from last month and eight cents from March readings. The 18-ounce box of corn flakes was three cents under a year ago.

Besides dried groceries, The Herald surveyed some fresh fruits and vegetables.

FRESH POTATOES will be coming to market in late September in greater numbers than last year, largely as a result of a 10 per cent increased fall crop acreage.

Bartlett pear production in California, Washington and Oregon is up eight per cent from last year. The initial U.S. forecast of the 1976 grape crop is a record, with table variety grapes in California predicted at 13 per cent above last season.

Although cantaloupes are fast approaching their seasonal end, prices remained high as of the Sept. 1 survey, averaging a cent more than a month ago. Sweet corn showed the same trend, while medium-sized California peaches increased slightly in price. Vine ripened tomatoes retailed at the same level as last month.

Moving into market with potatoes, and pears are cauliflower, apples, pomegranates, coconuts, turnips and rutabagas. Honeydew melons and garlic should reach their peak this month.

Raw product prices drop sharply

by BERNARD BRENNER

Average prices for raw farm products, a rough indicator of consumer food price behavior to come, took their sharpest drop in more than two years during the month ended Aug. 15, the Agriculture Department reported Tuesday.

The net decline of four per cent was paced by lower prices for commodities ranging from cattle and hogs to wheat, corn and soybeans. Only milk, eggs, fruit and vegetables went up at the farm level.

It was the biggest decrease for a single month since June, 1974, and left the average four per cent below the same period a year ago. Increases had been registered in April, May and June of this year, with nosix per cent above a year earlier. But change in July.

The farm price average, which often fluctuates dramatically from month to month, gives an approximate reading on whether supermarket prices will go up or down, although the effect can be delayed or diluted for products which must be processed or which are fed to livestock.

ADMINISTRATION EXPERTS are predicting that retail food prices for 1976 will average three to four per cent above last year, less than half the 1975 advance, and continue upward at about that rate in the first half of 1977.

Officials said farmers' costs declined one-half of one per cent during the month ended Aug. 15, and were since farm prices dropped faster than costs, farm returns slumped to 71 per cent of the "fair" parity standard compared with 73 per cent in July and 78 per cent in August, 1975.

An index of cattle and hog prices fell six per cent during the month and was eight per cent below a year earlier. Beef cattle slumped from $33.50 per hundred-weight in mid-June to $32.80 in mid-August, compared with $32.30 a year earlier.

Administration economists have predicted that cattle prices will rise later this year and in 1977 because farmers, who have been losing $65 to $100 a head at current prices, are cutting back production.

South of the border food proper on this holiday

If you have a craving for Mexican food, don't put it off until manana. The perfect occasion for a Mexican feast is at hand — the celebration of Mexican Independence Day Sept. 16, a happy holiday for both our neighbors south of the border and Americans of Mexican descent.

"The food of Mexico is colorful, satisfying and frugal, so you can prepare an Independence Day dinner that's easy on your budget. You'll find the ingredients available in your supermarket."

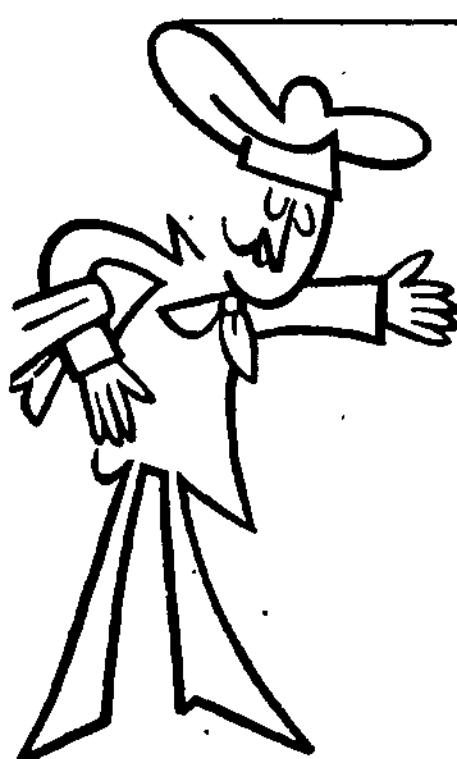

For the menu, home economists for Rosarita Mexican Foods Co. suggest Flautas del Norte, which are tortillas rolled and baked around a spiced meat filling and topped with sour cream; Tortilla Dumpling Soup, refried beans, a traditional Mexican side dish available canned; and a tossed green salad.

FLAUTAS DEL NORTE
12 frozen or refrigerated Flour or Stone-Grained Corn Tortillas
1 package (10 ounces) bulk sausage
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1/3 cup shredded process Cheddar cheese
2 ounces cream cheese
1/4 teaspoon dried marjoram
1/3 cup dairy sour cream
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened

In skillet heat tortillas until slightly brown and soft. Combine sausage, onion, Cheddar and cream cheeses, and marjoram. Mix well.

Place two tablespoons sausage filling down center of each tortilla; roll up. Place in 11 by 7 by 2 inch baking dish. Bake, covered, in 375 degree oven for 35 minutes. Mix sour cream and butter, spoon over filled tortillas. Serves 4.

TORTILLA DUMPLING SOUP
12 Stone Ground Corn Tortillas
1/2 cup milk
1 small onion, chopped fine
1 clove garlic, chopped fine
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 egg, lightly beaten
2 egg yolks
Salt and pepper
Cooking oil

Workers should cook in quantity

For many women who feel they have been lost on a sea of diapers and housework for too many years, the first step toward finding another identity is finding a job.

Temporary employment may be the answer for a lot of women. The jobs offered through temporary employment agencies last only a few days. The commitment of time and energy isn't final. There's the chance to back off if the work becomes too much.

This kind of arrangement also gives a chance to experiment with different kinds of jobs and social situations.

"MANY WOMEN who come to us for the first time are so hesitant,"

The working woman cooks
by Joyce Zeller

says Lou Ann Blair of Blair Temporarily, Palatine. "They're afraid that things have changed and the office machines are different. They don't realize that the same things matter now that used to be important — things like being dependable and getting to work on time, being willing to give a day's work for a day's pay, knowing how to organize time and get the job done. Mature women have common sense and employers are willing to pay them for it."

So go ahead and try it. And don't worry about getting organized in the kitchen. If you're going to cook at all, you should cook a lot and make it stretch for a couple of meals. For instance, lamb has been on sale lately and it can be made to last for three meals.

• Meal one: Roast Leg of Lamb, make preferably on the weekend so you can do it in the oven with just a little garlic powder and salt and pepper. Save all gravy and bones.

• Meal two: Curried Lamb. This you make by gathering up all the pieces of left-over meat and blending it with all-purpose Curry Sauce, which you make by mixing one can of condensed cream of mushroom soup with one can of condensed cream of chicken soup and one tablespoon of curry powder. Serve over rice.

• Meal three: Lamb Lentil Soup.

LAMB LENTIL SOUP

Lamb bones and leftover meat of Curried Lamb
1 tablespoon Morton's Nature's Seasons
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1 cup diced celery
1 cup diced potatoes
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup diced carrots
1 1/2 quarts water
1 cup dried lentils, washed

Put all ingredients except lentils in a slow cooker on low for at least eight hours or until vegetables are done. Meanwhile, place lentils with two cups water in saucepan; cook about a half hour until tender. One hour before serving, turn slow cooker to high and stir in mixture of two tablespoons melted butter and two tablespoons flour to bind juices. Simmer until slightly thickened. Add cooked and drained lentils and serve. Serves 6.

Note: Lentils may be added dry with rest of the ingredients to pre-nutrients and save extra dish to wash. However, the color of the soup may be slightly gray.

Heat system saves energy

A food service firm in Los Angeles has designed a heat transference system for a Pittsburgh restaurant that recirculates kitchen heat back into the restaurant and adjoining mall for heating purposes.

The firm says 50 per cent of the heat is recoverable. That's equivalent to 300,000 BTU's per hour, or enough energy to heat 10 apartments or four tract homes for an hour, said Gerald Surfas, founder and president of Surfas, Inc.

Consumers rate labels

Slightly more than 50 per cent of shoppers find nutritional information on food product labels very useful, but 20 to 25 per cent think such information may be of little or no use, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

In a recent survey of over 1,400 shoppers throughout the United States, by the Department's Economic Research Service (ERS) shoppers were asked to rate the usefulness of nine types of label information.

Survey results show that 90 per cent of the shoppers believe prices and freshness or open dates on food packages are very useful. Less than five per cent regard them as of little or no use.

Uniform names and descriptions of meat cuts in all stores are considered to be very useful by 70 per cent of the shoppers, while 15 per cent give the opposite opinion.

SLIGHTLY FEWER shoppers believe ingredient information and storage instructions are very useful. About 65 per cent believe they are, while 15 per cent regard the information as not too useful.

Name of the food manufacturer, nutritional information and unit pricing are three items that only slightly over half the shoppers believe to be very useful. Between 20 and 25 per cent think they are of little or no use.

Drained weight information on foods packed in liquids is regarded as very useful by only 30 per cent of shoppers. Almost 50 per cent believe it would be of little or no use.

These are early results from a study currently underway by the Economic Research Service to determine information that would be helpful to consumers in making food purchasing decisions. Additional results will be released late this year.

Prospectors popularize sourdough

by GAYNOR MADDOX

My great grandfather was a sourdough. He crossed the plains on horseback arriving in San Francisco in 1849 on the way North seeking gold. As the 49'ers usually carried containers of sourdough with them to assure good bread during their prospecting, gold seekers soon became known as sourdoughs.

Today sourdough bread from San Francisco is probably the most famous. It contains fewer ingredients than most breads and is the most difficult to bake. But get your hands on a loaf of real sourdough bread and you'll agree it is a glorious thing to eat.

HOWEVER, SOURDOUGH is not limited to San Francisco. Recently I received a small loaf of sourdough bread made in Seattle. It was remarkable for its crisp crust and tender yet tough inside. Served slightly warm, with butter, strawberry jam and coffee, it made an ideal breakfast.

At the turn of the century when Jake O'Shaughnessy, a convivial roustabout, ran a saloon in Seattle, thousands of Yankees relished his excellent meals and drink before pushing on to the North. His sourdough bread was sensational.

The saloon is now reestablished by Timothy Finstahl, a knowledgeable restaurateur. He's written a cookbook, calling it "Jake O'Shaughnessy's Sourdough Book" after much research on the wholesome and satisfying bread of the gold pioneers. (Paperback, San Francisco Book Co. — Simon & Schuster, $4.95.)

FINSTAHLE contends that the secret to all sourdough baking lies in the starter.

"It is a simple combination of flour and water containing a large number of live, wild yeast cells. Two cautions: Do not use a metal container (the wild yeast acids may corrode it). Instead choose a one-quart glass, wood, crockery or polyethylene container with a lid that is not airtight (the yeasts need air to live). Don't be alarmed by the look or smell of the sourdough as it ferments — it is the natural 'headiness' of the starter that will translate into a full-bodied flavor," he says.

Preparing and nurturing the starter: Thoroughly wash the container. Mix a one-fourth-ounce packet of dry yeast with 2 cups of flour and 1 and one-half cups of warm water. Stir and set aside in a warm place for three days. At the end of this period your starter will be bubbly and will smell of yeast touched with alcohol. You will then have 2 cups of starter to put to task. Keep it in the refrigerator and be sure to replenish it (or feed it) as follows everytime you use it: for every cup of starter removed, add a cup of flour and three-fourths cup of water, which, when mixed, equals about one cup. Now you are ready to use the starter as the basis for all sour dough baking.

His book gives recipes for many sourdough specialties including a thorough instruction on making sourdough bread.

Two unions, city OK 6% pay increase

by JOE FRANZ

Des Plaines and two of three employe unions have ratified a two-year contract giving city workers a 6 per cent wage hike this year and a cost-of-living increase next year.

The contract has been accepted by the Des Plaines Professional Firefighters Assn. and the local chapter of the Combined Counties Police Assn. The local chapter of the Assn. of Independent Municipal Employees was scheduled to vote on the contract pact Wednesday night.

The three unions represent about 300 of the city's 400 employees.

UNDER THE CONTRACT, approved unanimously by the city council Tuesday night, the 6 per cent raise for employees will be retroactive to May 1, the date when the contract with the three unions expired. The new two-year contract will expire April 30, 1978.

Mayor Charles J. Bolek said the pay raise will increase the city payroll by about $360,000 a year. City employees last year received an 8.5 per cent increase in salary and fringe benefits that cost the city about $310,000 a year.

"This raise should not affect the budget because we estimated a 6 per cent raise for employees when preparing the budget," Bolek said.

In addition to the immediate pay raise, the union employees under the new contract will receive a cost of living raise May 1, 1977 based on the percentage increase in the federal Consumer Price Index from January 1976 to January 1977.

UNDER THE NEW contract, city employees will receive step pay increases on merit rather than on an automatic basis. The new policy for giving step increases will take effect May 1, 1977 for the public works department, Jan. 1, 1977 for the fire department and June 1, 1977 for the police department.

Bolek said all of the city's supervisory personnel will attend seminars on the new system for granting step increases to employees.

"The criteria to be used to determine whether a merit increase is justified will be explained at the meetings," he said.

The merit system for granting step increases was recommended by Hay Associates, Chicago, a consulting firm, hired earlier this year to study the city's salary system.

BOLEK SAID UNDER the new contract employees will continue to receive longevity pay raises after 10, 15 and 20 years of service, but the amounts will be frozen at current levels. There are no significant changes in fringe benefits for employees.

Under the contract, no employees will receive reductions in salary, but starting salaries of new public works employees will be reduced by 5 per cent. Thus, with the 6 per cent pay increase, the starting salary in reality will increase only 1 per cent.

The new contract does not cover the city's 100 nonunion employees, but Bo-

by United Press International

A Cook County judge Wednesday cleared Michael Howlett, the Democratic candidate for governor, of conflict-of-interest charges concerning his controversial part-time job with Sun Steel Corp.

"My client is vindicated," said Howlett's attorney, Don H. Reuben, after Circuit Court Judge Raymond K. Berg announced his decision.

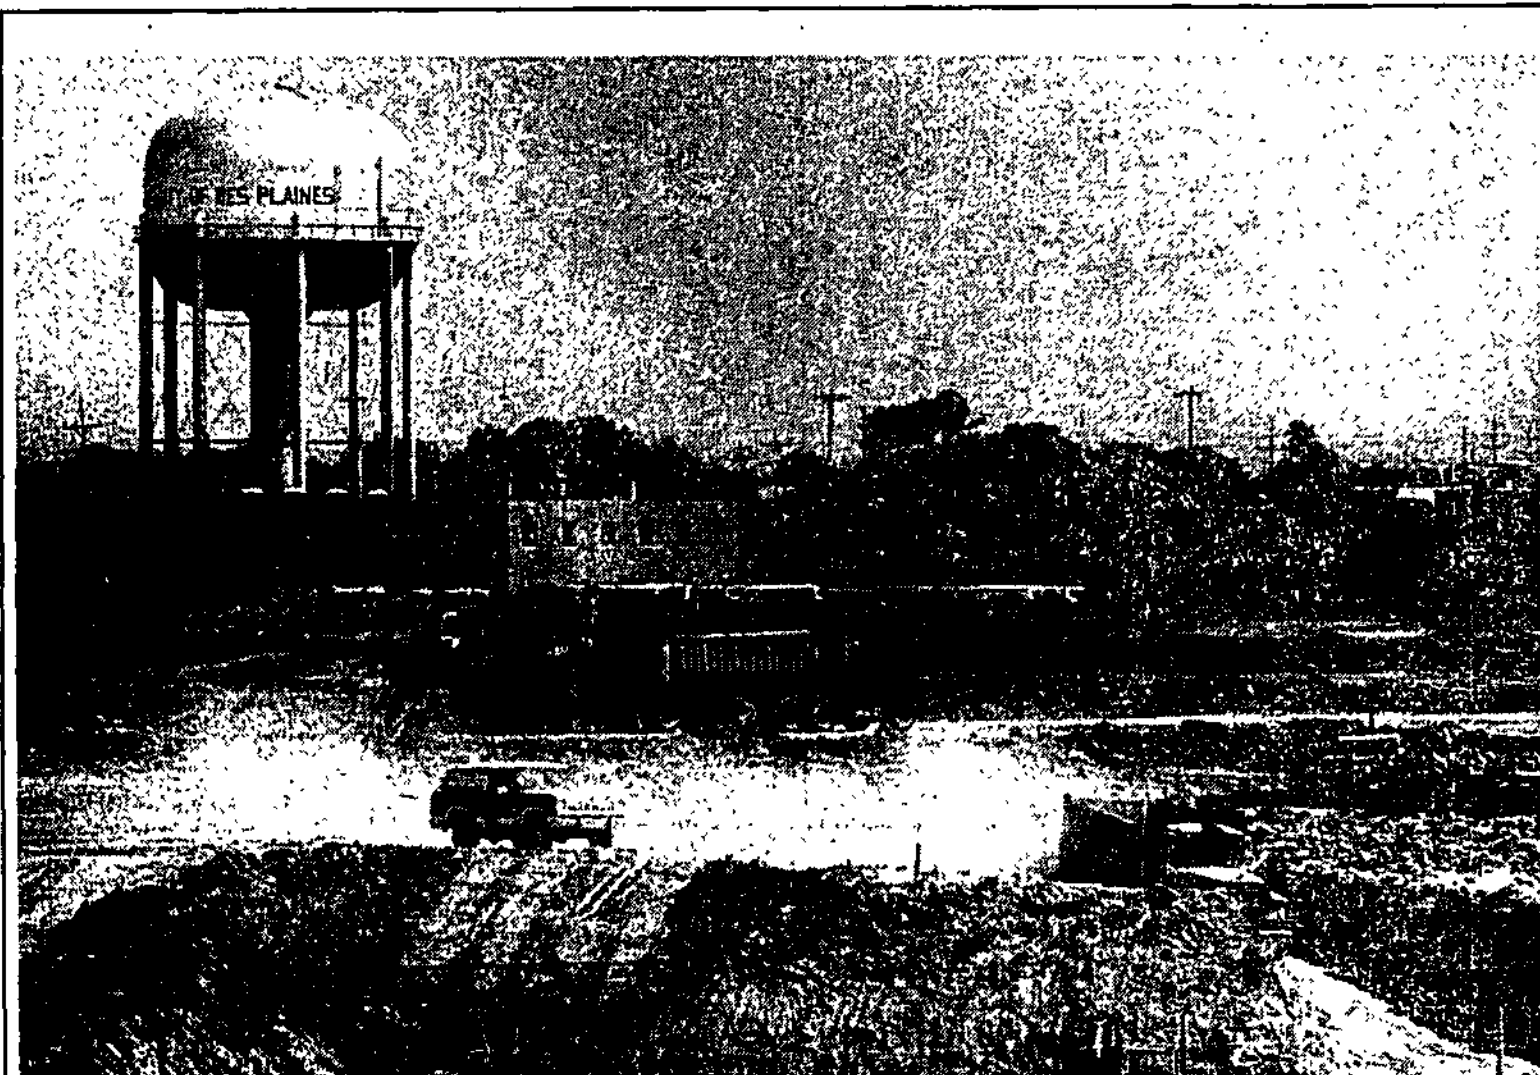

Berg rejected as "erroneous and unlawful" the conflict charges contained in a report ordered by Atty. Gen. William Scott.

IN THE REPORT, former Illinois Supreme Court Justice Marvin F. Burt said Howlett had put himself in a "posture of conflict" by holding a consultant job with Sun Steel while serving as chairman of the state's vehicle recycling board, which deals with scrap iron.

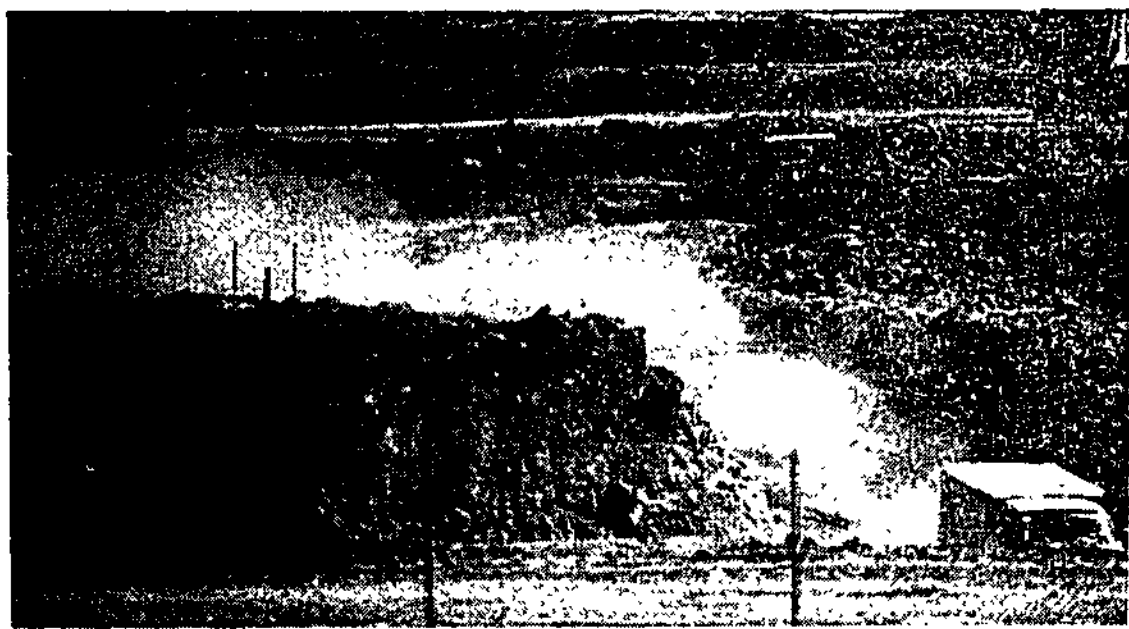

"If a posture of conflict were held to be the standard, all public officials would have been, are or will be, in conflict," Berg ruled.

During the primary campaign, Howlett acknowledged he had held a $15,000-a-year job as consultant to Sun Steel, a Chicago Heights firm, for 15 years. The period of the alleged conflict stretched from Sept. 14, 1973,

Former Wheeling Township committeeman

U.S. to grant Stavros his parole today

by TONI GINETTI

James Stavros resumes life as a free man today for the first time in more than two years.

The former Wheeling political king, whose reign by extortion led to a federal indictment, a guilty plea and four-year prison sentence, was released from a Chicago halfway house to begin parole.

Stavros, 48, had been assigned to the Community Treatment Center, 828 S. Wabash St., Chicago, since July 1 while awaiting parole. During that time Stavros participated in a work release program, returning to the facility in the evenings.

ROBERT THOMPSON, director of the Community Treatment Center, Wednesday said Stavros would be released and placed under the supervision of the U.S. Parole Commission. Stavros' probation officer, Ron Kunke, said Wednesday he would meet with the former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman "shortly" to determine how often Stavros will report to him.

"He's listed some employment," Kunke added, but he said the information was "confidential" and declined to discuss it.

Court documents filed earlier this year in U.S. District Court by Stavros' attorney Thomas Foran cited employment as owner and manager of the J & J Farm near Woodstock as a proposed condition of parole.

STAVROS WILL report to probation authorities until the termination of his four-year sentence imposed in June 1974 by U.S. District Judge Hubert L. Will.

Stavros was the principle target of a 1973 U.S. Justice Dept. investigation into shakedowns of developers in Wheeling. He was indicted Jan. 31, 1974 along with three other village officials on charges of extortion, perjury and income tax evasion.

He served two years of the four-year sentence at the Federal Correctional Institution at Sandstone, Minn. Repeated efforts by Stavros to win parole were fruitless until June 17 when the U.S. Parole Commission agreed to his conditional release.

U.S. Justice Dept. officials who prosecuted the case against him described Stavros as a hardened strong-arm boss who often threatened bodily harm to developers who did not meet extortion demands.

Court records filed in December by Foran indicate Stavros owes some $17,500 in unpaid taxes for 1969 and 1970.

Internal Revenue Service spokesmen were unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Dist. 26 wrapup

Nipper principal resigns position

Edward Finn, who had been recommended by the River Trails Dist. 26 Board of Education for employment as principal of Nipper School, has decided not to accept the position.

Finn's name was removed from a list of Dist. 26 personnel whose employment was approved at Tuesday night's board meeting.

Finn had already begun working at Nipper, said board member Sylvia Lurie. "He was there for a couple of days. At the last minute he decided he couldn't — or his family couldn't — make the move," she said. The family lives in East Lansing, Mich.

Nipper School, 1101 E. Gregory, Des Plaines is owned by Dist. 26, but the board has recently agreed to lease the school to the Northwest Suburban Special Education Cooperative which is supported by 10 area school districts. Dist. 26 is still in charge of finding a principal for the school.

No stand on Tully proposal

The board voted to take no action on a request by the Illinois Assn. of School Boards to oppose a proposal by Cook County Assessor Thomas Tully calling for the reduction of the rate at which single-family homes are assessed.

Under the proposal, the assessment rate would be cut from 22 per cent to 16 per cent of the fair market value. The cut could lower taxes, but could also lower the amount of money school districts receive.

Mrs. Lurie called Tully's plan "a political numbers game." She said the assessor's office sets fair market value as well as assessment rates, and can set the fair market value at a "real figure" or a "ludicrous figure."

Leora Rosen, board president, said the board has taken no action concerning the proposal because of uncertainty about its advantages and disadvantages to the district.

Although the current assessment is 22 per cent, Mrs. Rosen said according to the Wheeling Township assessor's office, Dist. 26 has been underassessed and has received only a 12 per cent assessment.

"Therefore, if the assessment were changed to 16 per cent and we got 16 per cent, we'd realize a big increase," she said.

City, 2 unions OK 6% pay hike for employees

lek said he expects the city council to grant them the same pay raises and benefits as the union employees.

The mayor said he is pleased with the contract package and added the hiring of professional negotiators by the city helped bring about a faster and better settlement for the city. The city council earlier this year hired the firm of Seyfarth, Shaw, Fairweather and Geraldson, Chicago, to negotiate for the city.

"I THINK THE important thing here is that we have a two-year agreement," Bolek said. "That means we won't be haggling over these things every year."

"I think it is to the mutual advantage of the city and employees because it will add some degree of stability," he said. "I hope next time we can negotiate for a three-year contract."

A spokesman for the public works union Wednesday said he would not comment on the new contract until union members voted. Officials from the fire and police unions could not be reached for comment.

The city and employee unions reached agreement last year in October after calling in a federal mediator to make a recommendation on a contract pact.

Dist. 59 seat sought by six

Six candidates are seeking a vacant position on the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education. Friday is the last day residents can apply for the seat.

Donald Zommer, 817 Delphia, Elk Grove Village, applied this week for the position vacant because of the resignation of Lynne Helvie.

Candidates who applied earlier include: Sharon Chavon, 641C Burgundy Ct., Elk Grove Village; Erwin Poklacki, 1223 S. Fernandez, Arlington Heights; Gerald Smiley, 1168 Cheltenham Rd., Elk Grove Village; Lynn Clapper, 1523 S. Kaspar, Arlington Heights; and Saul Cohen, 312 Dorchester Ln., Elk Grove Village.

ZOMMER IS OWNER of Wildon Co., a metal and wire fabricating firm, and has lived in the district for 12 years. He is married, has four children and is a foster parent for two children.

Zommer is a former president of the Elk Grove Village Jaycees and is active with the Elk Grove Village United Fund Board and the Elk Grove Village Community Services Board.

"I feel my past and current activities and my interest in children make me a good candidate for the position," he said.

Smiley and Poklacki are former Dist. 59 board members. Mrs. Chavon has served as president of the Marshall School PTC and Mrs. Clapper is a member of the Dist. 59 communications committee.

Cohen said he is seeking the position because he feels his background as a certified public accountant would be a valuable asset to the board.

City OKs levy; no tax hike seen

The Des Plaines City Council has approved a 1976 tax levy that is 1.2 per cent higher than last year, but it is not expected to increase the city's 1977 tax rate.

The tax levy ordinance is for $4,178,625, an increase of $49,120 from 1975. It was approved unanimously by the city council Monday night.

City Comptroller Duane L. Biletz said although the tax levy is higher than last year, city officials do not expect the city's property tax rate to increase next year.

"We're levying this based on last year's 1.2 per cent increase in the assessed valuation," he said. "We're expecting a similar increase next year."

"THE ACTUAL dollars we'll be getting will be more, but the additional money should come because of an increase in the assessed valuation which comes from new building construction," he said. "We're trying to freeze the tax rate so everybody's tax will stay the same next year."

He said the city property tax rate, however, could change if the assessed valuation does not change as anticipated by city officials. If the assessed valuation goes up less than 1.2 per cent, the city property tax rate will increase. If it rises more than 1.2 per cent, the tax rate will decrease.

"It's really a guess on our part because we don't know what the county is going to do with the assessed valuation," Biletz said. The county is proposing a 30 per cent to 40 per cent increase in assessments this year. However, homes would be taxed on the basis of 16 per cent of the assessed value, rather than the current 22 per cent.

The city's property tax rate now is about $1.04 per $100 of assessed valuation. A property owner with a home assessed at $10,000 pays about $104 a year in city property taxes.

THE CITY PORTION of the property tax represents about 12 per cent of the total property tax paid by residents. The remainder of the property tax goes to school districts, the park district, the township and other taxing districts.

Although the city's tax rate is not expected to increase, the total property tax bill for residents could go up if other taxing districts increase their tax rates.

Real estate taxes are only one source of income for the city. Other revenue comes from sales tax, permits and fees, business and vehicle licenses, court fines, parking fees, motor fuel taxes, federal revenue sharing, state income tax and charges for services, such as garbage pickup.

Council trims treasurer's duties

The next city treasurer in Des Plaines will work for less money and have fewer responsibilities as a result of a city council decision to make the job part-time.

The city council Tuesday voted unanimously to adopt a recommendation by the city code and judiciary committee to reduce the annual salary of the city treasurer from $12,000 to $1,800.

City officials also plan to conduct meetings to determine how to reduce the treasurer's responsibilities. The changes will take effect after the April 1977 municipal election.

IN THE PAST FEW years, city officials have talked about abolishing the city treasurer's post or making it a part-time job. Proponents of the move contend all or most of the treasurer's duties could be assumed by the city comptroller's office.

The city council in November 1974 rejected a proposal to allow voters to decide on abolishing the post.

City Treasurer Thomas Mahon was elected in 1973 on a platform that he would accept only $6,000 a year and work to eliminate the post.

Mahon, who will be a candidate for mayor in 1977, said the city should make the treasurer's job part-time until 1979, and then conduct a referendum to decide whether it should be abolished. He suggested the treasurer's salary be reduced to between $2,500 and $3,000 a year.

Plans for Lincoln County delayed until '78: Regner

by LUISA GINETTI

The creation of Lincoln County must remain a dream at least until 1978 because of a legal technicality which prevents the question from being placed on the Nov. 2 ballot.

State Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, said Wednesday the deadline has passed for submitting petitions to have the matter on the ballot this year. Regner and Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones last week announced the start of a Lincoln County petition drive saying petitions had to be submitted 72 days before the election. He originally thought the deadline was 30 days before the election.

Regner said he plans to begin printing new petitions today in an effort to get the question on the ballot for the next general election in November 1978.

THE PROPOSAL will call for Cook County voters to approve the secession of the 30 suburban townships from the county to form the proposed Lincoln County. The proposal was first offered six years ago by Jones and former Palatine Trustee Merwin E. Soper as a way of ending domination of the suburban area by Chicago

Democrats on the County Board.

Regner said an estimated 500,000 to 600,000 registered voters in the proposed new county must sign the petition in order to get the question on the ballot.

Since the matter surfaced again last week, Regner said the proposal has received "phenomenal interest."

"There's a tremendous amount of interest in it and I've had at least 200 people call me asking about the petitions," he said. Support has come from other suburban legislators as well, he said.

REGNER SAID he also may proceed with plans to introduce legislation in the General Assembly next spring to change the requirements for creating a new county so it can be done by petition without a referendum of the entire affected county.

"It seems sort of ridiculous to have an election if we get a majority of the registered voters in the affected area to say they want to do it," Regner said.

Jones said Wednesday the petition drive will cost money to provide information for "public awareness" of the matter.

"It's almost like running a political campaign," Jones said. "You need workers and you need money."

Jones said the campaign would be greatly enhanced if local Republican organizations would accept the concept and adopt it as their Republican suburban philosophy.

"I THINK WHAT we have to do for long-range strategy is get the committeemen to agree to it," Jones said.

"The suburban area has to wake up to the fact that with 10 Chicago Democrats on the county board and only 10 votes needed to pass legislation, there is taxation without representation," Jones said. "And Chicago should wake up to the fact that they are paying a lot of money for a Cook County sheriff who has no authority in Chicago." Jones has cited the imposition of a county gasoline tax and county liquor tax as examples of Chicago Democrats imposing their authority on the predominantly Republican suburbs.

The Palatine village president, taking the proposal one step further, said he would ultimately like to see the 30 suburban townships break down into five counties comprised of six townships each.

Each of the proposed five counties, Jones said, would have populations of at least 500,000, which is larger than many downstate counties.

Jones has suggested naming the counties Lincoln, Kennedy, Stevenson, Dirksen and Eisenhower.

Helvie fails to get teaching position

Lynne Helvie, a former Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education member who recently resigned her post, lost a bid for a teaching job in the district.

Mrs. Helvie resigned from the board in August to become eligible for a seventh grade language arts teaching post at Lively Junior High School, 999 Leicester Rd., Elk Grove Village.

The board Tuesday, in a 4-2 vote, rejected the administration's recommendation to hire Mrs. Helvie. Board members who voted against the resolution said they questioned the "propriety" of the request.

BOARD MEMBERS Judith Zanca, Avis Wold, Paul Kucharski and Charles Canupp voted against hiring Mrs. Helvie. Barbara Somogyi and

Lynne Helvie

Emil Bahnmaler voted to hire her.

Mrs. Zanca, board president, said, "I think there was a consensus among some board members about the propriety of a board member being given the position."

Mrs. Wold said she voted against the measure because "my personal feeling is, considering the timing and circumstances of it, there were certain improprieties involved. When a board member is applying for a position, it is often a problem."

"It's a touchy situation, but you're dealing with a person's livelihood," Mrs. Somogyi said. "I feel it might be a form of discrimination because she was a board member."

MRS. HELVIE said she was "extremely disappointed" with the board's action.

The district notified her about their recommendation on the position last Thursday and asked her to report for work Friday, she said.

"Then I was called at 6:30 this morning and told not to report at Lively," she said Wednesday. "I hope the board will reconsider its decision. I really wanted to be back in the classroom with the students."

She said she resigned from the board so she could be considered for the position without creating a conflict of interest.

"I then followed the same procedures anyone else would for employment. I tried for three positions," she said. "I think I have just as much a right for employment as anyone else."

A former teacher, Mrs. Helvie served on the board for 1½ years. She has a bachelor's degree in speech and English and a master's degree in guidance and counseling. She also is working on a doctorate in education administration at Northern Illinois University, DeKalb.

Dist. 59 OKs teachers' contract

The Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 teachers contract, which calls for an 8.2 per cent salary increase for the 1976-77 school year, has been approved by the board of education in a 4 to 2 vote.

The board approved the contract Tuesday. The 8.2 per cent salary increase includes a 4 per cent hike for each additional year of teaching experience in Dist. 59.

Board members Avis Wold and Judith Zanca voted against the contract saying the salary settlement was "excessive." Paul Kucharski, Charles Canupp, Emil Bahnmaler and Barbara Somogyi voted for the contract.

MRS. WOLD SAID her vote "is not a vote against the teachers. We have a very hard cold fact of reality — a financial crisis. It's a matter of how we're willing to deal with it."

She said settlements like the one passed "eventually could mean we will all lose the war" of the financial problems.

Mrs. Zanca said the settlement, which sets a base pay of $9,900, is "higher than the surrounding districts. I would have liked to see a more reasonable settlement so we will not have to increase class size. We are going to have to live with these figures for every year from now on."

BASE PAY FOR a teacher with a bachelor's degree and no experience increased from $9,500 to $9,900, with the district's top pay at $20,858.

The contract also includes an early retirement plan, an improved maternity leave policy and a revised reduction-in-force clause for releasing tenured teachers because of declining enrollment and financial problems.

District teachers approved the contract Aug. 30 at a meeting of teachers' unions from the North and Northwest suburbs.

Hug writing new vandalism, pot laws

Ordinances which would make parents responsible for vandalism committed by their children and decriminalize possession of small amounts of marijuana are being prepared by Des Plaines City Atty. Charles Hug.

The Des Plaines City Council ordered Hug to prepare the two measures for final action at the council's Sept. 20 meeting. Both proposals were recommended by the city code and judicial committee.

The vandalism measure will be fashioned after similar laws passed by Deerfield and Northbrook, officials said.

ALDERMEN HAVE suggested that the ordinance affect property damaged by youths 11 to 18 years old. Parents would be potentially responsible for restoring the damaged property plus payment of a fine of not more than $500 per offense.

The fines and restitutions to property owners would be charged under the Des Plaines City Code and set by a court judge. Currently, vandalism offenses come under the jurisdiction of the state criminal code.

Ald. Alan Abrams, 8th, code committee chairman, has said the anti-vandalism ordinance would reduce vandalism to a misdemeanor, but he added it might help curb the vandalism rate.

The state code provides for fines of up to $1,000 for each offense. Abrams has said that while the fines at the state level might be higher, the conviction rate under state law is low.

THE MARIJUANA ordinance would decriminalize possession of under 30 grams of marijuana and place the offense under the city code. Maximum penalty for violators would be set at $500.

Committee members believe handling offenses as misdemeanors at the local level will make enforcement easier for police.

Possession of more than 30 grams of marijuana would be prosecuted under the state criminal code.

Des Plaines is able to pass the two measures because of home-rule provisions of the state constitution. Under home-rule, the city has all powers not specifically prohibited by state or federal law.

Columbo-DeLuca nuptial plans OK'd, delay seen

A judge has approved of the marriage plans of accused killers Patricia Columbo and Frank DeLuca, but prospects of marital bliss for the pair likely will have to wait until January.

Cook County Circuit Court Judge Richard Fitzgerald Wednesday gave permission for Miss Columbo and DeLuca, who are charged with the brutal May 4 slaying of Miss Columbo's Elk Grove Village family, to marry while incarcerated in Cook County Jail.

Robert Iovino, spokesman for the county marriage bureau, however, said Wednesday afternoon a representative of his department probably will not interview county jail inmates wishing to obtain marriage licenses — a pre-nuptial requirement — until January. Marriage licenses for jail inmates last were issued in August, he said.

MISS COLUMBO and DeLuca, a divorced father of five, reportedly were living together in a Lombard apartment at the time of the murders of Frank Columbo, his wife Mary and 13-year-old son, Michael, at their home on 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

Miss Columbo, 20, was arrested and charged May 15 with the shooting, stabbing and bludgeoning murders. DeLuca, 39, and his former wife, Marilyn DeLuca of Addison, were divorced in DuPage County Circuit Court, May 28. DeLuca was arrested for the slayings July 17.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca are being held in lieu of $250,000 bond each. While pretrial procedures were under way Sept. 1, DeLuca reportedly sent a letter to Fitzgerald, which read:

"MY WOMAN IS locked up in Division 3 (the Cook County Jail women's center) and we would like very much to be married. I have contacted a social worker for her help, and she told me I would have to obtain your permission before we could be married."

In a letter addressed to Cook County Jail Supt. Robert E. Glotz, Fitzgerald said he did not think the wedding would interfere with the case against DeLuca and Miss Columbo.

Fitzgerald also asked Glotz to interview the prisoners and make arrangements for blood tests and marriage license applications.

After letters of permission are exchanged among judicial, county clerk and jail officials, inmates wishing to be married are interviewed by a representative of the county marriage bureau, Iovino said.

Miss Columbo met DeLuca at the Walgreen Drug Store where he was manager at Bisterfield and Arlington Heights roads in Elk Grove Village. Miss Columbo dropped out of Elk Grove High School in 1974 to take on a full-time job as a cosmetics sales clerk at the store.

At about the same time, Miss Columbo moved out of her home. She and DeLuca later shared an apartment in Lombard after Miss Columbo and her father reportedly had a falling-out over her romance with DeLuca.

Woman, hit by car, out of hospital

A Des Plaines woman has been released from Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge, after treatment for minor injuries she suffered when she stepped in front of a car and was struck.

Linda M. Pfleger, 28, of 1510 Willow Ave., was injured Tuesday by a car driven by George Antoniadis, 3620 W. Wayne St., Chicago, as she crossed Lee Street at Miner Street.

Des Plaines police reported that witnesses to the accident said the woman was walking against the light when she was struck.

Antoniadis told police he tried to stop his car when he saw the woman, but was unable to avoid hitting her.

Harper panel to submit final report in Lahti case

The final report of a Harper College special committee formed to investigate College Pres. Robert Lahti's alleged violations of college policy will be presented to the Harper Board of Trustees tonight.

Trustee Robert Rausch, the committee chairman, said he was working on the report Wednesday and plans to present it to the full board at its 8 p.m. meeting in the board room of the A building.

The committee was formed in July by Board Pres. Shirley Munson to investigate reports in The Herald and other local newspapers that Lahti misused college vehicles, flew first class in violation of college policy and engaged in unannounced meetings with members of the board.

ANOTHER COMMITTEE that Mrs. Munson formed to investigate possible conflict of interest on Lahti's part regarding his seat on the board of directors of the Bank of Elk Grove, where the college has accounts, reported earlier that Harper followed proper procedure in opening accounts and awarding certificates of deposit.

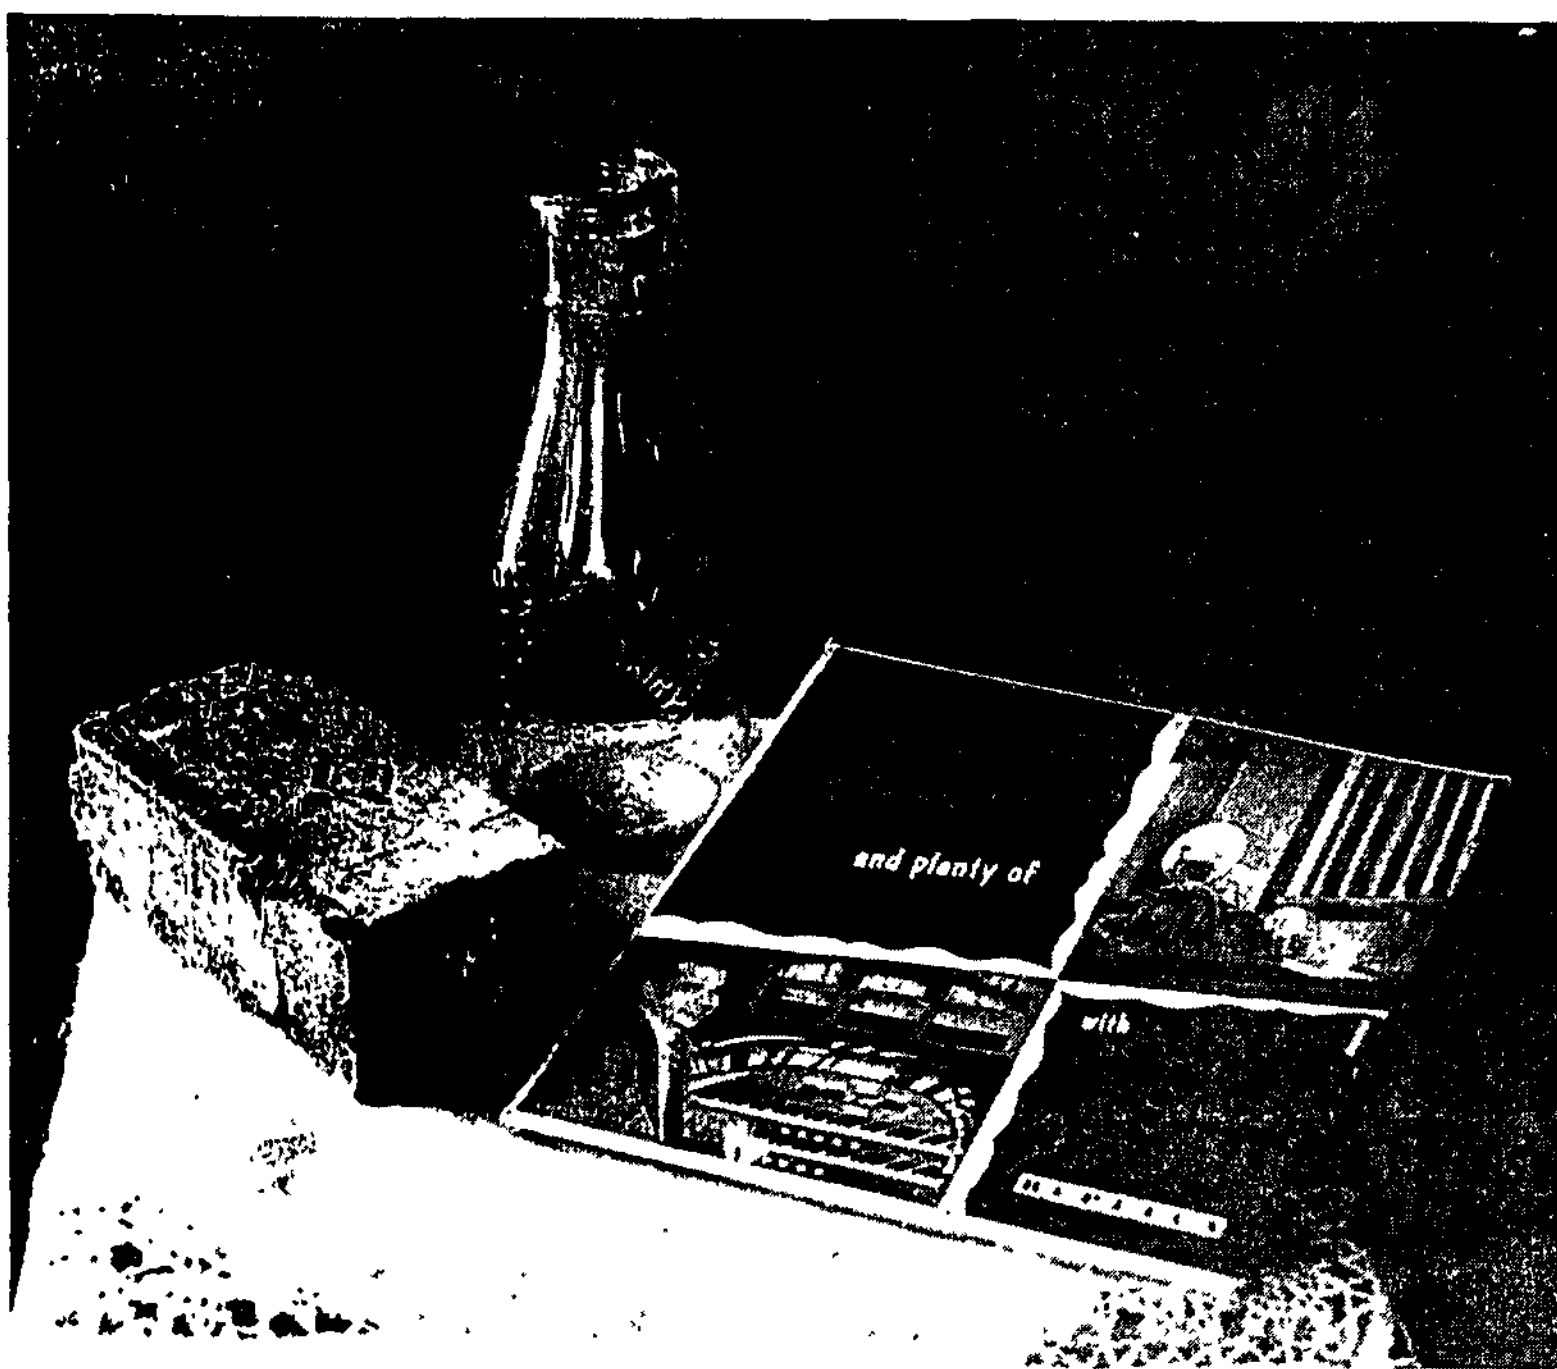

The board also will discuss whether it will spend approximately $100,000 to dredge the man-made lake on the Harper campus, Algonquin and Roselle roads, Palatine.

The lake was built so the college would be able to retain storm water on campus as required by the Metropolitan Sanitary District, said William J. Mann, vice president of administrative services.

Mann said the Lake has been filling with silt because construction work north of the college has caused erosion into a stream that empties into the lake.

Harper's architectural firm, Caudill, Rowlett and Scott, told the board last spring that dredging the lake would cost about $70,000, Mann said, but that estimate did not include the cost of overhead and profit.

Firms have submitted bids for the dredging operation in the $100,000 range, Mann said.

BRICKS, BOTTLES and records are all part of an exhibit being organized by the Des Plaines Historical Society on items produced in the city during the past century.

To end the city's 'identity crisis'

Dusting off memories of the past

by DIANE NERMIGAS

Time was when Des Plaines was the home of Whitcomb bricks, Replica phonograph records, Squire Dingee pickles and a host of other products produced by the family-operated businesses of yesteryear.

There was a time, maybe 50 years ago, when you could stand in the middle of town and sniff the aroma of fresh-baked bread, the fumes of mixed paint, and the scent of roses and dilled pickles all at the same time.

But not anymore.

THE SMALL, family-owned firms that dominated the city's business landscape at the turn of the century either were wiped out in the Depression or replaced by the sprawling, technical giants that were products of World War II.

Those quaint enterprises were part of an obscure past few Des Plaines residents remember now. But the Des Plaines Historical Society is searching for products of the past in an attempt to recreate the commercial heritage of the city.

Director Richard Welsh is asking residents to bring such artifacts and information to the historical society at 777 Leo St. or call 297-4912.

"It will help us to piece together the city's commercial past and gain a better understanding of what was produced, invented and patented here," Welsh said.

WHAT LITTLE the historical society already knows about past companies paints a bustling, productive picture of Des Plaines.

It was the closest of all Northwest suburbs to Chicago and the one point where the Chicago and North Western, the Soo Line and the Milwaukee Road railroads all passed near each other.

"It seemed a perfect place for family-owned businesses that rolled on transportation into the city but wanted a rural atmosphere," he said.

"In fact, it seemed like such a good idea that Riverview, a small village that was once south of Oakton Street and later annexed by the City of Des Plaines, was planned as an industrial area in the late 1890s," Welsh said.

THE KIRK CHALK and Pencil Co., the Columbia Steel Car Works, the James Woolen Mill and the Western Brass Works all were located in the Riverview area.

The Whitcomb and Jones Brickyard was located nearby at Algonquin and River roads. Muddy, brown bricks, stamped with an identifying diamond, were turned out there by the thousands and used to build many of the city's earliest structures, such as the Masonic Temple at Prairie Avenue and Graceland Street.

Des Plaines also had a dairy located at Oakwood and Lee streets, which was in business through the 1950s.

But, the city's biggest businesses of the past included the Benjamin Electric Co., located on Northwest Highway just north of the train tracks, and the Squire Dingee Co. which processed and packed pickles in a plant on Western Avenue near Northwest Highway, he said.

THE REPLICA Record Co. once produced platters in Des Plaines. Long-time residents have donated to the historical society 35 albums whose covers sport a Des Plaines mailing address.

But, no one is really sure where the record company was located. Residents also have said that the Schaefer Piano Factory once was located in the Riverview area, but it burned down before it could open.

"The tales that people are telling us are so interesting. We'd just like to run across something that could lend a little credibility to it," he said.

Welsh does have a 1925 newspaper advertisement for the Blue Ribbon Bakery, once located on Ellinwood near Pearson Street.

The ad lists the bakery's ingredients for bread as including Pillsbury flour, Fleischmann's yeast, Wilson's shortening, Diamond Crystal Salt, Franklin Cane Sugar, Artesian well water and tender loving care.

"That's the way they used to do things back then. Des Plaines has lost much of its distinction since those years," Welsh said.

"And I think the city's struggling to find a new identity in these changing times."

Stained glass stolen from vacant house

An unoccupied house in Des Plaines has been robbed of $1,500 worth of stained glass windows and about $400 worth of solid brass door knobs.

Des Plaines police reported the theft occurred sometime between Sept. 3 and 7 at 297 Rand Rd. The house is owned by a local company also on Rand Road.

Chicago resident John Brooks, who told police he had an option to buy the property, discovered the theft when he inspected the house Tuesday morning.

Thieves apparently gained access to the house through the cellar doors, police reported.

Two large stained glass windows and 20 sets of brass door knobs were taken in the theft.

SOFT MUSIC, nice thoughts and an occasional television show are given the credit for Don Francisco's tall tomato plants. The plants nearly died in April when Francisco, a Palatine resident, left them for a week to go fishing, but lots of tender loving care brought them back to life. Francisco hopes to have the 11-foot high plants listed in the Guinness Book of Records.

Music, TLC charm plants

Thriving cherry tomatoes send grower 'up the wall'

Don Francisco's cherry tomato plants are driving him right up the wall. Up his garage wall, that is, to pick ripe tomatoes off the 11-foot tall vines that are growing along his garage at 233 S. Bothwell St., Palatine.

Most cherry tomato plants grow to only three or four feet high, so Francisco isn't sure why his are so tall. But he has a hunch it has something to do with the way he treats them.

"Perhaps they just enjoy the wonderful atmosphere," he said. Francisco said he plays soft music and television for the tomato plants, in addition to thinking "nice thoughts about them."

THE PLANTS HAVE grown so large that he now has them tied to a rack attached to his garage. They yield about 10 ripe tomatoes per day, Francisco said.

Francisco said the fact that he planted the seeds on St. Valentine's Day might also have something to do with the way they have grown.

"I planted them with a lot of love," he said.

He transplanted the plants from their indoor home, a plastic tray, to the ground along the front of his garage Memorial Day.

He admits that he did test the soil and apply some compost. But Francisco said he used no other fertilizer or chemicals, just "the wonderful atmosphere."

THE PLANTS ALMOST died when he went on vacation the first week in April, and he was ready to throw them out. But when he watered them, Francisco said, the cherry tomato plants were revived. And they've been growing like crazy ever since.

"They're just from some seeds I picked up in a food store," Francisco said. "I just wanted to put some in a hanging basket on the patio."

Francisco, 35 and single, is quality control director for Chicago Show Printing, Morton Grove. He grew up on a farm, a fact that might have something to do with his "green thumb." A garden of normal-sized tomatoes and other vegetables grows along another wall of the garage.

There is no listing for the tallest cherry tomato plant in the Guinness Book of World Records, but Francisco is considering submitting his plants for the honor.

'Education best solution'

Ignorance cited in deaths of many bicycle riders

by DIANE MERMIGAS

What you don't know can hurt you. It can even kill you.

An unwillingness to know or follow the proper rules of the road killed about 800 bicyclists across the country last year and injured about 40,000, at least half of them children.

The tangle of cars and bikes on our nation's highways troubles safety council, police, motor and bicycle club officials, because they know there is a simple enough solution to what is too often a tragic problem.

THE SOLUTION, they say, is a combination of education and respect.

"The motorist and the bicyclist have an obligation to each other. They should both know the rules of the road. They should both follow those rules stringently, and they should respect each other's equal right to the road," said Harold E. Heldreth, bicycle safety coordinator for the National Safety Council.

Heldreth says there is "a definite hostility on the roads" between motorists and bicyclists. Children on bikes tend to weave in and out of cars, ride against traffic and disobey traffic signals.

Motorists often harass bicyclists who may be adhering to the rules of the road, attempting to side-swipe them or drive them off the road.

"A MASS EDUCATION program required across the country would be the best solution, but that's almost impossible to expect," he said.

"Enough bicycle safety programs must be offered on the local level for children and enough drivers must be made aware of bicyclists' rights so that the situation can be improved," Heldreth said.

The National Safety Council in Chicago offers a six-hour bicycle education program through Chicago area elementary schools beginning with the second grade.

The council also offers a course for teen-agers who are interested in teaching young children about bicycle safety.

"THERE ARE MORE than 100 million bicyclists in the country today. More people are riding bikes for recreation and transportation, and we need to offer them instruction at an early age so they have a respect for the road," Heldreth said.

Safety experts like Heldreth agree that it's often the middle-aged motorist, who no longer rides a bike, who is the most difficult person to "get through to."

"There is no program anywhere in the country that is aimed at educating the motorist," said Jim Kashmier, district bikeway coordinator for the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

Kashmier said accidents between cars and bikes most often occur when the motorist passes a cyclist and then makes an immediate right hand turn without giving the biker enough warning; when motorists backing out of driveways do not see bikes coming into their path; and when motorists and bicyclists do not yield the right-of-way to each other at intersections.

"THERE IS A VERY bad attitude in this country among motorists who view the bike as a toy, not as a vehicle that has equal rights on the road. The problem is compounded by the fact that many bicyclists don't bother to follow the proper rules of the road and gain the respect of the motorist," he said.

A bill signed by Gov. Daniel Walker in September 1975 gives bicyclists equal rights to the roadways, but requires them to abide by the same rules as motorists.

Bicyclists can and are being ticketed for violating rules of the road, Kashmier said.

"But, not all roads are constructed for use by bicycles. Bicyclists should look for a four-lane road with a good shoulder or bike lane to ride on. The lanes should be wide enough for them and a car, the speed limit should be low enough and the truck traffic at a minimum," he said.

KASHMIER HAS BEEN helping to coordinate a network of bike routes and paths throughout the Northwest suburbs and other areas of the state. State grants are being provided to communities which are willing to develop bicycle paths and routes.

The combination of proper bikeways and education "will bring down the accident rate," said Ernest Dettmar, the Mount Prospect Police Department's "Officer Friendly" and coordinator of the bicycle safety program.

The police department was one of the first in Illinois two years ago to begin a major bicycle education and enforcement program.

The department sponsors regular bike rodeos to test children's proficiency in bike riding, programs to teach them about bike safety and rules, and even a traffic court where violators ticketed for running stop signs or riding against traffic are sentenced to attend bicycle school or to write an essay on bike safety.

THE RESULT: There were 23 bike-car accidents reported in Mount Prospect in 1975 compared to 37 accidents in 1974. Only four such accidents have been reported so far this year, Dettmar said.

Officials of the League of American Wheelmen, a national organization based in Palatine that promotes bicycling safety, agree that a combination of education and providing proper bike routes has curbed bicycle-car accidents over the past several years.

"The programs, the bike routes and the education all help. But all it really takes is a little common sense and courtesy on the road to avoid some of these accidents," said Phyllis Harmon, a club official.

"If people don't start recognizing the problems, it's going to be their children or even themselves someday who are victims of a senseless accident. And then it's going to be too late," she said.

Teachers get 8% pay hike in special ed cooperative

A one-year contract granting teachers a salary increase of about 8 per cent has been ratified by the governing board of the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization.

Board members for the special education cooperative, which is supported by 10 Northwest suburban school districts, unanimously approved the 1976-77 contract Tuesday, with eight of the member districts voting.

Teachers from the cooperative ratified the contract last week in a 34-1 vote. NSSEO employs 50 teachers.

The average salary increase amounted to 7.65 per cent, said NSSEO Board Pres. Margaret Pagnier. Teachers union negotiator Jean Shurtow said, however, teachers received an 8.8 per cent increase.

NSSEO DIRECTOR Edward McDonald said the discrepancy between the board and teacher figures occurs because the teachers calculated the raises for continuing teachers, while the board considered the difference between costs last year and this year. The board's figures included new teachers who are lower on the salary schedule, he said.

The contract raises base pay from $9,350 to $9,800. Salaries for teachers at the top of the pay scale increased from $16,830 to $18,032.

This is the first year NSSEO teachers have negotiated a contract with the board. The special education teachers formed a union in 1975, but the board did not recognize the union as the teachers' bargaining agent until after salaries were set for 1975-76.

The teachers' contract includes, among other fringe benefits, a parental leave clause that allows men and women a one-year leave of absence without pay as a result of the birth or adoption of a child.

Schweiker patches scars to save career

by CHARLES M. MADIGAN

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Sen. Richard Schweiker knew he was taking the biggest risk of his political career when he joined Ronald Reagan's ill-fated presidential campaign as a potential running mate.

But he called it a "coalition for victory" and forged ahead, promising his liberal reputation would lure moderate supporters into Reagan's conservative camp, giving a forgotten wing of the party a voice in presidential politics.

It was a gamble that led to a devastating loss, and now Schweiker is assessing the damage caused by the first defeat in an otherwise brilliant political career that has spanned 15 years in Congress.

SCHWEIKER IS an aggressive and ambitious man. He and his friends admit that. He has four years to erase the first blotch of defeat on his record, and his campaign already is under way.

Schweiker, who will become Pennsylvania's senior senator when Hugh Scott retires at the end of this year, does not face reelection until 1980, when he will be 54.

Time is on his side.

"My first objective is to go back to being a good senator for Pennsylvania," Schweiker said. "And I can't emphasize that too strongly. I'm working on a new legislative package now."

He said he wants to review the government programs he once supported "and see just how effective they really are. I want to know if the taxpayer is really getting his money's worth."

SCHWEIKER HAD one of the most liberal voting records in the Senate. He supported bills setting up consumer protection agencies, battled appropriations for the FBI, supported food stamps for strikers, and pushed for open legislative meetings.

And while it may seem unrelated, his future voting record could play a major role in determining how successful he is in walking away from what some say was a serious mistake and fatal defeat.

Many Republican officials say the Reagan-Schweiker failure gives Schweiker a chance to make his voting record more moderate in time for reelection.

That way, he will be able to appeal to his traditional Republican supporters, make inroads among conservatives and retain the support he has among independents, Democrats and organized labor.

"I think with a more moderate kind of voting record and being an effective Senator over the next few years, he can be a major force in 1980," said Drew Lewis, who headed President Ford's Pennsylvania campaign and successfully blocked Schweiker's attempt to win delegates in Pennsylvania for Reagan.

"WHAT HE HAS to do is accept the fact that he had a four week shot at the vice presidency that did not work out and he has tremendous potential for the future. Get on with the future and forget about the past," Lewis said.

"The important thing for Schweiker is to become part of the team again and start working for the Ford-Dole ticket. He can still play a substantial role this year and it could be enough to help Ford win the state."

Other political observers are not so optimistic.

Most refuse to talk on the record because they are determined to mend the rift Schweiker's vice presidential candidacy created.

"I don't think the guy is a very smart politician," said one leader.

"He never put a political campaign together for himself and he never helped anyone else get elected. That is a problem that Schweiker has to change."

Others are angry at what they see as Schweiker's cool endorsement of Ford after Ford won the nomination in Kansas City.

SCHWEIKER SAYS he pledged to back the GOP ticket regardless of the outcome and also voiced his plan to support Ford after Ford won the nomination.

But some Republicans say he didn't go far enough, or fast enough.

"I think that Schweiker lost more between the time Ford was nominated and now than he lost when he accepted Reagan's offer," said one GOP leader.

"It's tough losing, everyone knows that. But you just have to realize that in politics, someone wins and someone loses. He has to forget about his feelings and get on board."

Schweiker seems to have put his first major failure behind him.

He says he is wholeheartedly behind the Ford ticket and carries no grudges against the persons who worked to defeat him.

And he says that any damage that was done by the failure of a Reagan-Schweiker candidacy will not be an issue in 1980.

HE SAID HIS mail has been running "about 10 to one" in his favor and contains "a lot of second-thought letters. People are saying 'Now that the shock has worn off, it wasn't a bad idea.'"

Schweiker has one element going for him that few other Pennsylvania Republicans can claim, and it is a factor that could well minimize any problems created by the Reagan alliance.

In Pennsylvania, he is and has been, a winner.

In his 1974 election, he defeated Pittsburgh Mayor Pete Flaherty, a Democrat, by a 54 per cent to 46 per cent margin at a time when Democrats had almost a half million vote registration edge.

And when he was first sent to the Senate in 1968, he upset Sen. Joseph S. Clark of Philadelphia, a popular liberal who headed the Americans for Democratic Action, by a 52 per cent to 46 per cent margin.

He made the Senate bid after spending eight years in the House. Schweiker knows the Pennsylvania voter well, and his Senate record proves it.

HE WAS THE first Republican to win endorsement from the Pennsylvania AFL-CIO, a powerful factor in the outcome of state elections.

The union gave him a 100 per cent rating in 1972 and 1973 and a 91 per cent rating in 1974, endorsing Schweiker for reelection based on his record. If his voting record remains pro-labor, he will most likely win endorsement again.

On another issue close to the hearts of a large and vocal block of Pennsylvania voters, Schweiker opposed gun registration proposals. That won him key support from hunters and conservatives.

Lewis and other Republican leaders look at the matter more practically, and their assessment may hold the key to Schweiker's future.

"The Republican organization has one objective," Lewis said.

"It wants to win and it wants a candidate who can win. A lot of people don't like Dick Schweiker's record, but he has always been supported by the organization because he is a winner."

Computer card plan in Nov. 2 vote

Suburban voters will use the "Votomatic" computer card system for balloting in the Nov. 2 election.

Voters will be given a card to insert into the machine. They then will use a plastic and metal stylus to punch holes in the card next to the names of the candidates for whom they are voting. The folder the card will be placed into, once it is removed from the machine, has space for write-in votes.

Demonstration machines will be available at financial institutions, stores and municipal and township offices throughout the area prior to the election.

Israelis harass oil drilling in Gulf: Amoco Co.

Amoco International Oil Co. confirmed in Chicago Wednesday that Israeli forces have increased harassment of joint Egyptian government-Amoco oil drilling operations in the Gulf of Suez.

Carl Meyerdirk, a spokesman for Amoco, said Israeli gunboats forced an American-owned drilling ship from the same location in the gulf twice last week and fired on marker buoys.

"The drilling rig went to a location southeast of Ramadan Field (an oil producing area located in the middle of the gulf) Aug. 31 and was driven from the site by an Israeli fleet of gunboats and helicopters," Meyerdirk said.

"THE RIG attempted to move back to the site Saturday and again was driven off, this time by gunboats which also shot up the marker buoy which marked the location where the rig was planning to drill."

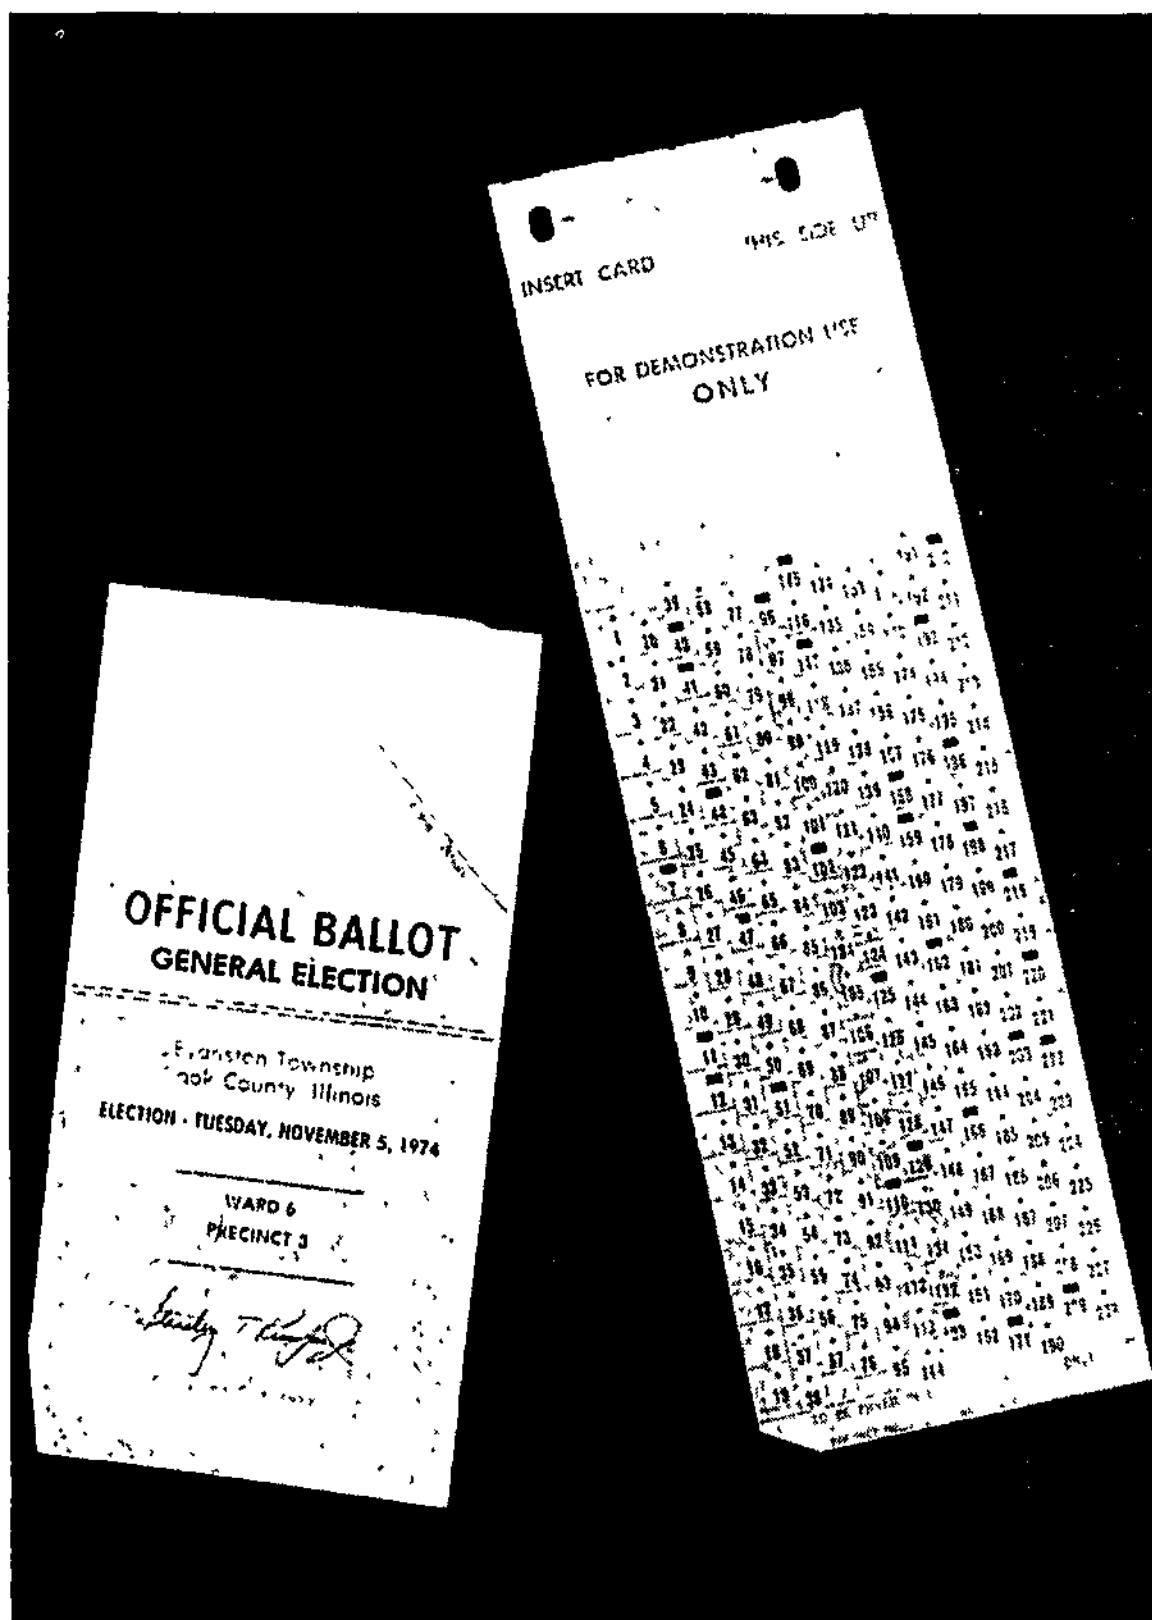

Meyerdirk said, "It is a gulf over which the Egyptians have sovereignty and on which we have a license to drill, a license which predates the (1967) Middle Eastern War."

He said he had no idea why the Israeli ships threatened the oil rigs because "we do have a couple fields that lie across the median line (of the gulf) the Israelis seem to be establishing and we have been operating in that area for quite some time."

Meyerdirk said he did not know if Amoco protested the incidents to the Israeli government. However, "I know by press reports that the State Dept. has protested to the Israeli government," he said.

The drilling ship was owned by Santa Fe International and was licensed by Amoco, he said.

Amoco is a subsidiary of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana.

Electric brown, blackouts seen by '80

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States could suffer severe electrical shortages and perhaps even power blackouts within as little as four years unless prompt steps are taken to expand the use of coal and atomic energy, electric utility officials warned Wednesday.

Reporting on power plant reserve capacity and fuel supplies, the National Electric Reliability Council said the situation could be especially critical if recent court rulings and potential legislative action slow the growth of nuclear power generation.

"Unless the electric utility systems of this country are able to construct and operate as presently scheduled the nuclear-fueled power plants currently planned, the United States will face blackouts, voltage reductions or rotating outages as a result of serious shortages of electric power by or in the 1980s," said William McCollum, chairman of the council.

THE COUNCIL, which represents utilities throughout the United States and most of Canada, issued two new studies saying the absence of a U.S. energy policy combined with unfavorable government action could result in both too few generating plants and insufficient fuel by 1985.

In the past year, the council said, "the nation has moved closer to the brink of a severe electric energy crisis."

"Lacking . . . decisive governmental action, the United States is likely to face serious shortages in electric energy supply in some regions as early as the late 1970s and in others by the early 1980s," it said.

McCollum and other officials said it is impossible to predict which regions might be affected first since different areas face individual problems, such as nuclear restrictions on the November ballot in six states and strip mining and clean air rules now before Congress that could restrict coal use elsewhere.

ONE REPORT said reserve generating capacity — the ability to produce more electricity than is needed at the peak of the summer and insure a reliable supply of electricity despite equipment breakdowns — could decline from the present 30 per cent to between 12 and 22 per cent in 1985. It said that figure appears adequate nationally but some individual regions are in worse shape.

The other report said the U.S. coal supply is questionable because of potential delays in developing Western coal fields, doubts about the adequacy of coal shipping facilities and clean air controversies that could prevent coal burning.

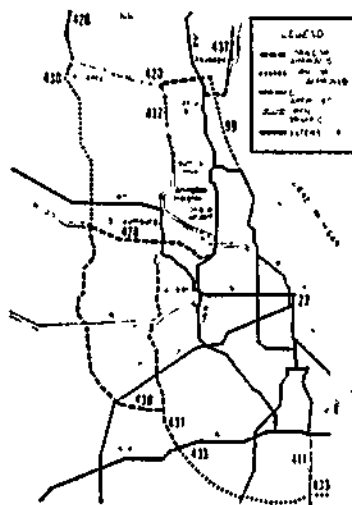

The council said there also are nuclear difficulties because of fuel supply problems and legal and regulatory questions, including recent rulings by the U.S. District Court, about atomic waste management.

Hein zone plea before planners

Wheeling Trustee William Hein's request for a zoning variation to build storage units on McHenry Road just north of the K-Mart store will be reviewed at 7:30 p.m. today by the plan commission.

The public hearing on Hein's request will be at the village hall, 233 W. Dundee Rd.

Hein and his partner, John Cargill, 490 E. Mors Ave., Wheeling, have asked the village for a variation to build the storage units on the 4.2-acre vacant lot on McHenry Road. The lot is zoned for retail business and service business.

HEIN AND CARGILL are seeking the variation because the village zoning ordinance has no provisions for a consumer-retail storage unit. Hein said the storage units will be rented to homeowners and apartment dwellers to store personal property.

Several trustees have objected to Hein's petition, saying they felt it is improper for a village official to appear before the board with a zoning request. Trustee Otis L. Hedlund said that while the request is not "technically or legally wrong, I feel it is morally just not proper."

Hein has said that "just because I'm involved in the political life of the community shouldn't hamper me from getting into business in the community as long as I do it in a way where I'm not hiding anything."

HEIN SAID he will abstain from board action taken on his request.

A similar request from former Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson last year drew objections from trustees who questioned the ethics of an elected official being a partner in a venture requiring approval of the village board.

Berg clears Howlett in steel case

by United Press International

A Cook County judge Wednesday cleared Michael Howlett, the Democratic candidate for governor, of conflict-of-interest charges concerning his controversial part-time job with Sun Steel Corp.

"My client is vindicated," said Howlett's attorney, Don H. Reuben, after Circuit Court Judge Raymond K. Berg announced his decision.

Berg rejected as "erroneous and unlawful" the conflict charges contained in a report ordered by Atty. Gen. William Scott.

IN THE REPORT, former Illinois Supreme Court Justice Marvin F. Burt said Howlett had put himself in a "posture of conflict" by holding a consultant job with Sun Steel while serving as chairman of the state's vehicle recycling board, which deals with scrap iron.

"If a posture of conflict were held to be the standard, all public officials would have been, are or will be, in conflict," Berg ruled.

During the primary campaign, Howlett acknowledged he had held a $15,000-a-year job as consultant to Sun Steel, a Chicago Heights firm, for 15 years. The period of the alleged conflict stretched from Sept. 14, 1973,

Plans for Lincoln County delayed

by LUISA GINETTI

The creation of Lincoln County must remain a dream at least until 1978 because of a legal technicality which prevents the question from being placed on the Nov. 2 ballot.

State Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, said Wednesday the deadline has passed for submitting petitions to have the matter on the ballot this year. Regner and Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones last week announced the start of a Lincoln County petition drive saying petitions had to be submitted 72 days before the election. He originally thought the deadline was 30 days before the election.

Regner said he plans to begin printing new petitions today in an effort to get the question on the ballot for the next general election in November 1978.

THE PROPOSAL will call for Cook County voters to approve the secession of the 30 suburban townships from the county to form the proposed Lincoln County. The proposal was first offered six years ago by Jones and former Palatine Trustee Merwin E. Soper as a way of ending domination of the suburban area by Chicago Democrats on the County Board.

Regner said an estimated 600,000 to 800,000 registered voters in the proposed new county must sign the petition in order to get the question on the ballot.

Since the matter surfaced again last week, Regner said the proposal has received "phenomenal interest."

"There's a tremendous amount of interest in it and I've had at least 200 people call me asking about the petitions," he said. Support has come from other suburban legislators as well, he said.

REGNER SAID he also may proceed with plans to introduce legislation in the General Assembly next spring to change the requirements for creating a new county so it can be done by petition without a referendum of the entire affected county.

"It seems sort of ridiculous to have an election if we get a majority of the registered voters in the affected area to say they want to do it," Regner said.

Stavros released on parole today

by TONI GINETTI

James Stavros resumes life as a free man today for the first time in more than two years.

The former Wheeling political king, whose reign by extortion led to a federal indictment, a guilty plea and four-year prison sentence, was released from a Chicago halfway house to begin parole.

Stavros, 46, had been assigned to the Community Treatment Center, 826 S. Wabash St., Chicago, since July 1 while awaiting parole. During that time Stavros participated in a work release program, returning to the facility in the evenings.

ROBERT THOMPSON, director of the Community Treatment Center, Wednesday said Stavros would be released and placed under the super-

Three Lakes plans revived

by JOE SWICKARD

The long-dormant Three Lakes Country Club housing development, originally proposed by former Wheeling Township political boss James Stavros, has been resurrected.

Revised plans for the 238-acre project built around a proposed semi-private 18-hole golf course were presented to the Arlington Heights plan department this week for study.

The plans, still in a preliminary state, call for about 450 housing units, most of them single-family homes. An eight-acre commercial section is included in plans for the site along the future Lake-Cook Road extension between Arlington Heights and Schaer roads.

THE SITE WAS the subject of village hearings for several years in the late 1960s when Stavros, who pled guilty in 1974 to extortion, tax evasion and perjury charges, and his brother August proposed about 900 housing units. Approval was granted for construction in 1969, but work was never begun.

The new development, designed by planning consultant Rolf C. Campbell of Lake Bluff, will feature houses in the $80,000 to $100,000 price range. The houses reportedly will have a more rural setting than most village subdivisions and most of them, as well as the apartment units, will face the golf course.

The golf course will be 6,650 yards long and will have a par-71 rating. A clubhouse for the course is part of the plans for the development. The semi-private golf course would be the first in the village.

The Arlington Heights Park District is holding referendums Oct. 2 to issue $1.5 million in bonds to finance the construction of a public golf course on the site of the former Nike Base, Central and Wilke roads.

WHEN THE ORIGINAL Three Lakes project was considered by the village, the Stavros brothers owned the land and were to be the developers.

Joe Kesler, village planner, said it was his understanding that the property is still owned by the Stavros family and that the brothers will have a part interest in the new development with other investors.

Stavros and Campbell could not be reached for comment on the new project.

James Stavros

vision of the U.S. Parole Commission. Stavros' probation officer, Ron Kunke, said Wednesday he would meet with the former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman "shortly" to determine how often Stavros will report to him.

"He's listed some employment," Kunke added, but he said the information was "confidential" and declined to discuss it.

Court documents filed earlier this year in U.S. District Court by Stavros' attorney Thomas Foran cited employment as owner and manager of the J & J Farm near Woodstock as a proposed condition of parole.

STAVROS WILL report to probation authorities until the termination of his four-year sentence imposed in June 1974 by U.S. District Judge Hubert L. Will.

Stavros was the principle target of a 1973 U.S. Justice Dept. investigation into shakedowns of developers in Wheeling. He was indicted Jan. 31, 1974 along with three other village officials on charges of extortion, perjury and income tax evasion.

He served two years of the four-year sentence at the Federal Correctional Institution at Sandstone, Minn. Repeated efforts by Stavros to win parole were fruitless until June 17 when the U.S. Parole Commission agreed to his conditional release.

U.S. Justice Dept. officials who prosecuted the case against him described Stavros as a hardened strong-arm boss who often threatened bodily harm to developers who did not meet extortion demands.

Court records filed in December by Foran indicate Stavros owes some $17,500 in unpaid taxes for 1969 and 1970.

Internal Revenue Service spokesmen were unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Modern day legacy

Junk auto parts, abandoned shopping carts and beer cans are the legacy of the Wheeling Drainage Ditch.

Wheeling officials have been fighting with the Illinois Dept. of Transportation, Division of Waterways, to have the creek cleaned and maintained. The state is responsible for the maintenance of the ditch. Despite the village's efforts, the ditch deteriorates under what Trustee William Rogers terms "the vandalism of unauthorized dumping."

"It's a real tragedy. The creek could be made a real nature site. It's quite disturbing to see it used as the village dumping ground by some people," he said.

Rogers said he will encourage the village board to establish a regular maintenance program for the ditch in cooperation with Cook County officials.

Lawrence Oppenheimer, director of public works, said the village will be removing the debris from the creek but he is not sure when.

SOFT MUSIC, nice thoughts and an occasional television show are given the credit for Don Francisco's tall tomato plants. The plants nearly died in April when Francisco, a Palatine resident, left them for a week to go fishing, but lots of tender loving care brought them back to life. Francisco hopes to have the 11-foot high plants listed in the Guinness Book of Records.

Thriving cherry tomatoes send grower 'up the wall'

Don Francisco's cherry tomato plants are driving him right up the wall. Up his garage wall, that is, to pick ripe tomatoes off the 11-foot tall vines that are growing along his garage at 253 S. Bothwell St., Palatine.

Most cherry tomato plants grow to only three or four feet high, so Francisco isn't sure why his are so tall. But he has a hunch it has something to do with the way he treats them. "Perhaps they just enjoy the wonderful atmosphere," he said. Francisco said he plays soft music and television for the tomato plants, in addition to thinking "nice thoughts about them."

THE PLANTS HAVE grown so large that he now has them tied to a rack attached to his garage. They yield about 10 ripe tomatoes per day, Francisco said.

Francisco said the fact that he planted the seeds on St. Valentine's Day might also have something to do with the way they have grown. "I planted them with a lot of love," he said.

He transplanted the plants from their indoor home, a plastic tray, to the ground along the front of his garage Memorial Day.

He admits that he did test the soil and apply some compost. But Francisco said he used no other fertilizer or chemicals, just "the wonderful atmosphere."

THE PLANTS ALMOST died when he went on vacation the first week in April, and he was ready to throw them out. But when he watered them, Francisco said, the cherry tomato plants were revived. And they've been growing like crazy ever since.

"They're just from some seeds I picked up in a food store," Francisco said. "I just wanted to put some in a hanging basket on the patio."

Francisco, 35 and single, is quality control director for Chicago Show Printing, Morton Grove. He grew up on a farm, a fact that might have something to do with his "green thumb." A garden of normal-sized tomatoes and other vegetables grows along another wall of the garage.

There is no listing for the tallest cherry tomato plant in the Guinness Book of World Records, but Francisco is considering submitting his plants for the honor.

On alleged policy violations

Harper panel to submit last report in Lahti case

The final report of a Harper College special committee formed to investigate College Pres. Robert Lahti's alleged violations of college policy will be presented to the Harper Board of Trustees tonight.

Trustee Robert Rausch, the committee chairman, said he was working on the report Wednesday and plans to present it to the full board at its 8 p.m. meeting in the board room of the A building.

The committee was formed in July by Board Pres. Shirley Munson to investigate reports in The Herald and other local newspapers that Lahti misused college vehicles, flew first class in violation of college policy and engaged in unannounced meetings with members of the board.

ANOTHER COMMITTEE that Mrs. Munson formed to investigate possible conflict of interest on Lahti's part regarding his seat on the board of directors of the Bank of Elk Grove, where the college has accounts, reported earlier that Harper followed proper procedure in opening accounts and awarding certificates of deposit.

The board also will discuss whether it will spend approximately $100,000 to dredge the man-made lake on the Harper campus, Algonquin and Roselle roads, Palatine.

The lake was built so the college would be able to retain storm water on campus as required by the Metropolitan Sanitary District, said William J. Mann, vice president of administrative services.

Mann said the Lake has been filling with silt because construction work north of the college has caused erosion into a stream that empties into the lake.

Harper's architectural firm, Caudill, Rowlett and Scott, told the board last spring that dredging the lake would cost about $70,000, Mann said, but that estimate did not include the cost of overhead and profit.

Firms have submitted bids for the dredging operation in the $100,000 range, Mann said.

8% hike OKd for teachers in special ed co-op

A one-year contract granting teachers a salary increase of about 8 per cent has been ratified by the governing board of the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization.

Board members for the special education cooperative, which is supported by 10 Northwest suburban school districts, unanimously approved the 1976-77 contract Tuesday, with eight of the member districts voting.

Teachers from the cooperative ratified the contract last week in a 34-1 vote. NSSEO employs 56 teachers.

The average salary increase amounted to 7.85 per cent, said NSSEO Board Pres. Margaret Pageler. Teachers union negotiator Jean Shartow said, however, teachers received an 8.8 per cent increase.

NSSEO DIRECTOR Edward McDonald said the discrepancy between the board and teacher figures occurs because the teachers calculated the raises for continuing teachers, while the board considered the difference between costs last year and this year. The board's figures included new teachers who are lower on the salary schedule, he said.

The contract raises base pay from $9,350 to $9,800. Salaries for teachers at the top of the pay scale increased from $16,830 to $18,032.

This is the first year NSSEO teachers have negotiated a contract with the board. The special education teachers formed a union in 1973, but the board did not recognize the union as the teachers' bargaining agent until after salaries were set for 1975-76.

The teachers' contract includes, among other fringe benefits, a parental leave clause that allows men and women a one-year leave of absence without pay as a result of the birth or adoption of a child.

Mrs. Pageler said the new contract is a "much more rational salary structure." She said the higher salaries at the top levels "makes it more professional and the base is competitive with the member districts."

Ignorance cited in deaths of many bicyclists

by DIANE MERMIGAS

What you don't know can hurt you. It can even kill you.

An unwillingness to know or follow the proper rules of the road killed about 800 bicyclists across the country last year and injured about 40,000, at least half of them children.

The tangle of cars and bikes on our nation's highways troubles safety council, police, motor and bicycle club officials, because they know there is a simple enough solution to what is too often a tragic problem.

THE SOLUTION, they say, is a combination of education and respect.

"The motorist and the bicyclist have an obligation to each other. They should both know the rules of the road. They should both follow those rules stringently, and they should respect each other's equal right to the road," said Harold E. Heldreth, bicycle safety coordinator for the National Safety Council.

Heldreth says there is "a definite hostility on the roads" between motorists and bicyclists. Children on bikes tend to weave in and out of cars, ride against traffic and disobey traffic signals.

Motorists often harass bicyclists who may be adhering to the rules of the road, attempting to side-swipe them or drive them off the road.

"A MASS EDUCATION program required across the country would be the best solution, but that's almost impossible to expect," he said.

"Enough bicycle safety programs must be offered on the local level for children and enough drivers must be made aware of bicyclists' rights so that the situation can be improved," Heldreth said.

The National Safety Council in Chicago offers a six-hour bicycle education program through Chicago area elementary schools beginning with the second grade.

The council also offers a course for teen-agers who are interested in teaching young children about bicycle safety.

"THERE ARE MORE than 100 million bicyclists in the country today. More people are riding bikes for recreation and transportation, and we need to offer them instruction at an early age so they have a respect for the road," Heldreth said.

Safety experts like Heldreth agree that it's often the middle-aged motorist, who no longer rides a bike, who is the most difficult person to "get through to."

"There is no program anywhere in the country that is aimed at educating the motorist," said Jim Kashmier, district bikeway coordinator for the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

Kashmier said accidents between cars and bikes most often occur when the motorist passes a cyclist and then makes an immediate right hand turn without giving the biker enough warning; when motorists backing out of driveways do not see bikes coming into their path; and when motorists and bicyclists do not yield the right-of-way to each other at intersections.

"THERE IS A VERY bad attitude in this country among motorists who view the bike as a toy, not as a vehicle that has equal rights on the road. The problem is compounded by the fact that many bicyclists don't bother to follow the proper rules of the road and gain the respect of the motorist," he said.

A bill signed by Gov. Daniel Walker in September 1975 gives bicyclists equal rights to the roadways, but requires them to abide by the same rules as motorists.

Bicyclists can and are being ticketed for violating rules of the road, Kashmier said.

"But, not all roads are constructed for use by bicycles. Bicyclists should look for a four-lane road with a good shoulder or bike lane to ride on. The lanes should be wide enough for them and a car, the speed limit should be low enough and the truck traffic at a minimum," he said.

KASHMIER HAS BEEN helping to coordinate a network of bike routes and paths throughout the Northwest suburbs and other areas of the state. State grants are being provided to communities which are willing to develop bicycle paths and routes.

The combination of proper bikeway and education "will bring down the accident rate," said Ernest Deltmar, the Mount Prospect Police Department's "Officer Friendly" and coordinator of the bicycle safety program.

The police department was one of the first in Illinois two years ago to begin a major bicycle education and enforcement program.

The department sponsors regular bike rodeos to test children's proficiency in bike riding, programs to teach them about bike safety and rules, and even a traffic court where violators ticketed for running stop signs or riding against traffic are sentenced to attend bicycle school or to write an essay on bike safety.

THE RESULT? There were 23 bike-car accidents reported in Mount Prospect in 1975 compared to 37 accidents in 1974. Only four such accidents have been reported so far this year, Deltmar said.

Officials of the League of American Wheelmen, a national organization based in Palatine that promotes bicycling safety, agree that a combination of education and providing proper bike routes has curbed bicycle accidents over the past several years.

"The programs, the bike routes and the education all help. But all it really takes is a little common sense and courtesy on the road to avoid some of these accidents," said Phyllis Harmon, a club official.

To end the city's 'identity crisis'

Dusting off memories of the past

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Time was when Des Plaines was the home of Whitcomb bricks, Replica phonograph records, Squire Dingee pickles and a host of other products produced by the family-operated businesses of yesteryear.

There was a time, maybe 50 years ago, when you could stand in the middle of town and sniff the aroma of fresh-baked bread, the fumes of mixed paint, and the scent of roses and dilled pickles all at the same time.

But not anymore.

THE SMALL, family-owned firms that dominated the city's business landscape at the turn of the century either were wiped out in the Depression or replaced by the sprawling, technical giants that were products of World War II.

Those quaint enterprises were part of an obscure past few Des Plaines residents remember now. But the Des Plaines Historical Society is searching for products of the past in an attempt to recreate the commercial heritage of the city.

Director Richard Welsh is asking residents to bring such artifacts and information to the historical society at 777 Lee St. or call 297-4012.

"It will help us to piece together the city's commercial past and gain a better understanding of what was produced, invented and patented here," Welsh said.

WHAT LITTLE the historical society already knows about past companies paints a bustling, productive picture of Des Plaines.

It was the closest of all Northwest suburbs to Chicago and the one point where the Chicago and North Western, the Soo Line and the Milwaukee Road railroads all passed near each other.

"It seemed a perfect place for family-owned businesses that relied on transportation into the city but wanted a rural atmosphere," he said.

"In fact, it seemed like such a good idea that Riverview, a small village that was once south of Oakton Street and later annexed by the City of Des Plaines, was planned as an industrial area in the late 1800s," Welsh said.

THE KREH CHALK and Pencil Co.,

the Columbia Steel Car Works, the James Woolen Mill and the Western Brass Works all were located in the Riverview area.

The Whitcomb and Jones Brickyard was located nearby at Algonquin and River roads. Muddy, brown bricks, stamped with an identifying diamond, were turned out there by the thousands and used to build many of the city's earliest structures, such as the Masonic Temple at Prairie Avenue and Graceland Street.

Des Plaines also had a dairy located at Oakwood and Lee streets, which was in business through the 1950s.

But, the city's biggest businesses of the past included the Benjamin Electric Co., located on Northwest Highway just north of the train tracks, and the Squire, Dingee Co. which processed and packed pickles in a plant on Western Avenue near Northwest Highway, he said.

THE REPLICA Record Co. once produced platters in Des Plaines. Long-time residents have donated to the historical society 35 albums whose covers sport a Des Plaines mailing address.

But, no one is really sure where the record company was located. Residents also have said that the Schaefer Piano Factory once was located in the Riverview area, but it burned down before it could open.

"The tales that people are telling us are so interesting. We'd just like to run across something that could lend a little credibility to it," he said.

Welsh does have a 1925 newspaper advertisement for the Blue Ribbon Bakery, once located on Ellinwood near Pearson Street.

The ad lists the bakery's ingredients for bread as including Pillsbury flour, Fleischmann's yeast, Wilson's shortening, Diamon Crystal Salt, Franklin Cane Sugar, Artesian well water and tender loving care.

"That's the way they used to do things back then. Des Plaines has lost much of its distinction since those years," Welsh said.

"And I think the city's struggling to find a new identity in these changing times."

Without a referendum

Finance panel OKs golf course buy

The $1.1 million purchase of the Buffalo Grove Golf Course without a referendum has been endorsed by the village board's finance committee pending a negotiation of a financial arrangement.

A "firm commitment" from the Allstate Insurance Co. to finance the purchase through a 15-year installment loan arrangement with a 7 per cent interest rate will be sought by the committee. Allstate has already tentatively agreed to the financial arrangement.

The Kemper Insurance Co. also will be contacted by the village administration to see if it wants to submit a proposal.

THE $1.1 MILLION price tag for the golf course on Lake-Cook Road near Itasca Boulevard was negotiated with the golf course owners several years ago.

The village has been leasing the golf course for two years with a five-year option to purchase the facility.

Village Mgr. Daniel Larson recommended that the village board decide before Dec. 1 if it wishes to buy the golf course because the annual cost of the lease will increase from $66,000 to $77,000 in January.

The village board will review the matter Sept. 20.

The four trustees present at Tuesday's meeting favored buying the golf course.

"I think the golf course is important as open space and as an investment for the future. I envision it as a whole village center," Trustee Clarice Rech said.

MRS. RECH AND Village Pres. Edward Fabish agreed that the purchase should be done without a referendum, if possible.

"It's a hard year to sell a referendum. I think we would be taking a chance if we go to a referendum. But if one is called, I think we can demonstrate the golf course can pay for itself," Mrs. Rech said.

Trustee Robert Bogart said he favors conducting a referendum "to get a commitment from residents that they will support it (golf course)," but said he would not push for a village-wide vote if the village trustees agree to meet with residents to explain the merits of purchasing the golf course.

Stavros parole today; job on farm awaits him

by TONI GINETTI

James Stavros resumes life as a free man today for the first time in more than two years.

The former Wheeling political king, whose reign by extortion led to a federal indictment, a guilty plea and four-year prison sentence, was released from a Chicago halfway house to begin parole.

Stavros, 46, had been assigned to the Community Treatment Center, 826 S. Wabash St., Chicago, since July 1 while awaiting parole. During that time Stavros participated in a work release program, returning to the facility in the evenings.

ROBERT THOMPSON, director of the Community Treatment Center, Wednesday said Stavros would be released and placed under the supervision of the U.S. Parole Commission.

Stavros' probation officer, Ron Kunkle, said Wednesday he would meet with the former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman "shortly" to determine how often Stavros will report to him.

"He's listed some employment," Kunkle added, but he said the information was "confidential" and declined to discuss it.

Court documents filed earlier this year in U.S. District Court by Stavros' attorney Thomas Foran cited employment as owner and manager of the J & J Farm near Woodstock as a proposed condition of parole.

STAVROS WILL report to probation authorities until the termination of his four-year sentence imposed in June 1974 by U.S. District Judge Hubert L. Will.

Stavros was the principle target of a 1973 U.S. Justice Dept. investigation into shakedowns of developers in Wheeling. He was indicted Jan. 31, 1974 along with three other village officials on charges of extortion, perjury and income tax evasion.

He served two years of the four-year sentence at the Federal Correctional Institution at Sandstone, Minn. Repeated efforts by Stavros to win parole were fruitless until June 17 when the U.S. Parole Commission agreed to his conditional release.

U.S. Justice Dept. officials who prosecuted the case against him described Stavros as a hardened strong-arm boss who often threatened bodily harm to developers who did not meet extortion demands.

Three Lakes plans revived by builder

by JOE SWICKARD

The long-dormant Three Lakes Country Club housing development, originally proposed by former Wheeling Township political boss James Stavros, has been resurrected.

Revised plans for the 234-acre project built around a proposed semi-private 18-hole golf course were presented to the Arlington Heights plan department this week for study.

The plans, still in a preliminary state, call for about 450 housing units, most of them single-family homes. An eight-acre commercial section is included in plans for the site along the future Lake-Cook Road extension between Arlington Heights and Schaefer roads.

THE SITE WAS the subject of village hearings for several years in the late 1960s when Stavros, who pled guilty in 1974 to extortion, tax evasion and perjury charges, and his brother August proposed about 900 housing units. Approval was granted for construction in 1969, but work was never begun.

The new development, designed by planning consultant Rolf C. Campbell of Lake Bluff, will feature houses in the $80,000 to $100,000 price range. The houses reportedly will have a more rural setting than most village subdivisions and most of them, as well as the apartment units, will face the golf course.

The golf course will be 6,650 yards long and will have a par-71 rating. A clubhouse for the course is part of the plans for the development. The semi-private golf course would be the first in the village.

The Arlington Heights Park District is holding referendum Oct. 2 to issue $1.5 million in bonds to finance the Court records filed in December by Foran indicate Stavros owes some $17,500 in unpaid taxes for 1969 and 1970.

Internal Revenue Service spokesmen were unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Berg clears Howlett in steel case

by United Press International

A Cook County judge Wednesday cleared Michael Howlett, the Democratic candidate for governor, of conflict-of-interest charges concerning his controversial part-time job with Sun Steel Corp.

"My client is vindicated," said Howlett's attorney, Don H. Reuben, after Circuit Court Judge Raymond K. Berg announced his decision.

Berg rejected as "erroneous and unlawful" the conflict charges contained in a report ordered by Atty. Gen. William Scott.

IN THE REPORT, former Illinois Supreme Court Justice Marvin F. Burt said Howlett had put himself in a "posture of conflict" by holding a consultant job with Sun Steel while serving as chairman of the state's vehicle recycling board, which deals with scrap iron.

"If a posture of conflict were held to be the standard, all public officials would have been, are or will be, in conflict," Berg ruled.

During the primary campaign, Howlett acknowledged he had held a $15,000-a-year job as consultant to Sun Steel, a Chicago Heights firm, for 15 years. The period of the alleged conflict stretched from Sept. 14, 1973,

Twin Grove park site cleaned up

An undeveloped park site near Twin Grove School, 1072 Ivy Hall Ln., has been rid of its rodents, trash and dirt piles, a Buffalo Grove Health Dept. official said.

"To me it's a dead issue," Chief Inspector William Dettmer said Wednesday. "We inspected the site, injected poison in some small mice burrows and leveled it and have not had one complaint filed."

The action was taken after 84 Lake County Buffalo Grove residents asked the village and park district to clean up the area.

The residents reported mice and rats were spotted near the lot and said the dirt piles posed a danger to children playing in the area.

But Dettmer said residents continue to dump grass clippings and trash on the lot, attracting rodents.

"If people would just take care of the park, things would be a lot better," he said.

Dettmer said persons caught dumping things on public property will be fined from $10 to $200. "If I can catch them,"

Lincoln County plans delayed until '78: Regner

by LUISA GINETTI

The creation of Lincoln County must remain a dream at least until 1978 because of a legal technicality which prevents the question from being placed on the Nov. 2 ballot.

State Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, said Wednesday the deadline has passed for submitting petitions to have the matter on the ballot this year. Regner and Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones last week announced the start of a Lincoln County petition drive saying petitions had to be submitted 72 days before the election. He originally thought the deadline was 30 days before the election.

Regner said he plans to begin printing new petitions today in an effort to get the question on the ballot for the next general election in November 1978.

THE PROPOSAL will call for Cook County voters to approve the secession of the 30 suburban townships from the county to form the proposed Lincoln County. The proposal was first offered six years ago by Jones and former Palatine Trustee Merwin E. Soper as a way of ending domination of the suburban area by Chicago Democrats on the County Board.

Regner said an estimated 500,000 to 600,000 registered voters in the proposed new county must sign the petition in order to get the question on the ballot.

Since the matter surfaced again last week, Regner said the proposal has received "phenomenal interest."

"There's a tremendous amount of interest in it and I've had at least 200 people call me asking about the petitions," he said. Support has come from other suburban legislators as well, he said.

REGNER SAID he also may proceed with plans to introduce legislation in the General Assembly next spring to change the requirements for creating a new county so it can be done by petition without a referendum of the entire affected county.

"It seems sort of ridiculous to have an election if we get a majority of the registered voters in the affected area to say they want to do it," Regner said.

Jones said Wednesday the petition drive will cost money to provide information for "public awareness" of the matter.

"It's almost like running a political campaign," Jones said. "You need workers and you need money."

Jones said the campaign would be greatly enhanced if local Republican organizations would accept the concept and adopt it as their Republican suburban philosophy.

"I THINK WHAT we have to do for long-range strategy is get the committeemen to agree to it," Jones said.

"The suburban area has to wake up to the fact that with 10 Chicago Democrats on the county board and only 10 votes needed to pass legislation, there is taxation without representation," Jones said. "And Chicago should wake up to the fact that they are paying a lot of money for a Cook County sheriff who has no authority in Chicago."

Jones has cited the imposition of a county gasoline tax and county liquor tax as examples of Chicago Democrats imposing their authority on the predominantly Republican suburbs.

The Palatine village president, taking the proposal one step further, said he would ultimately like to see the 30 suburban townships break down into five counties comprised of six townships each.

Each of the proposed five counties, Jones said, would have populations of at least 500,000, which is larger than many downstate counties.

Jones has suggested naming the counties Lincoln, Kennedy, Stevenson, Dirksen and Eisenhower.

Three Lakes plans revived construction of a public golf course on the site of the former Niko Base, Central and Wilke roads.

WHEN THE ORIGINAL Three Lakes project was considered by the village, the Stavros brothers owned the land and were to be the developers.

Joe Kesler, village planner, said it was his understanding that the property is still owned by the Stavros family and that the brothers will have a part interest in the new development with other investors.

Stavros and Campbell could not be reached for comment on the new project.

Juvenile crime topic of seminar

"Youth, Crime and the Police" is the topic of a seminar that will be held from 7 to 10 p.m. Sept. 22 at Longfellow School, 501 N. Arlington Heights Rd., Buffalo Grove.

what happens to a juvenile when he breaks the law.

In relocation of clubhouse

Circus tickets to aid boys' club

Countryside Boys' Club Inc. of Buffalo Grove is selling tickets to the Oct. 11 performances of the Ringling Brothers Barnum & Bailey Circus to fund moving its clubhouse.

The club, an affiliate of Boys' Clubs of America, acquired the office building of the Cambridge-on-the-Lake condominium apartments for use as a meeting place and last month was granted a five-year lease to use a one-acre lot next to Buffalo Grove Village Hall, 50 Raupp Blvd., as a club site.

Club Pres. Norman Katz estimated $30,000 is needed to move the building from the apartment complex.

Barbara Sheldon, first vice president, Wednesday said $300 has been raised. She predicted the ticket selling, local donations and grants from three unnamed foundations should net enough money to move the building within 90 days and open it within 180 days.

"I KNOW WE WILL definitely be getting the money from the foundations," she said, "it's just that we don't know how much yet from which

Deadline nears for football contest

Youngsters who want to try their luck with the old pigskin have until Friday to register for the annual punt, pass and kick contest in Buffalo Grove.

Applications for the contest are available at the Buffalo Grove Park District offices, 150 Raupp Blvd., and Chalet Ford, 801 W. Dundee Rd.

The contest, open to youths between the ages of 8 and 13, will be held from 1 to 5:30 p.m. Sunday at Emmerich Park, 150 Raupp Blvd.

ones and since nothing is finalized I can't even name the foundations."

Mrs. Sheldon said the club expects to receive between $30,000 and $40,000 from the foundations within a month. Meanwhile, persons may help establish the new site by buying circus tickets and donating recreation equipment and furniture.

Tickets for the 3 or 7:30 p.m. performances may be purchased from Countryside Boys' Club, P.O. Box 303, Wheeling, through Sept. 30.

The Buffalo Grove adult who sells the most tickets will be ringmaster for one of the Columbus Day performances, Mrs. Sheldon said.

THE TWO CHILDREN under age 17 who sell the most tickets will ride atop the elephant during each performance, she said. And five of the next 10 top sellers will be clowns or participate in the circus parade.

The 8,000 tickets being sold by several area Boys' Club of America affiliates were bought by the national organization, Mrs. Sheldon said.

A professional director will be hired before the club opens. "We're going to open our doors and do whatever the kids tell us they want," she said.

Wheeling Twp. flu shot program seeks helpers

Volunteers will be needed to man the swine flu inoculation centers in Wheeling Township when the vaccination program for the elderly and chronically ill begins Oct. 11.

Esther Rabchuk, swine flu inoculation coordinator, released the inoculation schedule Wednesday. She asked for volunteers, nonprofessional and professional personnel to work five-hour shifts at the centers.

Inoculations for persons over 65 and the chronically ill will be available by appointment at the Mount Prospect Senior Citizens Center, or without an appointment at various inoculation centers in the township.

Swine flu inoculations will be available Oct. 11, 13, 15, 18, 20, 22, and 25 at the senior citizens center, 600 S. See-Gwen Ave. by appointment only. Call 398-4567 to make an appointment.

ONE-DAY MASS inoculation clinics, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., with no appointment necessary, will be held Oct. 11 at Wheeling High School, 900 S. Elmhurst Rd., and Miner Junior High School, 1101 E. Miner St., Arlington Heights; Oct. 18, Prospect High School, 801 W. Kensington Rd.; Oct.

17, Prospect High School; Oct. 23, Wheeling High School; and Oct. 24, Miner Junior High School.

Mrs. Rabchuk said the shots will be available to the chronically ill of any age provided they present a ticket from their doctor certifying that they should have the bivalent flu shot.

The special tickets are now being sent to doctors in Cook County, Mrs. Rabchuk said. She noted that bivalent swine flu inoculations will not be available from private physicians until the mass inoculations have been completed.

The shots will not be given to anyone who has had any other kind of flu shot two weeks before the swine flu inoculation.

The bivalent shots, for the elderly and chronically ill, vaccinate against two strains of flu. Bivalent shots will be given with syringes. Monovalent shots, for healthy persons and those under 65, will be available to Wheeling Township residents at a later date.

DeLuca-Columbo nuptials OK'd

A judge has approved of the marriage plans of accused killers Patricia Columbo and Frank DeLuca, but prospects of marital bliss for the pair likely will have to wait until January.

Cook County Circuit Court Judge Richard Fitzgerald Wednesday gave permission for Miss Columbo and DeLuca, who are charged with the brutal May 4 slaying of Miss Columbo's Elk Grove Village family, to marry while incarcerated in Cook County Jail.

Robert Iovino, spokesman for the county marriage bureau, however, said Wednesday afternoon a representative of his department probably will not interview county jail inmates wishing to obtain marriage licenses — a prenuptial requirement — until January. Marriage licenses for jail inmates last were issued in August, he said.

MISS COLUMBO and DeLuca, a divorced father of five, reportedly were living together in a Lombard apartment at the time of the murders of Frank Columbo, his wife Mary and 13-year-old son, Michael, at their home on 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

Miss Columbo, 20, was arrested and charged May 15 with the shooting, stabbing and bludgeoning murders. DeLuca, 39, and his former wife, Marilyn DeLuca of Addison, were divorced in DuPage County Circuit Court, May 28. DeLuca was arrested for the slayings July 17.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca are being held in lieu of $250,000 bond each.

While pretrial procedures were under way Sept. 1, DeLuca reportedly sent a letter to Fitzgerald, which read:

"MY WOMAN IS locked up in Division 3 (the Cook County Jail women's center) and we would like very much to be married. I have contacted a social worker for her help, and she told me I would have to obtain your permission before we could be married."

In a letter addressed to Cook County Jail Supt. Robert E. Glotz, Fitzgerald said he did not think the wedding would interfere with the case against DeLuca and Miss Columbo.

Fitzgerald also asked Glotz to interview the prisoners and make arrangements for blood tests and marriage license applications.

After letters of permission are exchanged among judicial, county clerk and jail officials, inmates wishing to be married are interviewed by a representative of the county marriage bureau, Iovino said.

Miss Columbo met DeLuca at the Walgreen Drug Store where he was manager at Bluestield and Arlington Heights roads in Elk Grove Village. Miss Columbo, dropped out of Elk Grove High School in 1974 to take on a full-time job as a cosmetics sales clerk at the store.

At about the same time, Miss Columbo moved out of her home. She and DeLuca later shared an apartment in Lombard after Miss Columbo and her father reportedly had a falling-out over her romance with DeLuca.

Garage fire the work of arsonist: authorities

Elk Grove Village investigators are convinced Sunday's garage fire at the Elk Grove Wesleyan Church was deliberately set, but they are unsure whether a fire on the same day at an adjacent 7-Eleven Store was the work of an arsonist.

The fire at the church, 545 Landmeier Rd., was reported at 1:46 a.m. and the store fire, at 565 Landmeier Rd., at 11:33 p.m.

A joint police and fire department investigation Wednesday found that "an accelerant" was used to start the church fire, which destroyed the garage and $2,000 to $3,000 worth of riding toys used by the church's preschool and nursery programs. Police Sgt. Ronald L. Iden said they are unsure exactly what material was used by the arsonist.

"WE ARE UNABLE to determine whether an accelerant (material to ensure a fire) was used in the dumpster behind the store," Iden said. "If one was used, it was burned up."

Iden said he is convinced both fires were related and are linked to a series of other small fires and false alarms in the area of the Branigan Forest View subdivision. A car fire which apparently began when some papers were set afire on a car seat was reported at about the same time and only three blocks away from the church fire Sunday.

Iden said the police have no leads now but are canvassing the neighborhood, looking for residents who might have seen someone or something suspicious. He urged anyone with information to call either the police or fire department, 439-3900.

The Cook County Sheriff's police also are investigating the incidents. The Branigan subdivision is unincorporated, but is, however, served by the Elk Grove Village Fire Dept. through the Forest View Fire Protection District.

Area residents have listened to a tape recording of one of the false alarms. Although the voice has not been identified yet, it apparently belongs to a boy of junior high school age, said Deputy Fire Chief Charles B. Henrici.

The fire at the church garage was the most destructive incident to date of the series, Henrici said.

candidate's name.

ONCE YOU HAVE gone through the booklet and voted, you remove the voting card, place it in a small white folder and hand it to the election judge. The folder contains space for write-in votes.

Some 9,200 of the units, which cost $204 each, have been purchased by Cook County for use at suburban voting places only. About 900 of the units are being placed in grocery stores, banks, other financial institutions and municipal and township offices so voters can learn the new method.

The new system is faster, a demonstration at the library proved. But the choices on the sample are peculiar to say the least.

Among the sample choices: Dolly Madison, Betsy Ross or Amelia Earhart for First Lady; Jack London, Mark Twain, Bret Hart or Edgar Allan Poe (choose two) for the Board of Education; and Jack Dempsey or Joe Louis for Director of Self Preservation.

$450 in aluminum stolen from firm

Thieves in Elk Grove Village stole scrap aluminum valued at $450 from the Walters Tool & Sales Corp., police reported Wednesday.

The thieves reportedly used a rake and shovel to load the scrap into a getaway vehicle at 333 King St. between Saturday and Tuesday.

Thieves also took an undetermined amount of wood from a construction site at 735 Parkview Circle between Sunday and Tuesday, police said.

by LUISA GINNETTI

The creation of Lincoln County must remain a dream at least until 1978 because of a legal technicality which prevents the question from being placed on the Nov. 2 ballot.

State Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, said Wednesday the deadline has passed for submitting petitions to have the matter on the ballot this year. Regner and Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones last week announced the start of a Lincoln County petition drive saying petitions had to be submitted 72 days before the election. He originally thought the deadline was 30 days before the election.

Regner said he plans to begin printing new petitions today in an effort to get the question on the ballot for the next general election in November 1978.

THE PROPOSAL will call for Cook

County voters to approve the secession of the 30 suburban townships from the county to form the proposed Lincoln County. The proposal was first offered six years ago by Jones and former Palatine Trustee Merwin E. Soper as a way of ending domination of the suburban area by Chicago Democrats on the County Board.

Regner said an estimated 500,000 to 600,000 registered voters in the proposed new county must sign the petition in order to get the question on the ballot.

Since the matter surfaced again last week, Regner said the proposal has received "phenomenal interest."

"There's a tremendous amount of interest in it and I've had at least 200 people call me asking about the petitions," he said. Support has come from other suburban legislators as well, he said.

REGNER SAID he also may proceed with plans to introduce legislation in the General Assembly next spring to change the requirements for creating a new county so it can be done by petition without a referendum of the entire affected county.

"It seems sort of ridiculous to have an election if we get a majority of the registered voters in the affected area to say they want to do it," Regner said.

Jones said Wednesday the petition drive will cost money to provide information for "public awareness" of the matter.

"It's almost like running a political campaign," Jones said. "You need workers and you need money."

Jones said the campaign would be greatly enhanced if local Republican organizations would accept the concept and adopt it as their Republican suburban philosophy.

"I THINK WHAT we have to do for long-range strategy is get the commission to agree to it," Jones said.

"The suburban area has to wake up to the fact that with 10 Chicago Democrats on the county board and only 10 votes needed to pass legislation, there is taxation without representation," Jones said. "And Chicago should wake up to the fact that they are paying a lot of money for a Cook County sheriff who has no authority in Chicago."

Jones has cited the imposition of a county gasoline tax and county liquor tax as examples of Chicago Democrats imposing their authority on the predominantly Republican suburbs.

The Palatine village president, taking the proposal one step further, said he would ultimately like to see the 30 suburban townships break down into five counties comprised of six townships each.

Each of the proposed five counties, Jones said, would have populations of at least 500,000, which is larger than many downstate counties.

Jones has suggested naming the counties Lincoln, Kennedy, Stevenson, Dirksen and Eisenhower.

SOFT MUSIC, nice thoughts and an occasional television show are given the credit for Don Francisco's tall tomato plants. The plants nearly died in April when Francisco, a Palatine resident, left them for a week to go fishing, but lots of tender loving care brought them back to life. Francisco hopes to have the 11-foot high plants listed in the Guinness Book of Records.

Thriving cherry tomatoes send grower 'up the wall'

Don Francisco's cherry tomato plants are driving him right up the wall. Up his garage wall, that is, to pick ripe tomatoes off the 11-foot tall vines that are growing along his garage at 233 S. Bothwell St., Palatine.

Most cherry tomato plants grow to only three or four feet high, so Francisco isn't sure why his are so tall. But he has a hunch it has something to do with the way he treats them.

"Perhaps they just enjoy the wonderful atmosphere," he said. Francisco said he plays soft music and television for the tomato plants, in addition to thinking "nice thoughts about them."

THE PLANTS HAVE grown so large that he now has them tied to a rack attached to his garage. They yield about 10 ripe tomatoes per day, Francisco said.

Francisco said the fact that he planted the seeds on St. Valentine's Day might also have something to do with the way they have grown.

"I planted them with a lot of love," he said.

He transplanted the plants from their indoor home, a plastic tray, to the ground along the front of his garage Memorial Day.

He admits that he did test the soil and apply some compost. But Francisco said he used no other fertilizer or chemicals, just "the wonderful atmosphere."

THE PLANTS ALMOST died when he went on vacation the first week in April, and he was ready to throw them out. But when he watered them,

Francisco said, the cherry tomato plants were revived. And they've been growing like crazy ever since.

"They're just from some seeds I picked up in a food store," Francisco said. "I just wanted to put some in a hanging basket on the patio."

Francisco, 35 and single, is quality control director for Chicago Show Printing, Morton Grove. He grew up on a farm, a fact that might have something to do with his "green thumb." A garden of normal-sized tomatoes and other vegetables grows along another wall of the garage.

There is no listing for the tallest cherry tomato plant in the Guinness Book of World Records, but Francisco is considering submitting his plants for the honor.

Harper report due in Lahti case

The final report of a Harper College special committee formed to investigate College Pres. Robert Lahti's alleged violations of college policy will be presented to the Harper Board of Trustees tonight.

Trustee Robert Rausch, the committee chairman, said he was working on the report Wednesday and plans to present it to the full board at its 8 p.m. meeting in the board room of the A building.

The committee was formed in July by Board Pres. Shirley Munson to investigate reports in The Herald and other local newspapers that Lahti misused college vehicles, flew first class in violation of college policy and engaged in unannounced meetings with members of the board.

ANOTHER COMMITTEE that Mrs. Munson formed to investigate possible conflict of interest on Lahti's part regarding his seat on the board of directors of the Bank of Elk Grove, where the college has accounts, reported earlier that Harper followed proper procedure in opening accounts and awarding certificates of deposit.

The board also will discuss whether it will spend approximately $100,000 to dredge the man-made lake on the Harper campus, Algonquin and Roselle roads, Palatine.

The lake was built so the college would be able to retain storm water on campus as required by the Metropolitan Sanitary District, said William J. Mann, vice president of administrative services.

Mann said the Lake has been filling with silt because construction work north of the college has caused erosion into a stream that empties into the lake.

Harper's architectural firm, Caudill, Rowlett and Scott, told the board last spring that dredging the lake would cost about $70,000, Mann said, but that estimate did not include the cost of overhead and profit.

Firms have submitted bids for the dredging operation in the $100,000 range, Mann said.

8% hike OKd for teachers in special ed co-op

A one-year contract granting teachers a salary increase of about 8 per cent has been ratified by the governing board of the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization.

Board members for the special education cooperative, which is supported by 10 Northwest suburban school districts, unanimously approved the 1976-77 contract Tuesday, with eight of the member districts voting.

Teachers from the cooperative ratified the contract last week in a 34-1 vote. NSSEO employs 56 teachers.

The average salary increase amounted to 7.65 per cent, said NSSEO Board Pres. Marguerite Pageler. Teachers union negotiator Jean Shartow said, however, teachers received an 8.8 per cent increase.

NSSEO DIRECTOR Edward McDonald said the discrepancy between the board and teacher figures occurs because the teachers calculated the raises for continuing teachers, while the board considered the difference between costs last year and this year. The board's figures included new teachers who are lower on the salary schedule, he said.

The contract raises base pay from $9,350 to $9,800. Salaries for teachers at the top of the pay scale increased from $18,830 to $19,032.

This is the first year NSSEO teachers have negotiated a contract with the board. The special education teachers formed a union in 1973, but the board did not recognize the union as the teachers' bargaining agent until after salaries were set for 1975-76.

The teachers' contract includes, among other fringe benefits, a parental leave clause that allows men and women a one-year leave of absence without pay as a result of the birth or adoption of a child.

Mrs. Pageler said the new contract is a "much more rational salary structure." She said the higher salaries at the top levels "makes it more professional and the base is competitive with the member districts."

Village tax rate may drop 8.3%

If Hoffman Estates wins its argument with Cook County assessors, village homeowners can expect an 8.3 per cent drop in the village tax rate next year.

The decrease would amount to a savings of $15 on property with an equalized assessed valuation of $18,000.

Keith A. Wendland, village finance director, based his estimate of the 1976 tax rate on a $1.99 million tax levy ordinance approved by the village board Tuesday.

THE TAX RATE should drop to $1.65 per $100 assessed valuation from this year's rate of $1.80, he said Wednesday. The official tax rate will be set by the county assessor later in the year.

In deriving the tax rate, Wendland said he assumed that the village's assessments squabble with the county will end, with about $4.2 million being added to the tax rolls.

The village says that amount in missed or underassessed buildings should be on the tax rolls this year.

Even if the county does not agree with the village on the assessments, the tax rate is expected to decline because the levy itself is $670,000 lower than this year's.

Wendland said it appears that budget will have a "continue as you are" flavor.

Some fees also will be raised to take up some slack, he said.

BUILDING PERMIT charges are expected to rise about 25 per cent, generating about $25,000 in additional revenue. For the average single-family home, the permit fee would in-

Berg clears Howlett in steel case

by United Press International

A Cook County judge Wednesday cleared Michael Howlett, the Democratic candidate for governor, of conflict-of-interest charges concerning his controversial part-time job with Sun Steel Corp.

"My client is vindicated," said Howlett's attorney, Don H. Reuben, after Circuit Court Judge Raymond K. Berg announced his decision.

Berg rejected as "erroneous and unlawful" the conflict charges contained in a report ordered by Atty. Gen. William Scott.

IN THE REPORT, former Illinois Supreme Court Justice Marvin F. Burt said Howlett had put himself in a "posture of conflict" by holding a consultant job with Sun Steel while serving as chairman of the state's vehicle recycling board, which deals with scrap iron.

"If a posture of conflict were held to be the standard, all public officials would have been, are or will be, in conflict," Berg ruled.

During the primary campaign, Howlett acknowledged he had held a $15,000-a-year job as consultant to Sun Steel, a Chicago Heights firm, for 15 years. The period of the alleged conflict stretched from Sept. 14, 1973,

Put vandals to work, Hayter tells trustees

Saying young vandals must take responsibility for their action, Hoffman Estates Village Pres Virginia M. Hayter has called for an ordinance to put convicted vandals on work detail.

Addressing the Hoffman Estates Village Board Tuesday, she said her plan is an alternative to a proposal being discussed in the suburbs making parents responsible for vandalism of their children.

"If a youngster is old enough to destroy property or deface it, then they need to see that they are responsible for their own actions," she said.

Her proposal is based on the premise that "a person has to be responsible for his own actions," she said.

The work detail would be "a more positive way of handling" the vandalism problem than holding parents liable for their children's actions, Mrs. Hayter said.

Under her plan, courts would have the option of assigning vandals to do clean-up work to repay damages at a standard $2.30-per-hour pay scale.

"We'd have the cleanest towns in the suburbs," she said.

Parents, Mrs. Hayter said, cannot always be around to see what their children are doing.

The proposal was sent to the village's judiciary and home rule committee.

Girl, 17, injured by hit-and-run car

A hit-and-run driver seriously injured a Schaumburg girl on a bicycle Wednesday night, and then fled to the Northwest Tollway eastbound at speeds of up to 100 m.p.h., with Citizens' Band radio operators and police in pursuit.

Stacy Detwiler, 17, of 1027 Duxbury Ln., Schaumburg, suffered multiple facial injuries with possible fractures when the bicycle she was riding on Springguth Road north of Weathersfield Way was struck by a blue and white pickup truck at 9 p.m. Wednesday. She was listed in fair condition.

The truck fled north up Weathersfield Way to Bode Road, Bode to Barrington Road, and Barrington to the Northwest Tollway where Citizens' Band radio operators reported his position to police.

Police lost the truck between Arlington Heights Road and the Tri-State Tollway.

Mrs. Detwiler, meanwhile, was transported by Schaumburg firefighters to Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, while police used a name engraved in her high school class ring to track down her parents.

Mrs. Detwiler was reported being X-rayed late Wednesday night at the hospital, while her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Detwiler, were reported enroute to her side at 10:30 p.m.

An eyewitness who lives near the scene of the accident said Mrs. Detwiler's body lay on the side of the street for 10 minutes after the accident before he went outside, discovered the accident and called police and paramedics.

Parks probing rowdiness at Evergreen Pk.

Complaints of vandalism and drugs, sex and beer parties at Evergreen Park, Washington Boulevard and Lakeview Lane, are being investigated by Hoffman Estates Park District officials.

Petitions signed by about 40 homeowners living near the park have been presented to the park board asking for park lighting "from dusk to dawn."

The residents also have asked park officials to hire a watchman to patrol all parks in the district.

Park Pres. George Rush referred the request to the buildings and grounds committee for study, saying results of a recent survey show a high percentage of residents view security lighting as a "high priority" item.

Parks are now lighted from sunset to 10 p.m., the official closing time for all parks in the district.

Former Wheeling Township committeeman

U.S. to grant Stavros his parole today

by TONI GINETTI

James Stavros resumes life as a free man today for the first time in more than two years.

The former Wheeling political king, whose reign by extortion led to a federal indictment, a guilty plea and four-year prison sentence, was released from a Chicago halfway house to begin parole.

Stavros, 46, had been assigned to the Community Treatment Center, 826 S. Wabash St., Chicago, since July 1 while awaiting parole. During that time Stavros participated in a work release program, returning to the facility in the evenings.

ROBERT THOMPSON, director of the Community Treatment Center, Wednesday said Stavros would be released and placed under the supervision of the U.S. Parole Commission.

Stavros' probation officer, Ron Kunke, said Wednesday he would meet with the former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman "shortly" to determine how often Stavros will report to him.

"He's listed some employment," Kunke added, but he said the information was "confidential" and declined to discuss it.

Court documents filed earlier this year in U.S. District Court by Stavros' attorney Thomas Foran cited employment as owner and manager of the J & J Farm near Woodstock as a proposed condition of parole.

STAVROS WILL report to probation authorities until the termination of his four-year sentence imposed in June 1974 by U.S. District Judge Hubert L. Will.

Stavros was the principle target of a 1973 U.S. Justice Dept. investigation into shakedowns of developers in Wheeling. He was indicted Jan. 31, 1974 along with three other village officials on charges of extortion, perjury and income tax evasion.

He served two years of the four-year sentence at the Federal Correctional Institution at Sandstone, Minn. Repeated efforts by Stavros to win parole were fruitless until June 17 when the U.S. Parole Commission agreed to his conditional release.

U.S. Justice Dept. officials who prosecuted the case against him described Stavros as a hardened strong-arm boss who often threatened bodily harm to developers who did not meet extortion demands.

Court records filed in December by Foran indicate Stavros owes some $17,500 in unpaid taxes for 1969 and 1970.

Internal Revenue Service spokesmen were unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Plans for Lincoln County delayed until '78: Regner

by LUISA GINETTI
The creation of Lincoln County must remain a dream at least until 1978 because of a legal technicality which prevents the question from being placed on the Nov. 2 ballot.

State Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, said Wednesday

the deadline has passed for submitting petitions to have the matter on the ballot this year. Regner and Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones last week announced the start of a Lincoln County petition drive saying petitions had to be submitted 72 days before the election. He originally thought the deadline was 30 days before the election.

Regner said he plans to begin printing new petitions today in an effort to get the question on the ballot for the next general election in November 1978.

THE PROPOSAL will call for Cook County voters to approve the secession of the 30 suburban townships from the county to form the proposed Lincoln County. The proposal was first offered six years ago by Jones and former Palatine Trustee Merwin E. Soper as a way of ending domination of the suburban area by Chicago Democrats on the County Board.

Regner said an estimated 500,000 to 600,000 registered voters in the proposed new county must sign the petition in order to get the question on the ballot.

Since the matter surfaced again last week, Regner said the proposal has received "phenomenal interest."

"There's a tremendous amount of interest in it and I've had at least 200 people call me asking about the petitions," he said. Support has come from other suburban legislators as well, he said.

REGNER SAID he also may proceed with plans to introduce legislation in the General Assembly next spring to change the requirements for creating a new county so it can be done by petition without a referendum of the entire affected county.

"It seems sort of ridiculous to have an election if we get a majority of the registered voters in the affected area to say they want to do it," Regner said.

Jones said Wednesday the petition drive will cost money to provide information for "public awareness" of the matter.

"It's almost like running a political campaign," Jones said. "You need workers and you need money."

Jones said the campaign would be greatly enhanced if local Republican organizations would accept the concept and adopt it as their Republican suburban philosophy.

"I THINK WHAT we have to do for long-range strategy is get the committeemen to agree to it," Jones said.

"The suburban area has to wake up to the fact that with 10 Chicago Democrats on the county board and only 10 votes needed to pass legislation, there is taxation without representation," Jones said. "And Chicago should wake up to the fact that they are paying a lot of money for a Cook County sheriff who has no authority in Chicago."

Jones has cited the imposition of a county gasoline tax and county liquor tax as examples of Chicago Democrats imposing their authority on the predominantly Republican suburbs.

The Palatine village president, taking the proposal one step further, said he would ultimately like to see the 30 suburban townships break down into five counties comprised of six townships each.

Each of the proposed five counties, Jones said, would have populations of at least 500,000, which is larger than many downstate counties.

Jones has suggested naming the counties Lincoln, Kennedy, Stevenson, Dirksen and Eisenhower.

Pains send Longmeyer to heart unit

Hoffman Estates Village Mgr. George P. Longmeyer is under observation in the coronary care unit of Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights after complaining of chest pains Tuesday.

Doctors are performing a series of tests on Longmeyer, 35, who has been the village's chief administrator since September 1971.

Village Pres. Virginia M. Hayter said Longmeyer has suffered chest pains "on and off" for the past two years. There is no indication whether he suffered a heart attack, she said.

She added that he also has suffered from skin lesions that have been growing more severe in the past few months.

Hospital officials refused to release information on his condition, and

George Longmeyer

Longmeyer's doctor was unavailable for comment.

Mrs. Hayter said Longmeyer discussed his medical situation with her at his office in the municipal building Tuesday morning and, after deciding to enter the hospital, met briefly with the village staff.

Results from a number of "extensive" tests are not available, she said. The nature of his illness will not be known until test results are returned, she said.

He is expected to be absent from work for at least 10 days.

8.3% decline in village tax rate seen: Wendland

crease from $243.50 to about $304.

An increase of 20 per cent to 25 per cent also is planned on fees for the village's engineering services, such as the technical assistance the department gives developers, Wendland said. That increase is expected to generate about $15,000.

The drop in next year's rate comes in the midst of a controversy over assessment levels that boosted this year's rate.

Wendland said the village has written the county assessor's office requesting a meeting with Assessor Thomas Tully.

The village could gain additional revenue next year if the county agrees that some buildings were left off the assessment roll this year and backtaxes them.

IF THE AMOUNT of money involved is substantial, Wendland said, the village probably will press for a backtax.

But any funds received via that route would not affect next year's rate, he said.

Revenue generated by a backtax, he said, would be applied to the 1973 tax levy, which hasn't been collected completely.

Generally, Wendland said, villages are able to collect only about 95 per cent of the taxes they levy.

DeLuca-Columbo nuptials OK'd

A judge has approved of the marriage plans of accused killers Patricia Columbo and Frank DeLuca, but prospects of marital bliss for the pair likely will have to wait until January.

Cook County Circuit Court Judge Richard Fitzgerald Wednesday gave permission for Miss Columbo and DeLuca, who are charged with the brutal May 4 slaying of Miss Columbo's Elk Grove Village family, to marry while incarcerated in Cook County Jail.

Robert Iovino, spokesman for the county marriage bureau, however, said Wednesday afternoon a representative of his department probably will not interview county jail inmates wishing to obtain marriage licenses — a pre-nuptial requirement — until January. Marriage licenses for jail inmates last were issued in August, he said.

Village.

Miss Columbo, 20, was arrested and charged May 15 with the shooting, stabbing and bludgeoning murders. DeLuca, 39, and his former wife, Marilyn DeLuca of Addison, were divorced in DuPage County Circuit Court, May 28. DeLuca was arrested for the slayings July 17.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca are being held in lieu of $250,000 bond each.

While pretrial procedures were under way Sept. 1, DeLuca reportedly sent a letter to Fitzgerald, which read:

"MY WOMAN IS locked up in Division 3 (the Cook County Jail women's center) and we would like very much to be married. I have contacted a social worker for her help, and she told me I would have to obtain your permission before we could be married."

In a letter addressed to Cook County Jail Supt. Robert E. Glotz, Fitzgerald said he did not think the wedding would interfere with the case against DeLuca and Miss Columbo.

Fitzgerald also asked Glotz to interview the prisoners and make arrangements for blood tests and marriage license applications.

After letters of permission are exchanged among judicial, county clerk and jail officials, inmates wishing to be married are interviewed by a representative of the county marriage bureau, Iovino said.

Miss Columbo met DeLuca at the Walgreen Drug Store where he was manager at Blesterfield and Arlington Heights roads in Elk Grove Village. Miss Columbo dropped out of Elk Grove High School in 1974 to take on a full-time job as a cosmetics sales clerk at the store.

At about the same time, Miss Columbo moved out of her home. She and DeLuca later shared an apartment in Lombard after Miss Columbo and her father reportedly had a falling-out over her romance with DeLuca.

5% reduction in taxes forecast by park district

A $437,523 1976 tax levy ordinance which is expected to reduce taxes by about 5 per cent has been approved by the Hoffman Estates Park District Board.

The ordinance, based on an anticipated $130 million tax base, will mean residents will pay 31 cents per $100 of equalized assessed valuation, down from the 32.6 cents tax rate of 1975.

For a house assessed at $10,000, residents would pay $31 in park taxes compared to $32.60 paid this year.

Taxes have dropped because the park district paid off about $60,000 in outstanding bonds during the past year, said Allen J. Binder, director of parks and recreation.

Binder said the new levy includes a $34,775 working cash fund established by the park board last month. A new law allows park districts to levy an additional 2.5 cents per $100 of assessed valuation to eliminate cash flow problems that have forced some districts to borrow — and incur interest costs — when their property tax receipts come too late to meet continuing operating expenses.

Binder said a $27,820 handicapped recreation fund also is in the levy. He said the recreation fund was included in the 1975 ordinance, but the tax was not actually levied by Cook County.

While the new park district tax ordinance specifies a total levy of $437,500, actual receipts are traditionally much less. Last year, for example, the district levied for $456,000 but collected $358,700.

Textile classes, soccer offered by park district

Textile classes for girls and women, soccer programs for boys, a children's hour and men's racquetball have been included in Schaumburg Park District's fall recreation program.

Registration by mail for fall programs will be accepted through next Wednesday. Applications must be mailed to Schaumburg Park District, Registration, 220 E. Weathersfield Way, Schaumburg.

Applications postmarked later than Wednesday will be returned unopened.

Walk-in registration will begin Sept. 18. Registration hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to noon Saturdays.

All fees must be paid at registration. Proof of residency, a current utility bill or driver's license, must be shown.

Nonresident registration will begin Sept. 22. Those living outside the park district must appear in person at park offices to register.

For more information contact the park district, 4660.

McGuire to chair special rec unit

Hoffman Estates Park Comr. Thomas McGuire has been appointed chairman of a special committee to oversee the district's new recreation program for the handicapped.

The program was established earlier this year when the park board approved a special tax levy to provide recreation programs for the handicapped through the Northwest Special Recreation Group.

The levy of 2 cents per $100 of equalized assessed valuation will generate about $28,000 annually for the program.

McGuire's committee will be responsible for making certain the recreation tax is used properly, to encourage Hoffman Estates programs for the handicapped and to develop public relations.

Hoffman Estates residents Peter Smith, Mary Lou Graham and Mrs. Arthur Goldsmith have been appointed as committee members, with Ed Haag, park recreation superintendent, as committee liaison to the park board.

The committee will meet at 8 p.m. Oct. 3 at Vogel Community Center, 650 W. Higgins Rd., Hoffman Estates.

Voter registration two weekday nights

Schaumburg Township offices will be open on two weekday evenings next week and Saturday for voter registration.

Registration will be taken at the township office, 105 S. Roselle Rd., Schaumburg, during regular office hours Monday through Friday from 8:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The office also will be open from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday and from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday.

Deadline for registration in the township office is Sept. 17.

To register, persons must be at least 18 years old, residents of their precinct 30 days before the Nov. 2 general election and U.S. citizens.

For more information, contact the township office, 894-8130.

Parks to add two commissioner spots

The number of Hoffman Estates Park District commissioners will increase from five to seven at the April park election.

Park board members have voted to expand the board and said they will seek a legal opinion from the Illinois Assn. of Park Districts on reducing commissioners' terms from six years to four.

In other action, park board members agreed to borrow $19,798 from Schaumburg State Bank to reimburse Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 for the park district's share of improvements at Eisenhower Junior High School, 300 W. Hassell Rd.

The loan will be repaid over five years, said Park Director Allen J. Binder. The money represents the park district's share of the $88,000 park-school improvement project.

Eisenhower Junior High and other Dist. 54 schools are used by the park district under a park-school lease agreement.

Thursdays will be trash-pickup days

Hoffman Estates throws out its old garbage collection program today to begin a new one.

Garbage now will be collected throughout the village each Thursday.

In the past, the village was divided into five sections, with each section receiving service on a different week day.

This also is the last week for summer service, with pickup reverting today from twice to once a week.

THE PRIMARY reason for the new schedule, Village Mgr. George P. Longmeyer said, is to limit the number of days per week that garbage cans are on the curbs.

This way the village has to worry about bad weather only one day per week instead of five, he said.

It also will make it easier to monitor the program and should limit refuse problems, he said.

SOFT MUSIC, nice thoughts and an occasional television show are given the credit for Don Francisco's tall tomato plants. The plants nearly died in April when Francisco, a Palatine resident, left them for a week to go fishing, but lots of tender loving care brought them back to life. Francisco hopes to have the 11-foot high plants listed in the Guinness Book of Records.

Thriving cherry tomatoes send grower 'up the wall'

Don Francisco's cherry tomato plants are driving him right up the wall. Up his garage wall, that is, to pick ripe tomatoes off the 11-foot tall vines that are growing along his garage at 253 S. Bothwell St., Palatine.

Most cherry tomato plants grow to only three or four feet high, so Francisco isn't sure why his are so tall. But he has a hunch it has something to do with the way he treats them.

"Perhaps they just enjoy the wonderful atmosphere," he said. Francisco said he plays soft music and television for the tomato plants, in addition to thinking "nice thoughts about them."

THE PLANTS HAVE grown so large that he now has them tied to a rack attached to his garage. They yield about 10 ripe tomatoes per day, Francisco said.

Francisco said the fact that he planted the seeds on St. Valentine's Day might also have something to do with the way they have grown.

"I planted them with a lot of love," he said.

He transplanted the plants from their indoor home, a plastic tray, to the ground along the front of his garage Memorial Day.

He admits that he did test the soil and apply some compost. But Francisco said he used no other fertilizer or chemicals, just "the wonderful atmosphere."

THE PLANTS ALMOST died when he went on vacation the first week in April, and he was ready to throw them out. But when he watered them,

Francisco said, the cherry tomato plants were revived. And they've been growing like crazy ever since.

"They're just from some seeds I picked up in a food store," Francisco said. "I just wanted to put some in a hanging basket on the patio."

Francisco, 35 and single, is quality control director for Chicago Show Printing, Morton Grove. He grew up on a farm, a fact that might have something to do with his "green thumb." A garden of normal-sized tomatoes and other vegetables grows along another wall of the garage.

There is no listing for the tallest cherry tomato plant in the Guinness Book of World Records, but Francisco is considering submitting his plants for the honor.

Harper unit reports today in Lahti case

The final report of a Harper College special committee formed to investigate College Pres. Robert Lahti's alleged violations of college policy will be presented to the Harper Board of Trustees tonight.

Trustee Robert Rausch, the committee chairman, said he was working on the report Wednesday and plans to present it to the full board at its 8 p.m. meeting in the board room of the A building.

The committee was formed in July by Board Pres. Shirley Munson to investigate reports in The Herald and other local newspapers that Lahti misused college vehicles, flew first class in violation of college policy and engaged in unannounced meetings with members of the board.

ANOTHER COMMITTEE that Mrs. Munson formed to investigate possible conflict of interest on Lahti's part regarding his seat on the board of directors of the Bank of Elk Grove, where the college has accounts, reported earlier that Harper followed proper procedure in opening accounts and awarding certificates of deposit.

The board also will discuss whether it will spend approximately $100,000 to dredge the man-made lake on the Harper campus, Algonquin and Roselle roads, Palatine.

The lake was built so the college would be able to retain storm water on campus as required by the Metropolitan Sanitary District, said William J. Mann, vice president of administrative services.

Mann said the lake has been filling with silt because construction work north of the college has caused erosion into a stream that empties into the lake.

Harper's architectural firm, Caudill, Rowlett and Scott, told the board last spring that dredging the lake would cost about $70,000, Mann said, but that estimate did not include the cost of overhead and profit.

Firms have submitted bids for the dredging operation in the $100,000 range, Mann said.

Hennessy asks rates to curb use of water

Rolling Meadows should change its water rates to offer a financial incentive to conserve water, said Public Works Supt. John Hennessy.

The city now charges a flat rate of 63 cents for every 1,000 gallons of water and requires customers to pay for at least 10,000 gallons every three months.

Hennessy said it's time "we woke up to the fact that we face a water shortage and get out of the water-selling business and think about conservation."

HE SAID CITY residents already are concerned about Rolling Meadows' water supply, and he wants the city to change its water rates to provide a built-in incentive to save water. He is proposing an "inverted" rate schedule to "reward" customers who use small amounts of water.

Hennessy has not developed a specific proposal, but his idea is to reduce the quarterly minimum to avoid billing customers for water they do not use and to increase the per-gallon price for additional water.

"Perhaps we should think about giving people who use less than the basic allowance some sort of rate discount," he added.

ANY SORT OF rate increase would offer a conservation incentive, Hennessy said. "As water becomes more expensive, users automatically will reduce use or, by paying more for the water, will help pay for improvements to the system," he said.

Although the inverted water rate schedule has been discussed by several aldermen in committee sessions, the proposal has not been brought up for a city council vote.

Hennessy says he will continue to push for such a measure in Rolling Meadows and neighboring communities.

"It's important that similar ordinances or water conservation measures be adopted by all the municipalities withdrawing water from the aquifer," Hennessy said.

SOME TOWNS still offer discount prices to high-volume customers, Hennessy said. "This is totally irresponsible," he said. "At least we don't do that."

"Anything this city does without uniform adoption of similar actions by our neighbors will not solve the problem of declining water levels in the aquifer we all draw from," he said.

"However, our conservation measures will allow us to provide more water with existing equipment for our city by reducing peak day demand," he added.

Buffalo Grove officials had considered similar action last fall, but the inverted rate schedule recommended by the city public works committee was never adopted.

Berg clears Howlett in steel case

by United Press International

A Cook County judge Wednesday cleared Michael Howlett, the Democratic candidate for governor, of conflict-of-interest charges concerning his controversial part-time job with Sun Steel Corp.

"My client is vindicated," said Howlett's attorney, Don H. Reuben, after Circuit Court Judge Raymond K. Berg announced his decision.

Berg rejected as "erroneous and unlawful" the conflict charges contained in a report ordered by Atty. Gen. William Scott.

IN THE REPORT, former Illinois Supreme Court Justice Marvin F. Burt said Howlett had put himself in a "posture of conflict" by holding a consultant job with Sun Steel while serving as chairman of the state's vehicle recycling board, which deals with scrap iron.

"If a posture of conflict were held to be the standard, all public officials would have been, are or will be, in conflict," Berg ruled.

During the primary campaign, Howlett acknowledged he had held a $15,000-a-year job as consultant to Sun Steel, a Chicago Heights firm, for 15 years. The period of the alleged conflict stretched from Sept. 14, 1973,

Former Wheeling Township committeeman

U.S. to grant Stavros his parole today

by TONI GINETTI

James Stavros resumes life as a free man today for the first time in more than two years.

The former Wheeling political king, whose reign by extortion led to a federal indictment, a guilty plea and four-year prison sentence, was released from a Chicago halfway house to begin parole.

Stavros, 46, had been assigned to the Community Treatment Center, 626 S. Wabash St., Chicago, since July 1 while awaiting parole. During that time Stavros participated in a work release program, returning to the facility in the evenings.

ROBERT THOMPSON, director of the Community Treatment Center, Wednesday said Stavros would be released and placed under the supervision of the U.S. Parole Commission.

Stavros' probation officer, Ron Kunkle, said Wednesday he would meet with the former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman "shortly" to determine how often Stavros will report to him.

"He's listed some employment," Kunkle added, but he said the information was "confidential" and declined to discuss it.

Court documents filed earlier this year in U.S. District Court by Stavros' attorney Thomas Foran cited employment as owner and manager of the J & J Farm near Woodstock as a proposed condition of parole.

STAVROS WILL report to probation authorities until the termination of his four-year sentence imposed in June 1974 by U.S. District Judge Hubert L. Will.

Stavros was the principle target of a 1973 U.S. Justice Dept. investigation into shakedowns of developers in Wheeling. He was indicted Jan. 31, 1974 along with three other village officials on charges of extortion, perjury and income tax evasion.

He served two years of the four-year sentence at the Federal Correctional Institution at Sandstone, Minn. Repeated efforts by Stavros to win parole were fruitless until June 17 when the U.S. Parole Commission agreed to his conditional release.

U.S. Justice Dept. officials who prosecuted the case against him described Stavros as a hardened strong-arm boss who often threatened bodily harm to developers who did not meet extortion demands.

Court records filed in December by Foran indicate Stavros owes some $17,500 in unpaid taxes for 1969 and 1970.

Internal Revenue Service spokesmen were unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Stavros' attorney, Thomas Foran, said he would like the committee to tell the city's professional staff what the council believes its future boundaries will be.

"Let me polish my crystal ball and I still may not be able to answer that question," Retzke said.

He requested Blane consult with other department heads and report back to the committee at its next meeting Nov. 2.

"We have given you a brief outline of what we know will be this city's main concern in the next few years. We now need you to tell us the best systems of meeting with these emergencies," Retzke said.

The committee was appointed about a year ago by Mayor Roland J. Meyer and met several times but later became inactive. Tuesday's meeting was the first in about six months.

Clean water top priority of city planning panel

The future availability of clean water is the main concern of the Rolling Meadows Future Planning Committee, which met Wednesday night.

This and the following concerns will be reviewed by its members in the next several months. They are:

- The problem of garbage disposal.
- The city's municipal buildings and undeveloped properties.
- City equipment and what new purchases should be made within the next three years.

• How the city will convert to a new 911 emergency telephone system.

Ald. Kenneth Retzke, 5th, chairman of the future planning committee, said although these are the committee's primary concerns, he is asking city department heads and City Mgr. Charles Green to offer other suggestions. "They may have other priorities or ratings that this committee hasn't foreseen and should discuss," Retzke said.

ROD BLANE, administrative aide, said he would like the committee to tell the city's professional staff what the council believes its future boundaries will be.

back to the committee at its next meeting Nov. 2.

Education in rules of road best solution: official

Ignorance blamed in deaths of many bicycle riders

by DIANE MERNIGAS

What you don't know can hurt you. It can even kill you.

An unwillingness to know or follow the proper rules of the road killed about 800 bicyclists across the country last year and injured about 40,000, at least half of them children.

The tangle of cars and bikes on our nation's highways troubles safety council, police, motor and bicycle club officials, because they know there is a simple enough solution to what is too often a tragic problem.

THE SOLUTION, they say, is a combination of education and respect.

"The motorist and the bicyclist have an obligation to each other. They should both know the rules of the road. They should both follow those rules stringently, and they should respect each other's equal right to the road," said Harold E. Heldreth, bicycle safety coordinator for the National Safety Council.

Heldreth says there is "a definite hostility on the roads" between motorists and bicyclists. Children on bikes tend to weave in and out of cars, ride against traffic and disobey traffic signals.

Motorists often harass bicyclists who may be adhering to the rules of the road, attempting to side-swipe them or drive them off the road.

"A MASS EDUCATION program required across the country would be the best solution, but that's almost impossible to expect," he said.

"Enough bicycle safety programs must be offered on the local level for children and enough drivers must be made aware of bicyclists' rights so that the situation can be improved," Heldreth said.

The National Safety Council in Chicago offers a six-hour bicycle education program through Chicago area elementary schools beginning with the second grade.

The council also offers a course for teen-agers who are interested in teaching young children about bicycle safety.

"THERE ARE MORE than 100 million bicyclists in the country today. More people are riding bikes for recreation and transportation, and we need to offer them instruction at an early age so they have a respect for the road," Heldreth said.

Safety experts like Heldreth agree that it's often the middle-aged motorist, who no longer rides a bike, who is the most difficult person to "get through to."

"There is no program anywhere in the country that is aimed at educating the motorist," said Jim Kashmier, district bikeway coordinator for the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

Kashmier said accidents between cars and bikes most often occur when the motorist passes a cyclist and then makes an immediate right hand turn without giving the biker enough warning; when motorists backing out of driveways do not see bikes coming into their path; and when motorists and bicyclists do not yield the right-of-way to each other at intersections.

"THERE IS A VERY bad attitude in this country among motorists who view the bike as a toy, not as a vehicle that has equal rights on the road. The problem is compounded by the fact that many bicyclists don't bother to follow the proper rules of the road and gain the respect of the motorist," he said.

A bill signed by Gov. Daniel Walker in September 1975 gives bicyclists equal rights to the roadways, but requires them to abide by the same rules as motorists.

Bicyclists can and are being ticketed for violating rules of the road, Kashmier said.

"But, not all roads are constructed for use by bicycles. Bicyclists should look for a four-lane road with a good shoulder or bike lane to ride on. The lanes should be wide enough for them and a car, the speed limit should be low enough and the truck traffic at a minimum," he said.

KASHMIER HAS BEEN helping to coordinate a network of bike routes and paths throughout the Northwest suburbs and other areas of the state. State grants are being provided to communities which are willing to develop bicycle paths and routes.

The combination of proper bikeways and education "will bring down the accident rate," said Ernest Deitmar, the Mount Prospect Police Department's "Officer Friendly" and coordinator of the bicycle safety program.

The police department was one of the first in Illinois two years ago to begin a major bicycle education and enforcement program.

The department sponsors regular bike rodeos to test children's proficiency in bike riding, programs to teach them about bike safety and rules, and even a traffic court where violators ticketed for running stop signs or riding against traffic are sentenced to attend bicycle school or to write an essay on bike safety.

THE RESULT? There were 23 bike-car accidents reported in Mount Prospect in 1975 compared to 37 accidents in 1974. Only four such accidents have been reported so far this year, Deitmar said.

Officials of the League of American Wheelmen, a national organization based in Palatine that promotes bicycling safety, agree that a combination of education and providing proper bike routes has curbed bicycle-car accidents over the past several years.

"The programs, the bike routes and the education all help. But all it really takes is a little common sense and courtesy on the road to avoid some of these accidents," said Phyllis Harmon, a club official.

"If people don't start recognizing the problems, it's going to be their children or even themselves someday who are victims of a senseless accident. And then it's going to be too late," she said.

Harper panel to submit final report in Lahti case

The final report of a Harper College special committee formed to investigate College Pres. Robert Lahti's alleged violations of college policy will be presented to the Harper Board of Trustees tonight.

Trustee Robert Amsch, the committee chairman, said he was working on the report Wednesday and plans to present it to the full board at its 8 p.m. meeting in the board room of the A building.

The committee was formed in July by Board Pres. Shirley Munson to investigate reports in The Herald and other local newspapers that Lahti misused college vehicles, flew first class in violation of college policy and engaged in unannounced meetings with members of the board.

ANOTHER COMMITTEE that Mrs. Munson formed to investigate possible conflict of interest on Lahti's part regarding his seat on the board of directors of the Bank of Elk Grove, where the college has accounts, reported earlier that Harper followed proper procedure in opening accounts and awarding certificates of deposit.

The board also will discuss whether it will spend approximately $100,000 to dredge the man-made lake on the Harper campus, Algonquin and Roselle roads, Palatine.

The lake was built so the college would be able to retain storm water on campus as required by the Metropolitan Sanitary District, said William J. Mann, vice president of administrative services.

Mann said the Lake has been filling with silt because construction work north of the college has caused erosion into a stream that empties into the lake.

Harper's architectural firm, Caudill, Rowlett and Scott, told the board last spring that dredging the lake would cost about $70,000, Mann said, but that estimate did not include the cost of overhead and profit.

Firms have submitted bids for the dredging operation in the $100,000 range, Mann said.

Teachers get 8% pay hike in special ed cooperative

A one-year contract granting teachers a salary increase of about 8 per cent has been ratified by the governing board of the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization.

Board members for the special education cooperative, which is supported by 10 Northwest suburban school districts, unanimously approved the 1976-77 contract Tuesday, with eight of the member districts voting.

Teachers from the cooperative ratified the contract last week in a 34-1 vote. NSSEO employs 56 teachers.

The average salary increase amounted to 7.85 per cent, said NSSEO Board Pres. Margaret Pageler. Teachers union negotiator Jean Shurtow said, however, teachers received an 8.8 per cent increase.

NSSEODIRECTOR Edward McDonald said the discrepancy between the board and teacher figures occurs because the teachers calculated the raises for continuing teachers, while the board considered the difference between costs last year and this year. The board's figures included new teachers who are lower on the salary schedule, he said.

The contract raises base pay from $9,350 to $9,800. Salaries for teachers at the top of the pay scale increased from $16,830 to $18,032.

This is the first year NSSEO teachers have negotiated a contract with the board. The special education teachers formed a union in 1975, but the board did not recognize the union as the teachers' bargaining agent until after salaries were set for 1975-76.

The teachers' contract includes, among other fringe benefits, a parental leave clause that allows men and women a one-year leave of absence without pay as a result of the birth or adoption of a child.

Mrs. Pageler said the new contract is a "much more rational salary structure." She said the higher salaries at the top levels "makes it more professional and the base is more competitive with the member districts."

Macdonald to talk on state government

The 79th Illinois General Assembly's effect on business will be discussed by State Rep. Virginia Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights, at the Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce luncheon at noon Sept. 23.

The industrial division committee, chaired by Frank Carroll and Richard Erick, have arranged for Macdonald to be the main speaker at the luncheon at Chez Paul restaurant, Rolling Meadows.

The committee is accepting reservations. Anyone interested may call the Chamber at 398-3730.

Election may hinge on it

Carter out to win votes of blacks

by MATTHEW C. QUINN
ATLANTA (UPI) — The Jimmy Carter campaign expects to maintain strong support in black communities and predicts black votes, pushed by an intensive voter registration drive, could swing a close election in November.

Officials interviewed at Carter's national campaign headquarters said it was possible that the situation of the primaries, where black votes were crucial to several Carter victories, could repeat itself on a national scale.

"Basically, we're trying to increase voter registration in some of the large electoral vote states where the black vote can very easily be the difference between winning and losing," said Rep. Andrew Young, D-Ga., a key Carter adviser.

"IT'S TRUE IN Illinois, New York and Pennsylvania. The key is the number of voters registered and also the turnout."

Young heads the Democratic party's $1.8 million voter registration drive, kicked off by Carter and him recently in Los Angeles.

According to 1976 U.S. Bureau of Census figures, Illinois has 853,000 voting-age blacks, 12.4 of the total voting-age population; New York, 1,623,000, 12.6 per cent; and Pennsylvania, 688,000, 8.2 per cent.

In the South, blacks make up a higher percentage of the population. For instance, in Georgia, there are 800,000 voting-age blacks, 23.7 per cent of the total.

THE ATLANTA-BASED Voter Education Project estimates 555,000 of those are registered. Similar estimates are not available for Northern states.

"The black vote is going to be very crucial for a Democratic victory in those key electoral states," said Georgia state Rep. Ben Brown, deputy campaign director and another important Carter adviser.

"If we are successful in getting a good voter turnout, it will determine in many instances whether the state is going to fall into the Democratic column or the Republican column."

But pollster Pat Caddell said black votes were part of Carter's "base" and any Democratic candidate would gain a large percentage of those votes.

"IF THE MARGIN is very close, you'll be able to say it elected him but you could say the same things for other groups," he said.

"If the election is close, anybody is the swing," political director Landon Butler said. "But if we get much higher a percentage of the black vote than a normal Democratic candidate, it is conceivable that it could make the difference."

John Lewis, executive director of the nonpartisan VEP, said a "majority" of the blacks registered in the program will vote for Carter. He said the "black vote will be decisive in determining what column" the industrial states are in.

Both Young and Brown expect Carter to retain his support in black communities although he may have to take positions unpopular there to appeal to a national constituency.

"OUR MAIN task is first to reassure our early supporters that they are indeed important to our continuing effort and have them understand that we must broaden our base to include those who were in other camps during the primaries," Brown said.

"There's a whole lot of things I disagree with Gov. Carter about," Young said.

Young asked Carter to retract his "ethnic purity" remark in March. And he said Carter's recent pledge to delay social programs if necessary to achieve a balanced budget will "be one of the things we will have to fight about."

But he said he has "to fight hard for what I believe in" and trusts Carter to reach compromises "best for all concerned."

Charlene Carl, vice president of the campaign's Atlanta advertising agency, said a "substantial" amount of the $8 million ad budget would buy ads in "black radio and newspapers."

SOFT MUSIC, nice thoughts and an occasional television show are given the credit for Don Francisco's tall tomato plants. The plants nearly died in April when Francisco, a Palatine resident, left them for a week to go fishing, but lots of tender loving care brought them back to life. Francisco hopes to have the 11-foot high plants listed in the Guinness Book of Records.

Music, TLC do wonders for tomatoes

Don Francisco's cherry tomato plants are driving him right up the wall. Up his garage wall, that is, to pick ripe tomatoes off the 11-foot tall vines that are growing along his garage at 253 S. Bothwell St., Palatine.

Most cherry tomato plants grow to only three or four feet high, so Francisco isn't sure why his are so tall. But he has a hunch it has something to do with the way he treats them.

"Perhaps they just enjoy the wonderful atmosphere," he said. Francisco said he plays soft music and television for the tomato plants, in addition to thinking "nice thoughts about them."

THE PLANTS HAVE grown so large that he now has them tied to a rack attached to his garage. They yield about 10 ripe tomatoes per day, Francisco said.

Francisco said the fact that he planted the seeds on St. Valentine's Day might also have something to do with the way they have grown.

"I planted them with a lot of love," he said.

He transplanted the plants from their indoor home, a plastic tray, to the ground along the front of his garage Memorial Day.

He admits that he did test the soil and apply some compost. But Francisco said he used no other fertilizer or chemicals, just "the wonderful atmosphere."

THE PLANTS ALMOST died when he went on vacation the first week in April, and he was ready to throw them out. But when he watered them, Francisco said, the cherry tomato plants were revived. And they've been growing like crazy ever since.

"They're just from some seeds I picked up in a food store," Francisco said. "I just wanted to put some in a hanging basket on the patio."

Francisco, 35 and single, is quality control director for Chicago Show Printing, Morton Grove. He grew up on a farm, a fact that might have something to do with his "green thumb." A garden of normal-sized tomatoes and other vegetables grows along another wall of the garage.

There is no listing for the tallest cherry tomato plant in the Guinness Book of World Records, but Francisco is considering submitting his plants for the honor.

Lincoln Co. plans hit a snag

by LUISA GINETTI

The creation of Lincoln County must remain a dream at least until 1978 because of a legal technicality which prevents the question from being placed on the Nov. 2 ballot.

State Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, said Wednesday the deadline has passed for submitting petitions to have the matter on the ballot this year. Regner and Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones last week announced the start of a Lincoln County petition drive saying petitioners had to be submitted 72 days before the election. He originally thought the deadline was 30 days before the election.

Regner said he plans to begin printing new petitions today in an effort to get the question on the ballot for the next general election in November 1978.

THE PROPOSAL will call for Cook County voters to approve the secession of the 30 suburban townships from the county to form the proposed Lincoln County. The proposal was first offered six years ago by Jones and former Palatine Trustee Merwin E. Soper as a way of ending domination of the suburban area by Chicago Democrats on the County Board.

Regner said an estimated 500,000 to 600,000 registered voters in the proposed new county must sign the petition in order to get the question on the ballot.

Since the matter surfaced again last week, Regner said the proposal has received "phenomenal interest."

"There's a tremendous amount of interest in it and I've had at least 200 people call me asking about the petition."

Berg clears Howlett in steel case

by United Press International

A Cook County judge Wednesday cleared Michael Howlett, the Democratic candidate for governor, of conflict-of-interest charges concerning his controversial part-time job with Sun Steel Corp.

"My client is vindicated," said Howlett's attorney, Don H. Reuben, after Circuit Court Judge Raymond K. Berg announced his decision.

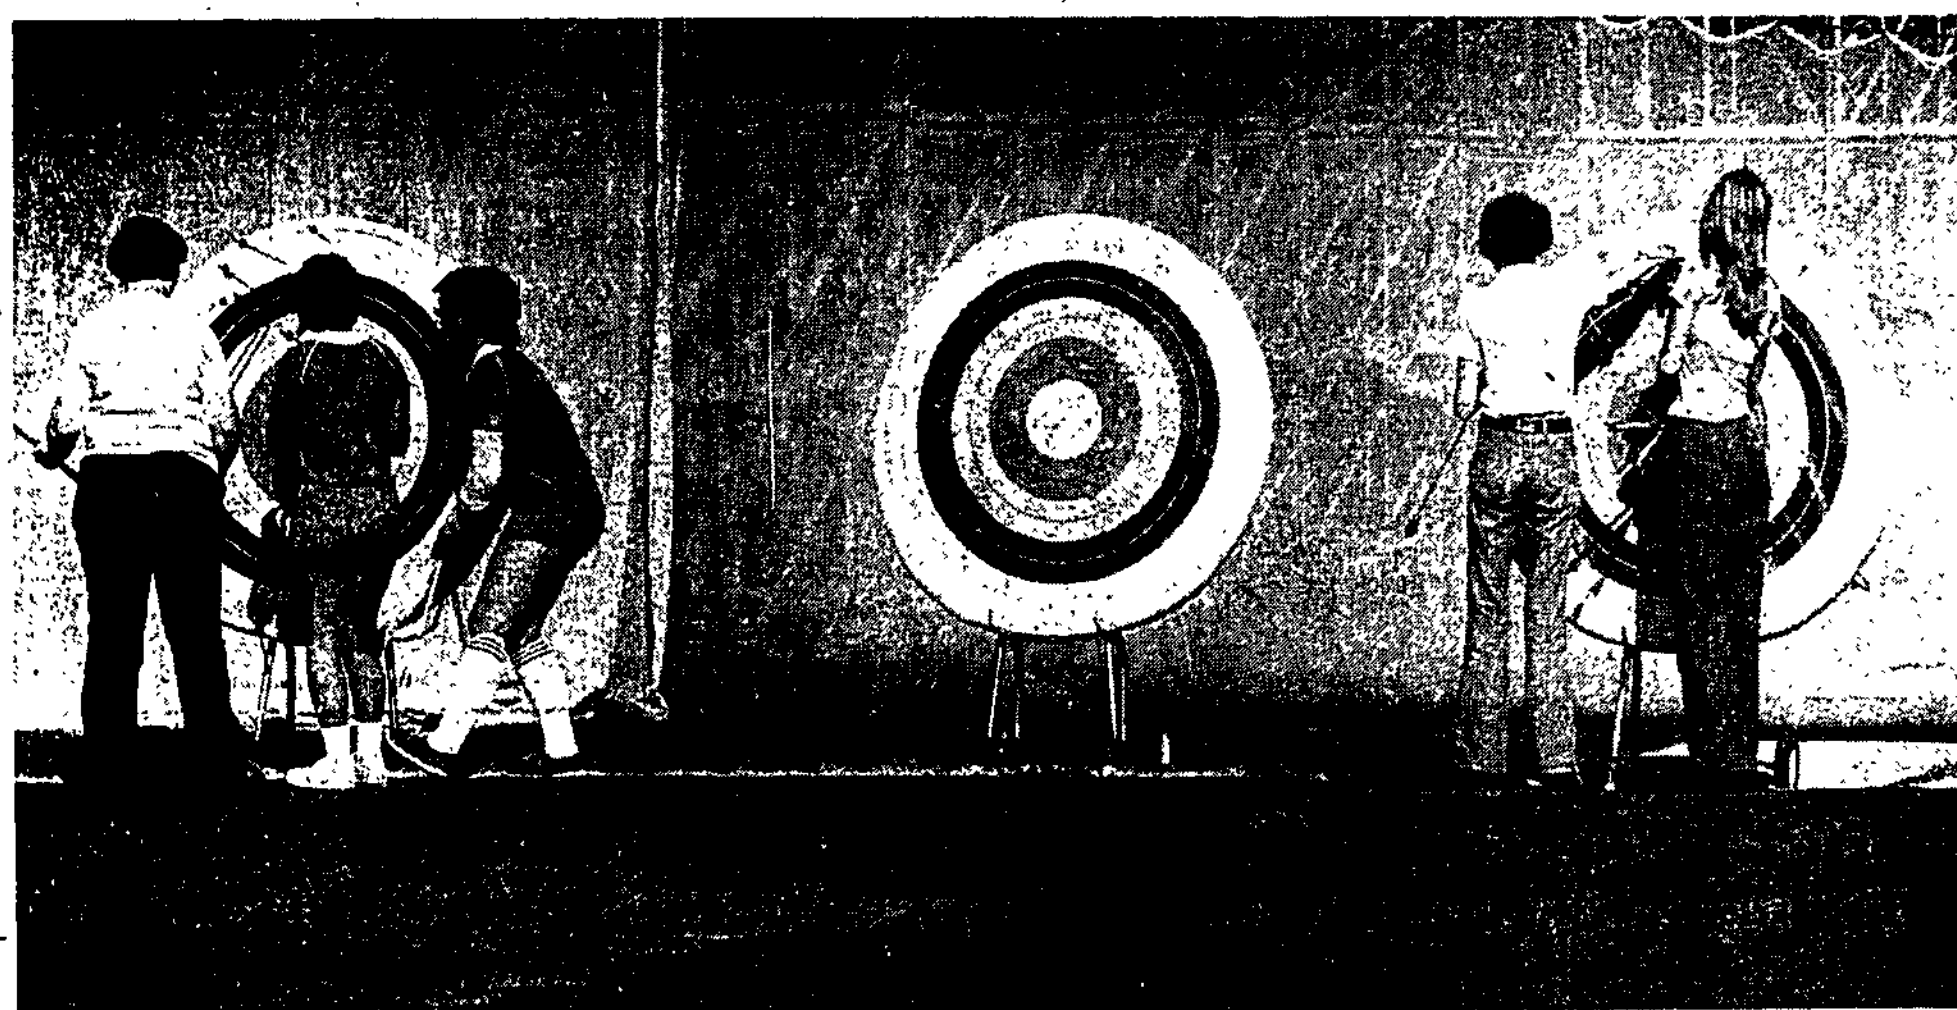

Berg rejected as "erroneous and unlawful" the conflict charges contained in a report ordered by Atty. Gen. William Scott.

IN THE REPORT, former Illinois Supreme Court Justice Marvin F. Burt said Howlett had put himself in a "posture of conflict" by holding a consultant job with Sun Steel while serving as chairman of the state's vehicle recycling board, which deals with scrap iron.

"If a posture of conflict were held to be the standard, all public officials would have been, are or will be, in conflict," Berg ruled.

During the primary campaign, Howlett acknowledged he had held a $15,000-a-year job as consultant to Sun Steel, a Chicago Heights firm, for 15 years. The period of the alleged conflict stretched from Sept. 14, 1973,

Former Wheeling Township committeeman

U.S. to grant Stavros his parole today

by TONI GINETTI

James Stavros resumes life as a free man today for the first time in more than two years.

The former Wheeling political king, whose reign by extortion led to a federal indictment, a guilty plea and four-year prison sentence, was released from a Chicago halfway house to begin parole.

Stavros, 46, had been assigned to the Community Treatment Center, 826 S. Wabash St., Chicago, since July 1 while awaiting parole. During that time Stavros participated in a work release program, returning to the facility in the evenings.

ROBERT THOMPSON, director of the Community Treatment Center, Wednesday said Stavros would be released and placed under the supervision of the U.S. Parole Commission.

Stavros' probation officer, Ron Kunkle, said Wednesday he would meet with the former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman "shortly" to determine how often Stavros will report to him.

"He's listed some employment," Kunkle added, but he said the information was "confidential" and declined to discuss it.

Court documents filed earlier this year in U.S. District Court by Stavros' attorney Thomas Foran cited employment as owner and manager of the J & J Farm near Woodstock as a proposed condition of parole.

STAVROS WILL report to probation authorities until the termination of his four-year sentence imposed in June 1974 by U.S. District Judge Hubert L. Will.

Stavros was the principle target of a 1973 U.S. Justice Dept. investigation into shakedowns of developers in Wheeling. He was indicted Jan. 31, 1974 along with three other village officials on charges of extortion, perjury and income tax evasion.

his conditional release.

U.S. Justice Dept. officials who prosecuted the case against him described Stavros as a hardened strong-arm boss who often threatened bodily harm to developers who did not meet extortion demands.

Court records filed in December by Foran indicate Stavros owes some $17,500 in unpaid taxes for 1969 and 1970.

Hwy. and a boy's green bicycle left near the Palatine High School tennis

4 bikes recovered by cops Wednesday

Recovered shortly after 3 a.m. were a destroyed 26-inch bicycle abandoned in front of 116 S. Northwest Hwy.; a girl's 26-inch bicycle left unattended and unlocked behind 45 N. Northwest courts at 150 E. Wood St., police said.

A fourth bicycle, a 20-inch yellow model was recovered in the K-Mart parking lot at 537 N. Hicks Rd. at 5 a.m., police said.

Police transported the bicycles to their storage garage next door to the police station at 110 S. Washington St.

Swine flu-shot clinic Oct. 27-31

Operation Security Blanket, Palatine's program to participate in the national effort to inoculate all Americans against swine flu, will be Oct. 27-31 at Harper College.

Edwin Tazelaar, director of the Palatine Civil Defense Dept. and organizer of the local inoculation plans, said the program will be open to residents and nonresidents who complete the proper release form. The form is still being prepared by the Cook County Dept. of Health for release soon.

The program will be aimed at persons under 65 who are in generally good health. A monovalent vaccine will be administered. Persons over 65 as well as persons suffering from chronic diseases of the heart, lung or kidneys or diabetics should receive a bivalent vaccine, which will protect against both swine flu and strains of A Victoria 1975 flu.

PALATINE TOWNSHIP will sponsor a bivalent inoculation program for the elderly and chronically ill in mid-October at Gray M. Sanborn School, 101 N. Oak St. Exact dates have yet to be announced.

Tazelaar said hundreds of volunteers are needed for the four-day village program. Inoculations will be administered from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on each day except Oct. 29 when the program will be from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Tentative plans call for volunteers to work in either 6½-hour shifts or 4-hour shifts on each day except Oct. 29 when one 6-hour shift and one 5-hour shift are planned.

Tazelaar said he anticipates a need for at least 220 program volunteers, including doctors and nurses. A letter will be sent to all Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights doctors asking their cooperation in the program. Nurses in the area also are being sought.

HE SAID THE Chicago Medical Society has agreed to supply doctors for the program if not enough volunteers are found.

Palatine paramedics also will be on hand at Harper to administer shots and the village ambulance will be stationed at the school in case of emergencies, he said.

Tazelaar said a special class will be held soon for volunteers wishing to learn how to administer the vaccine with the special gun used in the inoculation. The two-hour class will be at the Buehler YMCA, Northwest Highway and Countryside Drive. No date has been set.

Volunteers are needed as line monitors, greeters, screeners, feeders, clerks, messengers and telephone clerks as well as gun operators, Tazelaar said.

PERSONS WISHING to participate in the program as volunteers should call the village hall at 358-7500 or write to Operation Security Blanket, c/o Palatine Village Hall, 54 S. Brockway St., 60067.

Child care facilities will be provided at Harper for volunteers with small children, Tazelaar said.

Three guns will be used in the program and Tazelaar said the county will supply enough vaccine to inoculate everyone interested.

Persons allergic to chickens or eggs or suffering from a high fever or acute illness should not receive a shot, Tazelaar said.

Taffy apple sale Friday at school

Taffy apples will be sold at Jane Addams School, 1020 Sayles Dr., Palatine, beginning at 3 p.m. Friday. Apples, selling for 25 cents each and five for $1.15, will be sold in the school hall with proceeds being used to benefit the school.

Committee wrapup

Signs banning sprinkling asked

Signs to announce sprinkling bans in Palatine have been proposed by the village board's communications and public relations committee as a means of emergency communications.

Trustee James L. Shaw made the suggestion this week during a discussion of the problem.

Trustee Phillip E. Stern also suggested the village consider at its mid-year budget review session the cost of installing a community events bulletin board at the Palatine railroad station.

Stern also said the Palatine Citizens Council is considering a telephone system to notify residents of village-wide emergencies. The system would begin by the village calling a designated representative of the citizens council who would in turn branch out calls throughout the village.

Stern instructed Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig to write a letter to the citizens council to find out how the program stands.

Crime-fighting brochure asked

The printing of a crime prevention brochure to be available at the village hall and library was recommended by the committee. Stern estimated the cost at less than $400.

Shaw also suggested the village get a cost estimate on using some type of crime prevention logo on the village's 1977 business license sticker. A crime prevention motif had been suggested as the design for the 1977 vehicle sticker but the committee instead selected the Palatine Historical Museum.

Relocate Inverleith pool: panel

The planning, building and zoning committee voted to recommend the village board approve an amendment to the Inverleith apartment plans calling for relocation of the swimming pool site.

At the same time, the committee asked that a public improvement bond, which had expired for improvement work on Quentin Road, be renewed.

A recommendation by Harwig that the village also require the developer to make public improvements along Colfax Street was rejected because it was not part of the original planned-unit development ordinance for the complex.

The entire Colfax Street improvement project, for which Inverleith would have originally been required to pay a part of through a special assessment, was abandoned in 1973.

Glass to rewrite ordinance

The proposed business redevelopment ordinance, which in part calls for the creation of a special commission to oversee development of the central business district, has been referred to Village Atty. Bradley M. Glass for redrafting.

The proposed ordinance has been reviewed by both the plan commission and the zoning board. The purpose of the ordinance is to "provide for the orderly development . . . and to enhance the tax bases" of the downtown area.

The ordinance calls for the creation of a five-member commission appointed by the village president to implement approved developments. Among the agency's powers will be condemnation of land.

In north Arlington Heights

450-unit housing plan revived

by JOE SWICKARD

The long-dormant Three Lakes Country Club housing development, originally proposed by former Wheeling Township political boss James Stavros, has been resurrected.

Revised plans for the 238-acre project built around a proposed semi-private 18-hole golf course were presented to the Arlington Heights plan department this week for study.

The plans, still in a preliminary state, call for about 450 housing units, most of them single-family homes. An eight-acre commercial section is included in plans for the site along the future Lake-Cook Road extension between Arlington Heights and Schafer roads.

THE SITE WAS the subject of village hearings for several years in the late 1960s when Stavros, who pled guilty in 1974 to extortion, tax evasion and perjury charges, and his brother August proposed about 900 housing units. Approval was granted for construction in 1969, but work was never begun.

The new development, designed by planning consultant Rolf C. Campbell of Lake Bluff, will feature houses in the $80,000 to $100,000 price range. The houses reportedly will have a more rural setting than most village subdivisions and most of them, as well as the apartment units, will face the golf course.

The golf course will be 6,650 yards long and will have a par-71 rating. A clubhouse for the course is part of the plans for the development. The semi-private golf course would be the first in the village.

The Arlington Heights Park District is holding referendum Oct. 2 to issue $1.5 million in bonds to finance the construction of a public golf course on the site of the former Nike Base, Central and Wilke roads.

WHEN THE ORIGINAL Three Lakes project was considered by the village, the Stavros brothers owned the land and were to be the developers.

Joe Kesler, village planner, said it was his understanding that the property is still owned by the Stavros family and that the brothers will have a part interest in the new development with other investors.

Stavros and Campbell could not be reached for comment on the new project.

tions," he said. Support has come from other suburban legislators as well, he said.

REGNER SAID he also may proceed with plans to introduce legislation in the General Assembly next spring to change the requirements for creating a new county so it can be done by petition without a referendum of the entire affected county.

"It seems sort of ridiculous to have an election if we get a majority of the registered voters in the affected area to say they want to do it," Regner said.

Jones said Wednesday the petition drive will cost money to provide information for "public awareness" of the matter.

"It's almost like running a political campaign," Jones said. "You need workers and you need money."

Jones said the campaign would be greatly enhanced if local Republican organizations would accept the concept and adopt it as their Republican suburban philosophy.

"I THINK WHAT we have to do for long-range strategy is get the committeemen to agree to it," Jones said.

"The suburban area has to wake up to the fact that with 10 Chicago Democrats on the county board and only 10 votes needed to pass legislation, there is taxation without representation," Jones said. "And Chicago should wake up to the fact that they are paying a lot of money for a Cook County sheriff who has no authority in Chicago."

Jones has cited the imposition of a county gasoline tax and county liquor tax as examples of Chicago Democrats imposing their authority on the predominantly Republican suburbs.

The Palatine village president, taking the proposal one step further, said he would ultimately like to see the 30 suburban townships break down into five counties comprised of six townships each.

Each of the proposed five counties, Jones said, would have populations of at least 500,000, which is larger than many downstate counties.

Jones has suggested naming the counties Lincoln, Kennedy, Stevenson, Dirksen and Eisenhower.

Crusade begins Saturday

The Palatine Crusade of Mercy drive will begin at 12:30 p.m. Saturday when campaign officials and Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones erect the official thermometer sign which will record contributions.

The sign will be put up at Palatine Road and Brockway Street.

The campaign's goal this year is $32,000, 14 per cent more than last year's goal. Funds raised in the campaign will be used to aid 13 community organizations in Palatine and the Northwest suburbs.

America's First Ladies

America's First Ladies, depicted in 12-inch tall dolls, will be featured Wednesday at the Palatine Historical Society meeting. The meeting will be at 8 p.m. at the Palatine Public Library, 500 N. Benton St.

Barbara Friend and members of the Fireside Doll Workshop of Illinois will present the pageant, which will feature the dolls dressed in costumes depicting the period in which each was First Lady.

The club is affiliated with the United Federation of Doll Clubs Inc.

Girl hurt by hit-and-run auto; police seek driver

A hit-and-run driver seriously injured a Schaumburg girl on a bicycle Wednesday night, and then fled to the Northwest Tollway eastbound at speeds of up to 100 m.p.h., with Citizens' Band radio operators and police in pursuit.

Stacy Detwiler, 17, of 1027 Duxbury Ln., Schaumburg, suffered multiple facial injuries with possible fractures when the bicycle she was riding on Springguth Road north of Weathersfield Way was struck by a blue and white pickup truck at 9 p.m. Wednesday. She was listed in fair condition.

The truck fled north up Weathersfield Way to Bode Road, Bode to Barrington Road, and Barrington to the Northwest Tollway, where Citizens' Band radio operators reported his position to police.

Police lost the truck between Arlington Heights Road and the Tri-State Tollway.

Mrs. Detwiler, meanwhile, was transported by Schaumburg firefighters to Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, while police used a name engraved in her high school class ring to track down her parents.

Mrs. Detwiler was reported being X-rayed late Wednesday night at the hospital, while her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Detwiler, were reported enroute to her side at 10:30 p.m.

An eyewitness who lives near the scene of the accident said Mrs. Detwiler's body lay on the side of the street for 10 minutes after the accident before he went outside, discovered the accident and called police and paramedics.

MARGE CHRISTOFFEL, 1720 Pheasant Tr., Mount Prospect, shows off her latest invention — a 15-inch disposable plastic glove used for cleaning up after pets. She calls them "Pet-A-Poos."

Pet-a-Poos— the mit-picky way for pet cleanups

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY
Cleaning up after your pet is all part of the responsibility of owning one, says Marge Christoffel of Mount Prospect.

And Mrs. Christoffel, 1720 Pheasant Tr., has invented what she believes is the perfect answer to keeping America beautiful — a 15-inch disposable brown plastic mitten called a "Pet-a-Poo." Pet-a-Poos help pet owners clean up after their furry friends so as not to irritate neighbors who enjoy taking sidewalk strolls.

Perhaps Mrs. Christoffel's invention is a bit farfetched. Even her husband and five children laughed at the idea at first. "Now they think it's a pretty good idea," she said. "They're all for it."

PET-A-POOS HAVE been on the market for about three months. "They're starting to sell now through word-of-mouth and the fact that several suburbs now have laws," said the 45-year-old Mrs. Christoffel, a beautician by trade.

Several Chicago suburbs have passed "pooper scooper" ordinances requiring owners to clean up their pets' waste or face a fine. Des Plaines is considering a similar law.

Mrs. Christoffel was inspired about a year ago as she was cleaning up after her two dogs with a paper bag in her backyard. "I thought there has to be an easier way to do this," she said. "I refused to use a scoop because it lays around without ever being cleaned. I thought of something disposable."

WITH THE HELP of Vision Wrap Industries Inc., of Palatine and Continental Plastics of Wisconsin, Mrs. Christoffel developed the disposable mitten. "It's brown for the purpose of not being able to distinguish what you're picking up," she said.

A bag of 24 Pet-a-Poos retails for $1.99 and can be purchased at food stores and pet shops. Mrs. Christoffel also has been successful in selling her invention in California, Colorado, Georgia, Idaho, Massachusetts, Michigan, Ohio, Nevada and New Jersey.

"You'd think big business would be a little — you know — with their noses up in the air," Mrs. Christoffel said. "But they're not. They're great."

The Pet-a-Poo is Mrs. Christoffel's first patented invention. She said she will undertake additional creations, "if they come along and if I can think of anything."

Harper panel to submit final report in Lahti case

The final report of a Harper College special committee formed to investigate College Pres. Robert Lahti's alleged violations of college policy will be presented to the Harper Board of Trustees tonight.

Trustee Robert Rausch, the committee chairman, said he was working on the report Wednesday and plans to present it to the full board at its 3 p.m. meeting in the board room of the A building.

The committee was formed in July by Board Pres. Shirley Munson to investigate reports in The Herald and other local newspapers that Lahti misused college vehicles, flew first class in violation of college policy and engaged in unannounced meetings with members of the board.

ANOTHER COMMITTEE that Mrs. Munson formed to investigate possible conflict of interest on Lahti's part regarding his seat on the board of directors of the Bank of Elk Grove, where the college has accounts, reported earlier that Harper followed proper procedure in opening accounts and awarding certificates of deposit.

The board also will discuss whether it will spend approximately $100,000 to dredge the man-made lake on the Harper campus, Algonquin and Roselle roads, Palatine.

The lake was built so the college would be able to retain storm water on campus as required by the Metropolitan Sanitary District, said William J. Mann, vice president of administrative services.

Mann said the lake has been filling with silt because construction work north of the college has caused erosion into a stream that empties into the lake.

Harper's architectural firm, Caudill, Rowlett and Scott, told the board last spring that dredging the lake would cost about $70,000, Mann said, but that estimate did not include the cost of overhead and profit.

Firms have submitted bids for the dredging operation in the $100,000 range, Mann said.

8% hike OKd for teachers in special ed co-op

A one-year contract granting teachers a salary increase of about 8 per cent has been ratified by the governing board of the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization.

Board members for the special education cooperative, which is supported by 10 Northwest suburban school districts, unanimously approved the 1976-77 contract Tuesday, with eight of the member districts voting.

Teachers from the cooperative ratified the contract last week in a 34-1 vote. NSSEO employs 58 teachers.

The average salary increase amounted to 7.85 per cent, said NSSEO Board Pres. Margaret Pageler. Teachers union negotiator Jean Sharrow said, however, teachers received an 8.8 per cent increase.

NSSEODIRECTOR Edward McDonald said the discrepancy between the board and teacher figures occurs because the teachers calculated the raises for continuing teachers, while the board considered the difference between costs last year and this year. The board's figures included new teachers who are lower on the salary schedule, he said.

The contract raises base pay from $9,350 to $9,800. Salaries for teachers at the top of the pay scale increased from $18,536 to $19,032.

This is the first year NSSEO teachers have negotiated a contract with the board. The special education teachers formed a union in 1973, but the board did not recognize the union as the teachers' bargaining agent until after salaries were set for 1975-76.

The teachers' contract includes, among other fringe benefits, a parental leave clause that allows men and women a one-year leave of absence without pay as a result of the birth or adoption of a child.

Mrs. Pageler said the new contract is a "much more rational salary structure." She said the higher salaries at the top levels "makes it more professional and the base is competitive with the member districts."

Extra funds for library vote Sept. 21

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

A decision on a proposal that would give the Mount Prospect Public Library additional funds has been delayed until Sept. 21, following a heated exchange between a village trustee and library board members over library operations.

Trustee Leo Floros Tuesday said he will not vote to give the library additional monies unless he is assured the library will reopen on Saturdays and move into the new facility, 10 S. Emerson St., as planned.

The village board is considering Trustee E. F. Richardson's recommendation to restore $75,000 of $160,000 cut earlier this year from the library's original budget request. The two boards have been moving closer to a compromise since the village in April denied the library's $318,095 budget request.

LIBRARY OFFICIALS have said the $357,100 allocated for library operations in fiscal 1976 is not enough to efficiently run the new facility. The $3.2 million building is about three times larger than the present library at 14 E. Busse Ave.

Trustees Michael H. Minton and Edward B. Rhea Jr. and Mayor Robert D. Teichert support Richardson's proposal while Trustees Richard N. Hendricks and Theodore J. Wattenberg are opposed to giving the library any additional funds.

As a result, Floros' vote is the critical one in reaching a compromise with the library because five votes are needed to amend the village budget.

"I think the library should be open six days a week," Floros said. "I might go along with closing the library for a half day in the morning during the school year. But it's a great disservice to the community to close all day."

THE SATURDAY closing was one of several service cutbacks made by the library board earlier this year in an effort to work within its operating budget. The new facility is scheduled to open in October.

Library Board Pres. John W. A. Parsons called Floros' demands "blackmail" and said he resented the trustee's attempt at "manipulating" the library board.

"When Mr. Floros gets elected to the library board he can make the determinations as to when it will be open and closed," Parsons said. "Unfortunately, he doesn't know a damn thing about running a library. I'll never give up a free and independent library."

Floros Friday offered his own compromise proposal whereby the village would assume the landscaping responsibility for the new library, freeing an estimated $40,000 for library operations. His recommendation, however, was deemed impractical because about $27,000 worth of landscaping work already has been completed.

RICHARDSON suggested the $75,000 come from the village's year-end cash balance estimated at $154,502. He further recommended the library, in the spirit of compromise, should trim its budget by $85,000.

"I am in favor of granting Trustee Richardson's request without any qualifications," Minton said. "I'll be the last to tell you how to operate that building," he told library board members.

Berg clears Howlett in steel case

by United Press International

A Cook County judge Wednesday cleared Michael Howlett, the Democratic candidate for governor, of conflict-of-interest charges concerning his controversial part-time job with Sun Steel Corp.

"My client is vindicated," said Howlett's attorney, Don H. Reuben, after Circuit Court Judge Raymond K. Berg announced his decision.

Berg rejected as "erroneous and unlawful" the conflict charges contained in a report ordered by Atty. Gen. William Scott.

IN THE REPORT, former Illinois Supreme Court Justice Marvin F. Burt said Howlett had put himself in a "posture of conflict" by holding a consultant job with Sun Steel while serving as chairman of the state's vehicle recycling board, which deals with scrap iron.

"If a posture of conflict were held to be the standard, all public officials would have been, are or will be, in conflict," Berg ruled.

During the primary campaign, Howlett acknowledged he had held a $15,000-a-year job as consultant to Sun Steel, a Chicago Heights firm, for 15 years. The period of the alleged conflict stretched from Sept. 14, 1973,

Former Wheeling Township committeeman

U.S. to grant Stavros his parole today

by TONI GINNETTI

James Stavros resumes life as a free man today for the first time in more than two years.

The former Wheeling political king, whose reign by extortion led to a federal indictment, a guilty plea and four-year prison sentence, was released from a Chicago halfway house to begin parole.

Stavros, 46, had been assigned to the Community Treatment Center, 326 S. Wabash St., Chicago, since July 1 while awaiting parole. During that time Stavros participated in a work release program, returning to the facility in the evenings.

ROBERT THOMPSON, director of the Community Treatment Center, Wednesday said Stavros would be released and placed under the supervision of the U.S. Parole Commission.

Stavros' probation officer, Ron Kunke, said Wednesday he would meet with the former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman "shortly" to determine how often Stavros will report to him.

"He's listed some employment," Kunke added, but he said the information was "confidential" and declined to discuss it.

Court documents filed earlier this year in U.S. District Court by Stavros' attorney Thomas Foran cited employment as owner and manager of the J & J Farm near Woodstock as a proposed condition of parole.

STAVROS WILL report to probation authorities until the termination of his four-year sentence imposed in June 1974 by U.S. District Judge Hubert L. Will.

Stavros was the principle target of a 1973 U.S. Justice Dept. investigation into shakedowns of developers in Wheeling. He was indicted Jan. 31, 1974 along with three other village officials on charges of extortion, perjury and income tax evasion.

He served two years of the four-year sentence at the Federal Correctional Institution at Sandstone, Minn. Repeated efforts by Stavros to win parole were fruitless until June 17 when the U.S. Parole Commission agreed to his conditional release.

U.S. Justice Dept. officials who prosecuted the case against him described Stavros as a hardened strong-arm boss who often threatened bodily harm to developers who did not meet

"I'm willing to bet when the time comes to discuss the budget six months from now there'll be a squeeze on and there'll be someone that will say the levy was too low," said Trustee Leo Floros in defense of increasing taxes.

Trustee Michael H. Minton said taxes must be increased to maintain the existing level of services rendered to the village, not necessarily to add services.

"What we're doing (in services) are necessities," Trustee Theodore J. Wattenberg said. "We cannot do without fire, public works, snow removal or police."

"Raising taxes is due to our operations and our work," Teichert told the board. "I'm not ashamed of what it costs people to live in this community for what they get. But every year we hear, 'This is a reasonable levy and I predict we'll be short. We've got to eat some of our own cabbage.'"

RANDY ANDERSON places stone on the bank of Clearwater Lake, Busse and Golf roads, Mount Prospect. The Mount Prospect tification program. The lake is located on a 3.5-acre park.

$3.6 million village tax levy OKd

A $3,667,178 tax levy for 1976 — up 16 per cent from the dollar amount levied in Mount Prospect last year — has been approved by the village board.

Village officials have estimated the 1976 tax rate will increase 13 per cent from $1.38 to $1.56 per $100 assessed valuation.

The 1975 levy was $3,151,561.

Mayor Robert D. Teichert opposed the board's decision to increase taxes in the village. "We constantly talk about biting the bullet and tightening our belt. This is a cop out. This is the second year this board has raised the tax levy. I'd like to see you lower it," he said.

FUNDS COLLECTED from the 1976 tax levy will be used for operating the village during fiscal 1977-78, which begins May 1. The bulk of the tax levy increase will go toward paying village employees the 6 per cent salary hike negotiated earlier this year for raises in 1977.

"I'm willing to bet when the time comes to discuss the budget six months from now there'll be a squeeze on and there'll be someone that will say the levy was too low," said Trustee Leo Floros in defense of increasing taxes.

Trustee Michael H. Minton said taxes must be increased to maintain the existing level of services rendered to the village, not necessarily to add services.

"What we're doing (in services) are necessities," Trustee Theodore J. Wattenberg said. "We cannot do without fire, public works, snow removal or police."

"Raising taxes is due to our operations and our work," Teichert told the board. "I'm not ashamed of what it costs people to live in this community for what they get. But every year we hear, 'This is a reasonable levy and I predict we'll be short. We've got to eat some of our own cabbage.'"

Plans for Lincoln County delayed until '78: Regner

by LUISA GINETTI

The creation of Lincoln County must remain a dream at least until 1978 because of a legal technicality which prevents the question from being placed on the Nov. 2 ballot.

State Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, said Wednesday the deadline has passed for submitting petitions to have the matter on the ballot this year. Regner and Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones last week announced the start of a Lincoln County petition drive saying petitions had to be submitted 72 days before the election. He originally thought the deadline was 30 days before the election.

Regner said he plans to begin printing new petitions today in an effort to get the question on the ballot for the next general election in November 1978.

THE PROPOSAL will call for Cook County voters to approve the secession of the 30 suburban townships from the county to form the proposed Lincoln County. The proposal was first offered six years ago by Jones and former Palatine Trustee Merwin E. Soper as a way of ending domination of the suburban area by Chicago

Democrats on the County Board.

Regner said an estimated 500,000 to 600,000 registered voters in the proposed new county must sign the petition in order to get the question on the ballot.

Since the matter surfaced again last week, Regner said the proposal has received "phenomenal interest."

"There's a tremendous amount of interest in it and I've had at least 200 people call me asking about the petitions," he said. Support has come from other suburban legislators as well, he said.

REGNER SAID he also may proceed with plans to introduce legislation in the General Assembly next spring to change the requirements for creating a new county so it can be done by petition without a referendum of the entire affected county.

"It seems sort of ridiculous to have an election if we get a majority of the registered voters in the affected area to say they want to do it," Regner said.

Jones said Wednesday the petition drive will cost money to provide information for "public awareness" of the matter.

"It's almost like running a political campaign," Jones said. "You need workers and you need money."

Jones said the campaign would be greatly enhanced if local Republican organizations would accept the concept and adopt it as their Republican suburban philosophy.

"I THINK WHAT we have to do for long-range strategy is get the communities to agree to it," Jones said.

"The suburban area has to wake up to the fact that with 10 Chicago Democrats on the county board and only 10 votes needed to pass legislation, there is taxation without representation," Jones said. "And Chicago should wake up to the fact that they are paying a lot of money for a Cook County sheriff who has no authority in Chicago."

Jones has cited the imposition of a county gasoline tax and county liquor tax as examples of Chicago Democrats imposing their authority on the predominantly Republican suburbs.

The Palatine village president, taking the proposal one step further, said he would ultimately like to see the 30 suburban townships break down into five counties comprised of six townships each.

Each of the proposed five counties, Jones said, would have populations of at least 500,000, which is larger than many downstate counties.

Jones has suggested naming the counties Lincoln, Kennedy, Stevenson, Dirksen and Eisenhower.

Dist. 59 OKs teachers' contract

The Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 teachers contract, which calls for an 8.2 per cent salary increase for the 1976-77 school year, has been approved by the board of education in a 4 to 2 vote.

The board approved the contract Tuesday. The 8.2 per cent salary increase includes a 4 per cent hike for each additional year of teaching experience in Dist. 59.

Board members Avis Wold and Judith Zanca voted against the contract saying the salary settlement was "excessive." Paul Kucharski, Charles Canupp, Emil Bahnmoller and Barbara Somogyi voted for the contract.

MRS. WOLD SAID her vote "is not a vote against the teachers. We have a very hard cold fact of reality — a financial crisis. It's a matter of how we're willing to deal with it."

She said settlements like the one passed "eventually could mean we will all lose the war" of the financial problems.

Mrs. Zanca said the settlement, which sets a base pay of $9,900, is "higher than the surrounding districts. I would have liked to see a more reasonable settlement so we will not have to increase class size. We are going to have to live with these figures for every year from now on."

BASE PAY FOR a teacher with a bachelor's degree and no experience increased from $9,500 to $9,900, with the district's top pay at $20,858.

The contract also includes an early retirement plan, an improved maternity leave policy and a revised reduction-in-force clause for releasing tenured teachers because of declining enrollment and financial problems.

District teachers approved the contract Aug. 30 at a meeting of teachers' unions from the North and North-west suburbs.

Dist. 59 fights lower home values

The Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education will support a group of school officials working to block the county assessor's plan to lower assessed valuation of homes.

Arthur Perry, assistant superintendent of planning, said at a board meeting Monday the plan by County Assessor Thomas Tully would be a "considerable blow" to Dist. 59 if passed by the county board of commissioners.

Tully has proposed that the assessment for homes be lowered from 22 per cent of the market value to 16 per cent to curb increasing assessed valuations in the county. A committee of county school officials working through the Illinois Assn. of School Boards is opposing the proposal at hearings Thursday by the county board.

PERRY SAID THE plan would hurt districts dependent upon taxes from single-family homes because it would prevent an increase in assessed valuation. The stabilization of the assessed valuation would prevent those districts from receiving additional revenue from property taxes.

However, Perry said the effect of Tully's plan should be offset partially by an increase in the multiplier, a complex formula that equalizes assessed valuation rates throughout the state.

The proposal could cost Dist. 59 between $400,000 and $450,000 per year in tax revenue, Perry said.

Perry said the tax loss could be expected even though about 60 per cent of the district's tax base comes from business and industry.

HE SAID HE IS concerned because the plan would "shift a greater tax burden" to business and industry, which "could be seen as an invitation to industry to locate elsewhere."

The board also approved maintaining the orchestra program in the elementary schools this year. The board had discussed in June eliminating the string program in the elementary schools because of low student interest.

Last year, about 150 students were enrolled in orchestra compared to about 800 in band. The cost per student was estimated at $200 for the string program.

A citizens' committee studying the orchestra program recommended the program be retained in the elementary schools with recruitment starting in fourth grade. Students will be involved in more group orchestra sessions through the program's changes this year.

Cove plea for free bus before Dist. 21 tonight

A group of parents from the Frenchmen's Cove subdivision in Arlington Heights will appear before the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 Board of Education today to appeal the board's decision to discontinue school bus service from that area to Irving School.

Dist. 21 last year offered free busing to about 10 students on Carriage Way Drive in Frenchmen's Cove to the school, 1250 Radcliffe, Buffalo Grove, because sidewalks in the area were not completed.

The board decided last month, however, to discontinue the bus service because sidewalks connecting the subdivision to the students' main route to school have been finished and it is no longer considered dangerous.

MRS. MARILYN PERRY, 3239 N. Carriage Way Dr., Arlington Heights, said several homes in the subdivision are unhappy with the board's decision because they believe the children's route to the school still is hazardous.

Mrs. Perry said the subdivision's developer constructed a concrete walkway on Daniels Court, opposite Carriage Way Drive, connecting the subdivision to Old Post Road, which leads to the school.

The parents said they believe that no safe route exists between Carriage Way Drive and the walkway, because condominium units and vacant lots are between the two streets, Mrs. Perry said.

Mrs. Perry said the traffic from the condominium units and the construction of new homes in the subdivision create a hazard for children walking through the area. She said snow removal from the area in the winter also might create problems.

Mrs. Perry said the problem involves 11 children from the four homes now completed on Carriage Way Drive, and more families will be moving into the area when another 16 houses are completed this fall.

THE PARENTS WILL ask the board to continue bus service from Frenchmen's Cove, Mrs. Perry said.

She also said they will ask the board members to visit the area.

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill said he was contacted by John Perry, Mrs. Perry's husband, about the situation. "I told him it was as safe as any place around," Gill said.

John Barger, associate superintendent, said the village of Arlington Heights has conducted a traffic study in the Frenchmen's Cove area and "they found no reason for concern."

Arlington Heights Police Sgt. Jack Weber, who headed the traffic study, was not available for comment Tuesday.

Perry, who is acting as spokesman for the parents' group, said he expects about 15 residents to attend the board meeting Thursday.

Girl, 17, injured by hit-and-run car

A hit-and-run driver seriously injured a Schaumburg girl on a bicycle Wednesday night, and then fled to the Northwest Tollway eastbound at speeds of up to 100 m.p.h., with Citizens' Band radio operators and police in pursuit.

Stacy Detwiler, 17, of 1027 Duxbury Ln., Schaumburg, suffered multiple facial injuries with possible fractures when the bicycle she was riding on Springguth Road north of Weathersfield Way was struck by a blue and white pickup truck at 9 p.m. Wednesday. She was listed in fair condition.

The truck fled north up Weathersfield Way to Bode Road, Bode to Barrington Road, and Barrington to the Northwest Tollway, where Citizens' Band radio operators reported his position to police.

Police lost the truck between Arlington Heights Road and the Tri-State Tollway.

Ms. Detwiler, meanwhile, was transported by Schaumburg firefighters to Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, while police used a name engraved in her high school class ring to track down her parents.

Ms. Detwiler was reported being X-rayed late Wednesday night at the hospital, while her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Detwiler, were reported enroute to her side at 10:30 p.m.

An eyewitness who lives near the scene of the accident said Ms. Detwiler's body lay on the side of the street for 10 minutes after the accident before he went outside, discovered the accident and called police and paramedics.

Nipper principal resigns position

Edward Finn, who had been recommended by the River Trails Dist. 26 Board of Education for employment as principal of Nipper School, has decided not to accept the position.

Finn's name was removed from a list of Dist. 26 personnel whose employment was approved at Tuesday night's board meeting.

Finn had already begun working at Nipper, said board member Sylvia Lurie. "He was there for a couple of days. At the last minute he decided he couldn't — or his family couldn't — make the move," she said. The family lives in East Lansing, Mich.

Nipper School, 1101 E. Gregory, Des Plaines is owned by Dist. 26, but the board has recently agreed to lease the school to the Northwest Suburban Special Education Cooperative which is supported by 10 area school districts. Dist. 26 is still in charge of finding a principal for the school.

No stand on Tully proposal

The board voted to take no action on a request by the Illinois Assn. of School Boards to oppose a proposal by Cook County Assessor Thomas Tully calling for the reduction of the rate at which single-family homes are assessed.

Under the proposal, the assessment rate would be cut from 22 per cent to 16 per cent of the fair market value. The cut could lower taxes, but could also lower the amount of money school districts receive.

Mrs. Lurie called Tully's plan "a political numbers game." She said the assessor's office sets fair market value as well as assessment rates, and can set the fair market value at a "real figure" or a "ludicrous figure."

Leora Rosen, board president, said the board has taken no action concerning the proposal because of uncertainty about its advantages and disadvantages to the district.

Although the current assessment is 22 per cent, Mrs. Rosen said according to the Wheeling Township assessor's office, Dist. 26 has been underassessed and has received only a 12 per cent assessment.

"Therefore, if the assessment were changed to 16 per cent and we got 16 per cent, we'd realize a big increase," she said.

Helvie fails to get teaching post

Lynne Helvie, a former Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education member who recently resigned her post, lost a bid for a teaching job in the district.

Mrs. Helvie resigned from the board in August to become eligible for a seventh grade language arts teaching post at Lively Junior High School, 999 Leicester Rd., Elk Grove Village.

The board Tuesday, in a 4-2 vote, rejected the administration's recommendation to hire Mrs. Helvie. Board members who voted against the resolution said they questioned the "propriety" of the request.

BOARD MEMBERS Judith Zanca, Avis Wold, Paul Kucharski and Charles Canupp voted against hiring Mrs. Helvie. Barbara Somogyi and Emil Bahnmaler voted to hire her.

Dist. 59 seat sought by six

Six candidates are seeking a vacant position on the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education. Friday is the last day residents can apply for the seat.

Donald Zommer, 817 Delphia, Elk Grove Village, applied this week for the position vacant because of the resignation of Lynne Helvie.

Candidates who applied earlier include: Sharon Chavoen, 641C Burgundy Ct., Elk Grove Village; Erwin Poklacki, 1221 S. Fernandez, Arlington Heights; Gerald Smiley, 1156 Cheltenham Rd., Elk Grove Village; Lynn Clapper, 1523 S. Kaspar, Arlington Heights; and Saul Cohen, 312 Dorchester Ln., Elk Grove Village.

ZOMMER IS OWNER of Wilkon Co., a metal and wire fabricating firm, and has lived in the district for 12 years. He is married, has four children and is a foster parent for two children.

Zommer is a former president of the Elk Grove Village Jaycees and is active with the Elk Grove Village United Fund Board and the Elk Grove Village Community Services Board.

"I feel my past and current activities and my interest in children make me a good candidate for the position," he said.

Smiley and Poklacki are former Dist. 59 board members. Mrs. Chavoen has served as president of the Marshall School PTC and Mrs. Clapper is a member of the Dist. 59 communications committee.

Cohen said he is seeking the position because he feels his background as a certified public accountant would be a valuable asset to the board.

Lynne Helvie

Mrs. Zanca, board president, said, "I think there was a consensus among some board members about the propriety of a board member being given the position."

Mrs. Wold said she voted against the measure because "my personal feeling is, considering the timing and circumstances of it, there were certain improprieties involved. When a board member is applying for a position, it is often a problem."

"It's a touchy situation, but you're dealing with a person's livelihood," Mrs. Somogyi said. "I feel it might be a form of discrimination because she was a board member."

MRS. HELVIE said she was "extremely disappointed" with the board's action.

The district notified her about their recommendation on the position last Thursday and asked her to report for work Friday, she said.

"Then I was called at 6:30 this morning and told not to report at Lively," she said Wednesday. "I hope the board will reconsider its decision. I really wanted to be back in the classroom with the students."

She said she resigned from the board so she could be considered for the position without creating a conflict of interest.

"I then followed the same procedures anyone else would for employment. I tried for three positions," she said. "I think I have just as much a right for employment as anyone else."

A former teacher, Mrs. Helvie served on the board for 1½ years. She has a bachelor's degree in speech and English and a master's degree in guidance and counseling. She also is working on a doctorate in education administration at Northern Illinois University, DeKalb.

Columbo-DeLuca nuptial plans OKd, delay seen

A judge has approved of the marriage plans of accused killers Patricia Columbo and Frank DeLuca, but prospects of marital bliss for the pair likely will have to wait until January.

Cook County Circuit Court Judge Richard Fitzgerald Wednesday gave permission for Miss Columbo and DeLuca, who are charged with the brutal May 4 slaying of Miss Columbo's Elk Grove Village family, to marry while incarcerated in Cook County Jail.

Robert Iovino, spokesman for the county marriage bureau, however, said Wednesday afternoon a representative of his department probably will not interview county jail inmates wishing to obtain marriage licenses — a prenuptial requirement — until January. Marriage licenses for jail inmates last were issued in August, he said.

MISS COLUMBO and DeLuca, a divorced father of five, reportedly were living together in a Lombard apartment at the time of the murders of Frank Columbo, his wife Mary and 13-year-old son, Michael, at their home on 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

Miss Columbo, 20, was arrested and charged May 15 with the shooting, stabbing and bludgeoning murders. DeLuca 39, and his former wife, Marilyn DeLuca of Addison, were divorced in DuPage County Circuit Court, May 28. DeLuca was arrested for the slayings July 17.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca are being held in lieu of $250,000 bond each.

While pretrial procedures were under way Sept. 1, DeLuca reportedly sent a letter to Fitzgerald, which read:

"MY WOMAN IS locked up in Division 3 (the Cook County Jail women's center) and we would like very much to be married. I have contacted a social worker for her help, and she told me I would have to obtain your permission before we could be married."

In a letter addressed to Cook County Jail Supt. Robert E. Glotz, Fitzgerald said he did not think the wedding would interfere with the case against DeLuca and Miss Columbo.

Fitzgerald also asked Glotz to interview the prisoners and make arrangements for blood tests and marriage license applications.

After letters of permission are exchanged among judicial, county clerk and jail officials, inmates wishing to be married are interviewed by a representative of the county marriage bureau, Iovino said.

Hersey band invited to Orange Bowl

The Hersey High School band has been invited to march in the Orange Bowl parade in Miami, Fla., on New Year's Eve and also will perform Sunday at the Chicago Bears' season opener against the Detroit Lions.

The Arlington Heights high school band took a first-place trophy for the sixth consecutive year in the Chicago Lakefront Water Festival parade in August, competing against 26 bands.

Earlier this year, the band was selected as the State of Illinois Bicentennial Band and performed in Washington D.C. The band also marched in the Tournament of Roses parade this year and represented Illinois in the Cotton Bowl parade in Dallas, Tex., in 1973.

The band is directed by Donald Caneva and his assistant Jim Rich.

Education in rules of road best solution: official

Ignorance blamed in deaths of many bicycle riders

by DIANE MERMIGAS

What you don't know can hurt you. It can even kill you.

An unwillingness to know or follow the proper rules of the road killed about 800 bicyclists across the country last year and injured about 40,000, at least half of them children.

The tangle of cars and bikes on our nation's highways troubles safety council, police, motor and bicycle club officials, because they know there is a simple enough solution to what is too often a tragic problem.

THE SOLUTION, they say, is a combination of education and respect.

"The motorist and the bicyclist have an obligation to each other. They should both know the rules of the road. They should both follow those rules stringently, and they should respect each other's equal right to the road," said Harold E. Heldreth, bicycle safety coordinator for the National Safety Council.

Heldreth says there is "a definite hostility on the roads" between motorists and bicyclists. Children on bikes tend to weave in and out of cars, ride against traffic and disobey traffic signals.

Motorists often harass bicyclists who may be adhering to the rules of the road, attempting to side-swipe them or drive them off the road.

"A MASS EDUCATION program required across the country would be the best solution, but that's almost impossible to expect," he said.

"Enough bicycle safety programs must be offered on the local level for children and enough drivers must be made aware of bicyclists' rights so that the situation can be improved," Heldreth said.

The National Safety Council in Chicago offers a six-hour bicycle education program through Chicago area elementary schools beginning with the second grade.

The council also offers a course for teen-agers who are interested in teaching young children about bicycle safety.

"THERE ARE MORE than 100 million bicyclists in the country today. More people are riding bikes for recreation and transportation, and we need to offer them instruction at an early age so they have a respect for the road," Heldreth said.

Safety experts like Heldreth agree that it's often the middle-aged motorist, who no longer rides a bike, who is the most difficult person to "get through to."

"There is no program anywhere in the country that is aimed at educating the motorist," said Jim Kashmier, district bikeway coordinator for the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

Kashmier said accidents between cars and bikes most often occur when the motorist passes a cyclist and then makes an immediate right hand turn without giving the biker enough warning; when motorists backing out of driveways do not see bikes coming into their path; and when motorists and bicyclists do not yield the right-of-way to each other at intersections.

"THERE IS A VERY bad attitude in this country among motorists who view the bike as a toy, not as a vehicle that has equal rights on the road. The problem is compounded by the fact that many bicyclists don't bother to follow the proper rules of the road and gain the respect of the motorist," he said.

A bill signed by Gov. Daniel Walker in September 1975 gives bicyclists equal rights to the roadways, but requires them to abide by the same rules as motorists.

Bicyclists can and are being ticketed for violating rules of the road, Kashmier said.

"But, not all roads are constructed for use by bicycles. Bicyclists should look for a four-lane road with a good shoulder or bike lane to ride on. The lanes should be wide enough for them and a car, the speed limit should be low enough and the truck traffic at a minimum," he said.

KASHMIER HAS BEEN helping to coordinate a network of bike routes and paths throughout the Northwest suburbs and other areas of the state. State grants are being provided to communities which are willing to develop bicycle paths and routes.

The combination of proper bikeways and education "will bring down the accident rate," said Ernest Dettmar, the Mount Prospect Police Department's "Officer Friendly" and coordinator of the bicycle safety program.

The police department was one of the first in Illinois two years ago to begin a major bicycle education and enforcement program.

The department sponsors regular bike rodeos to test children's proficiency in bike riding, programs to teach them about bike safety and rules, and even a traffic court where violators ticketed for running stop signs or riding against traffic are sentenced to attend bicycle school or to write an essay on bike safety.

THE RESULT? There were 23 bike-car accidents reported in Mount Prospect in 1975 compared to 37 accidents in 1974. Only four such accidents have been reported so far this year, Dettmar said.

Officials of the League of American Wheelmen, a national organization based in Palatine that promotes bicycling safety, agree that a combination of education and providing proper bike routes has curbed bicycle-car accidents over the past several years.

"The programs, the bike routes and the education all help. But all it really takes is a little common sense and courtesy on the road to avoid some of these accidents," said Phyllis Harmon, a club official.

"If people don't start recognizing the problems, it's going to be their children or even themselves someday who are victims of a senseless accident. And then it's going to be too late," she said.

Music, TLC do wonders for tomatoes

Don Francisco's cherry tomato plants are driving him right up the wall. Up his garage wall, that is, to pick ripe tomatoes off the 11-foot tall vines that are growing along his garage at 233 S. Bothwell St., Palatine.

Most cherry tomato plants grow to only three or four feet high, so Francisco isn't sure why his are so tall. But he has a hunch it has something to do with the way he treats them.

"Perhaps they just enjoy the wonderful atmosphere," he said. Francisco said he plays soft music and television for the tomato plants, in addition to thinking "nice thoughts about them."

THE PLANTS HAVE grown so large that he now has them tied to a rack attached to his garage. They yield about 10 ripe tomatoes per day, Francisco said.

Francisco said the fact that he planted the seeds on St. Valentine's Day might also have something to do with the way they have grown.

"I planted them with a lot of love," he said.

He transplanted the plants from their indoor home, a plastic tray, to the ground along the front of his garage Memorial Day.

He admits that he did test the soil and apply some compost. But Francisco said he used no other fertilizer or chemicals, just "the wonderful atmosphere."

THE PLANTS ALMOST died when he went on vacation the first week in April, and he was ready to throw them out. But when he watered them, Francisco said, the cherry tomato plants were revived. And they've been growing like crazy ever since.

"They're just from some seeds I picked up in a food store," Francisco said. "I just wanted to put some in a hanging basket on the patio."

Francisco, 35 and single, is quality control director for Chicago Show Printing, Morton Grove. He grew up on a farm, a fact that might have something to do with his "green thumb." A garden of normal-sized tomatoes and other vegetables grows along another wall of the garage.

There is no listing for the tallest cherry tomato plant in the Guinness Book of World Records, but Francisco is considering submitting his plants for the honor.

SOFT MUSIC, nice thoughts and an occasional television show are given the credit for Don Francisco's tall tomato plants. The plants nearly died in April when Francisco, a Palatine resident, left them for a week to go fishing, but lots of tender loving care brought them back to life. Francisco hopes to have the 11-foot high plants listed in the Guinness Book of Records.

Harper panel to submit final report in Lahti case

The final report of a Harper College special committee formed to investigate College Pres. Robert Lahti's alleged violations of college policy will be presented to the Harper Board of Trustees tonight.

Trustee Robert Rausch, the committee chairman, said he was working on the report Wednesday and plans to present it to the full board at its 8 p.m. meeting in the board room of the A building.

The committee was formed in July by Board Pres. Shirley Munson to investigate reports in The Herald and other local newspapers that Lahti misused college vehicles, flew first class in violation of college policy and engaged in unannounced meetings with members of the board.

ANOTHER COMMITTEE that Mrs. Munson formed to investigate possible conflict of interest on Lahti's part regarding his seat on the board of directors of the Bank of Elk Grove, where the college has accounts, reported earlier that Harper followed proper procedure in opening accounts and awarding certificates of deposit.

The board also will discuss whether it will spend approximately $100,000 to dredge the man-made lake on the Harper campus, Algonquin and Roselle roads, Palatine.

The lake was built so the college would be able to retain storm water on campus as required by the Metropolitan Sanitary District, said William J. Mann, vice president of administrative services.

Mann said the Lake has been filling with silt because construction work north of the college has caused erosion into a stream the temples into the lake.

Harper's architectural firm, Caudill, Rowlett and Scott, told the board last spring that dredging the lake would cost about $70,000, Mann said, but that estimate did not include the cost of overhead and profit.

Firms have submitted bids for the dredging operation in the $100,000 range, Mann said.
